

PRUDENTIUS

WITH AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION BY

H. J. THOMSON, D.LITT.

LATE PROFESSOR OF LATIN IN THE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF NORTH WALES, BANGOR

IN TWO VOLUMES

I

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
MCMXLIX

Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	vii
PRAEFATIO	2
LIBER CATHMERINON	6
APOTHEOSIS	116
HAMARTIGENIA	200
PSYCHOMACHIA	274
CONTRA ORATIONEM SYMMACHI, LIBER I	344

INTRODUCTION

AURELIUS PRUDENTIUS CLEMENS, like a number of eminent Latin writers of the classical age, was born in Spain; unlike them, although he visited Rome, he appears to have lived and worked in his native land.^a In the prefatory verses which, in his fifty-seventh year, he wrote for an edition of his poems,^b he indicates (at line 24) that he was born in the consulship of Salia, that is, in the year 348. He does not name his birth-place, and there is no conclusive evidence to determine it; but his own words associate his life with the north-eastern part of Spain, and on such evidence as we have it seems most likely that he was born at Caesaraugusta (Saragossa).^c From the fact that, while he laments an ill-spent youth, he does not accuse himself of paganism or speak of having been converted, it is inferred that his parents were Christians. The preface goes on to tell that after receiving the usual literary and rhetorical education (lines 7-10) he became a barrister (13-15) and then an adminis-

^a Cf. Perist. ii, 537-548; for the visit to Rome, Perist. ix, xi, xii; its date must have been before 405, the year of the preface to the collected poems, but after 400, since he describes the Basilica of St. Paul, evidently as completed.

^b Lines 34 ff. profess to be a programme of work still to be done, as if the preface had been written first; but this must surely be a literary artifice.

^c The question is discussed by Bergman in the prolegomena to his edition, pp. ix, x.

INTRODUCTION

trator (16-18); and his career was crowned with an honour to which he refers (19-21) in terms somewhat vague, but probably meaning that he received from the emperor the rank of "comes primi ordinis," which may have entailed special duties in the province or have been merely titular.^a The date and place of his death are unknown.

Prudentius, then, is an example of the industrious public servant who is also a man of letters; and although in much of his writing he handled matters of Christian doctrine, it is not as a theologian that we must think of him, but as a man of letters and a whole-hearted Roman who is enthusiastic for the faith. Fervent Christian as he is, at a time when the hold of Christianity on the cultivated classes seems to have been very insecure, when the spirit of literature, even in a nominal Christian like Ausonius, is still essentially pagan, and when serious Christians are tending to separate themselves from the world, he has not cut himself off from the old culture nor from the patriotism of the citizen. He is steeped in the work of the classical Latin poets and suffers no qualms of conscience over his love for them, such as afflicted some of the Fathers of the Church. He regards the pagan literature and art not as things to be rejected but as part of the inheritance into which Christian Rome enters; and in appropriating Latin poetic forms, lyric, epic, didactic, he is willing to show the world that the subject-matter of the new faith can fill the ancient moulds. At times, it is true, his enthusiasm for ^a The word militia (19) was used with reference to civil as well as to military service. For the "comites" see J. S. Reid in the Cambridge Medieval History, I, pp. 46-48.

INTRODUCTION

the old masters carries him too far. Discordia, who in Virgil is the personification of strife, naturally enough becomes Heresy and may still wear her "scissa palla," and Fides is easily recognised as the Catholic Faith; Phlegethon and Styx and Acheron had, no doubt, in the educated circles for which Prudentius wrote, become harmless names with only literary associations; but we feel that the limit has been passed when Jupiter's epithet "Tonans" is used to designate the Christians' God. Still, it is as a poet in whom is embodied a reconciliation between the new faith and the old culture, and in whom Christian thought claims rank in the world of letters, that Prudentius is historically important. A similar quality is seen in his thoughts of Rome and the empire; he is intensely Roman and patriotic, but there is a new character in his patriotism. The Christian poet, far from denying Rome's divine mission, sees farther into its meaning than Virgil did. The purpose which he discerns in Roman history from Aeneas onwards was not merely to unite the world in peace and good government, but to prepare it for the coming of Christ and for the spiritual empire in which Rome is to attain her greatest glory.^a The change from paganism to Christianity is not a breach with the past, but only the last stage of a development which reached its ideal completion when the far-off successor of Aeneas bowed the knee to Christ;^b and for Prudentius, as for Aeneas in Virgil, Tiber is still a sacred stream, not, however, because it is associated with a river-

^a Cf. Aeneid, VI, 847-853; Contra Symm. I, 287-290, 587-590; II, 583 ff.; Perist. II, 425 ff.

^b Apoth. 446-8.

INTRODUCTION

god, but because it flows through Christ's earthly capital and past the tombs of Christian martyrs.^a

When Prudentius wrote, the Church had triumphed; but even at the end of the fourth century paganism, though disestablished and officially banned, was not dead,^b and there were dangers of heresy within. In both respects he appears as a defender of the faith. The two poems entitled Apotheosis and Hamartigenia are indeed concerned with the refutation of false doctrine, but even more with the exposition of the true; in the former case with reference to the divine nature of Christ, in the latter to the question of evil. Modern writers have remarked that the particular heresies which Prudentius chooses to attack had for the most part, at any rate in these precise forms, become by his time matters of the past. The explanation is probably to be found in the fact that he is not really a theological controversialist but a poet, and more at home in setting forth the positive faith of the Catholic Church with all the aids of his poetry and rhetoric. Had his interest lain primarily in theology, he would scarcely have begun the Apotheosis with the statement that he will only deal with a few out of many heretical doctrines, for fear of sullyng his orthodox tongue. His concern is rather to present the literary world with a poetical treatment of Christian truth, following the long tradition of didactic poetry, and he is content to take a background from past writings of professed theologians. In the two books against Symmachus we have an echo of what has been called "the last great battle for the official recognition of paganism."^a It arose out of the stoppage of state payments for the upkeep of old priesthoods and their rites, and the removal of the statue and altar of Victory which had stood for centuries in the senate-house at Rome. An appeal for restoration and toleration was presented to Valentinian II on behalf of the senate, whose pagan members had carried a motion to that effect, by Quintus Aurelius Symmachus, prefect of the city and the most admired orator of the day, of whose ability and eloquence Prudentius speaks with the greatest respect; but the intervention of Ambrose, bishop of Milan, secured its rejection. This was in 384, but it was neither the first nor the last attempt of the persistent pagan party, and the reign of Eugenius gave them a brief success, soon to be reversed by Theodosius' defeat of the usurper in 394. It was not till the early years of the new century that Prudentius wrote his Contra Orationem Symmachi; in Book II the reigning emperors are Honorius and Arcadius,^b the youthful sons of Theodosius, who had succeeded him in 395, and line 720 refers to the battle of Pollentia, which was fought in 402 or 403. Symmachus, it seems, died about this time. If we ask why at so late a date Prudentius composed this reply to a document of 384 and in it speaks of Symmachus as if he were still alive, two facts may provide the answer. First, in spite of imperial edicts against paganism many men in the upper classes were still unwilling to abandon their old ideas, and the emperor's efforts were often met, as Dill remarks, with a dead weight of official resistance or negligence. Secondly, Symmachus, after ceasing to be prefect of the city, had published his appeal of 384^a along with his other official relationes, and though dead yet spoke powerfully to a world which regarded him with immense admiration and was still highly susceptible to his influence. It is the posthumous appeal of his written words which Prudentius represents Honorius and Arcadius as rejecting. He is careful to define his own attitude towards the book:^b it has deservedly a great reputation, which he cannot hope to diminish; his own aim is purely defensive. He is, then, putting forth a defence of Christianity in verse which he hopes will appeal to the cultivated readers who admire the prose of Symmachus.

^a Aeneid, VIII, 72; Perist. xii, 29-30.

^b See Dill, Book I, ch. ii. (Particulars of works which are referred to will be found in the Select Bibliography, pp. xvi-xvii.)

INTRODUCTION

^a Accounts of it are given in Dill, l.c., Glover, pp. 269 ff., Boissier, vol. II, pp. 231-291, Camb. Med. Hist., I, 114 ff.

^b Cf. lines 7 ff.

INTRODUCTION

These works, however, represent only half, or less than half, of Prudentius' production. Apart from them, he was a pioneer in the creation of a Christian literature, and has the credit of originating new types of Christian poetry, the literary hymn, the moral allegory, and what has been called the Christian ballad. Hymns for the use of the Church had been written by Ambrose, but they differ in character from the long and elaborate odes of the Liber

^a This is Relatio III, on pp. 280–283 of Seeck's edition of Symmachus (Berlin, 1883). It had also been published by Ambrose (from the official copy) along with his reply (Migne's Patrologia Latina, vol. XVI, 966–982). In the text of Symmachus it bears the heading "D(omino) N(ostro) Theodosio," but we know from Ambrose that the official copy was formally addressed to Valentinian, Theodosius, and Arcadius (Seeck, pp. xvi f.). For the date of the death of Symmachus see Seeck, pp. lxxii f.

^b I, 643 ff.

INTRODUCTION

Cathemerinon. Portions, indeed, of some of these have been included in the Roman Breviary and, in translations, in modern hymnals,^a but their real nature is not understood if we think of them as intended for congregational singing. They are literary odes in which the mythology of the classical ode is replaced by stories from the Scriptures. It is in this work that Prudentius is most attractive. The hymns are, as Mr. Raby says, his happiest creation, and they furnish his strongest claim to be called a poet. The Psychomachia, with its personifications of Virtues and Vices and its epic account of single combats between their leaders, develops a genuine Roman tendency to personify abstract ideas. It was the most popular of the poet's works during the middle ages and the ultimate inspiration of much moral allegory and of much religious and ecclesiastical art.^b In the Peristephanon Liber his devotion to the martyrs combines with his love of telling a story. As one might expect, Spanish martyrs figure largely in the book. It has for us less interest as poetry than as historical evidence of the cult of the martyrs and the place it held in the Christian life of the time. An excess of rhetoric makes the description of these pieces as "ballads" less appropriate than it might have been.^c

Apart from the other poems stands the collection

^a E.g. "Corde natus ex Parentis" and J. M. Neale's version in corresponding metre, "Of the Father's love begotten", from Cath. ix.

^b See the edition by M. Lavarenne, pp. 58 ff. He refers to two works by E. Mâle, L'art religieux au XIII^e siècle en France (Paris, 1910) and L'art religieux à la fin du moyen âge (Paris, 1908).

^c On the Peristephanon see especially Raby, pp. 50-57.

INTRODUCTION

of four-line stanzas under the heading of Dittochæon or (in Bergman's edition) Tituli Historiarum, which are inscriptions intended for, or suggested by, a series of pictures or mosaics in a church, representing scenes from the Old and New Testaments in equal numbers. The MSS. are confused as to the title, and some have none. It is possible, as Bergman thinks, that these quatrains were not included by Prudentius himself when he published his works; they are not contained in the two oldest MSS.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

Prudentius was much read in the middle ages, and the surviving MSS. number more than three hundred; a much smaller number, however, contain the complete works. Two are of special interest on account of their age, one having been written in the sixth century, the other in the seventh; some others on account of their illustrations.^a The first systematic survey of all the material was made by J. Bergman, whose edition of the text appeared in 1926. For this he selected the following twelve MSS.^b :—

A (6th century) in the National Library at Paris (Lat. 8084). It now contains Cath., Apoth., Ham., Psych., Perist. I–V, 142.

C (9th century) in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (223).

^a H. Woodruff, The Illustrated MSS. of Prudentius, Cambridge, Mass., 1930.

^b Three others, which contain the Psychomachia alone or almost alone, are quoted in the apparatus criticus to that poem.

INTRODUCTION

- D* (10th century) in the Dean and Chapter library of Durham Cathedral (B 4. 9).
B (7th century) in the Ambrosian Library at Milan (D 36 sup.). This MS. is available only for parts of the poems; the missing portions have been supplied by a hand of the 9th or 10th century.
V (early 10th century) in the Vatican Library (Reg. 321).
N (10th century) in the National Library at Paris (8305).
P (early 10th century) in the National Library at Paris (8086). It lacks Ham. 454 to the end, and Psych. 1-811.
E (early 10th century) in the University Library at Leyden (Burm. Q 3).
M (9th century), in the monastery library of Monte Cassino (374).
O (10th century) in the library of Oriel College, Oxford (3). It lacks Apoth., Ham. and Psych.
S (9th or early 10th century) in the monastery library of St. Gall (136).
U (late 9th century) in the City Library at Berne (264). It now has considerable gaps.

These MSS. Bergman divides into two classes (Class A including MSS. A to N, Class B the others), mainly on the grounds that they differ in the order of the poems and in the presence or absence of certain interpolated lines; and each class is subdivided into two families.^a His text is based on the Bergman's methods are criticised by G. Meyer in Philologus 87 (1932), pp. 249 ff. and 332 ff., F. Klingner in Gnomon 6 (1930), pp. 39 ff.

INTRODUCTION

MSS. of class A, particularly on the two oldest wherever they are available. Where the present edition differs from his, the divergence is indicated. At a number of places, of which the most striking is Cath. 10, 9-16, the 9th and 10th century MSS. differ radically from that of the 6th, and Bergman adopts the view that interpolation has occurred. On the other hand, it has been argued that the character of the later text at some, at least, of these places is more consistent with the view that it represents a revised edition from the hand of Prudentius himself. In the matter of orthography Bergman in general follows the two oldest MSS. Particularly in the case of Greek words I have reverted to the practice of his predecessors, printing, for instance sophia, not sofia, and Phlegethon, not Flegeton. I have also at a few places adopted a different punctuation.

SELECT BIBLIOGRAPHY

EDITIONS

- Arevalo (1788) in Migne's Patrologia Latina, vols. 59 60 (Paris, 1847).
Dressel, Leipzig, 1860.
Bergman, in the Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum, vol. 61, Vienna, 1926.
Lavarenne, Psychomachie, texte, traduction, commentaire, avec une introduction historique, Paris 1933.

GENERAL

- A. Puech, Prudence, Étude sur la poésie latine chrétienne au IV^e siècle, Paris, 1888.

INTRODUCTION

- E. K. Rand, Prudentius and Christian Humanism, Transactions of the American Philological Association, vol. 51, Cleveland, Ohio, 1920.
- T. R. Glover, Life and Letters in the Fourth Century, Cambridge, 1901.
- F. J. E. Raby, Christian Latin Poetry, Oxford, 1927.
- P. de Labriolle, Histoire de la littérature latine chrétienne, 3rd edition, Paris, 1947.
- G. Boissier, La Fin du Paganisme, Paris, 1891.
- S. Dill, Roman Society in the last Century of the Western Empire, 2nd edition, London, 1899.
- The Cambridge Medieval History*, vol. I, ch. IV.

THE POEMS OF PRUDENTIUS

AURELII PRUDENTII CLEMENTIS

PRAEFATIO

PER quinquennia iam decem, ni fallor, fuimus; septimus insuper annum cardo rotat, dum fruimur sole volubili.
instat terminus, et diem ^τ vicinum senio iam Deus adplicat. 5 quid nos utile tanti spatio temporis egimus?
aetas prima crepantibus flevit sub ferulis. mox docuit toga infectum vitiis falsa loqui, non sine crimine.
tum lasciva protervitas 10 et luxus petulans (heu pudet ac piget!) foedavit iuvenem nequitiae sordibus ac luto.
exim iurgia turbidos
armarunt animos, et male pertinax vincendi studium subiacuit casibus asperis. 15 bis legum moderamine frenos nobilium reximus urbium, ius civile bonis reddidimus, terruimus reos.
tandem militiae gradu
evectum pietas principis extulit 20 adsumptum propius stare iubens ordine proximo.

THE POEMS OF AURELIUS PRUDENTIUS CLEMENS

PREFACE

FULL fifty years, if I err not, have I lived, and beyond that it is the seventh time that the heaven is wheeling the year and I have the benefit of the circling sun. The end is close upon me, and by now what God is adding to my days is on the border of old age. What profitable thing have I done in all this length of time? My first years wept under the crack of the rod; after that the toga corrupted me and taught me to utter sinful falsehoods; ^a then lewd sauciness and wanton indulgence, to my shame and sorrow now, marred my youth with the filthy dirt of wickedness. Next disputings armed my vehement spirit, and a perversely stubborn passion for victory laid itself open to cruel falls. Twice with the law's controlling curb I governed famed cities, rendering civil justice to good men and striking terror into evil-doers. Finally His Grace the Emperor advanced me in his service and raised me up, attaching me closer to him and bidding me stand in the ^a I.e. after assuming the toga virilis he attended a school of rhetoric, where he would practise the art of making the best of a case.

PRUDENTIUS

haec dum vita volans agit, inrepsit subito canities seni, oblitum veteris me Saliae consulis arguens, sub quo prima dies mihi 25 quam multas hiemes volverit, et rosas pratis post glaciem reddiderit, nix capitis probat.
numquid talia proderunt carnis post obitum vel bona vel mala 29 cum iam, quidquid id est quod fueram, mors aboleverit?
dicendum mihi: " quisquis es, mundum, quem coluit, mens tua perdidit.
 non sunt illa Dei, quae studuit, cuius habebis."
atqui fine sub ultimo peccatrix anima stultitiam exuat, 35
 saltem voce Deum concelebret, si meritis nequit.
hymnis continuet dies,
 nec nox ulla vacet quin Dominum canat;
 pugnet contra hereses, catholicam discutiat fidem, conculcet sacra gentium, 40
 labem, Roma, tuis inferat idolis, carmen martyribus devoveat, laudet apostolos.
haec dum scribo vel eloquor, vinclis o utinam corporis emicem liber, quo tulerit lingua sono mobilis ultimo! 45

PREFACE

nearest rank.^a While fleeting life thus busied itself, of a sudden the hoar of age has stolen upon me, convicting me of having forgotten Salia's consulship of long ago. Under him my time began, and how many winters it has seen roll on, how often seen the roses given back to the meadows after the frost, the snow on my head proves. Will such things, good or bad, be of any profit after my flesh is dead, when death shall have wiped out all that I was? It must be said to me: "Whosoever thou art, thy soul hath lost the world it cherished; not to God, who will claim thee as His, belong the things for which it was zealous." Yet as my last end draws near let my sinning soul put off her folly. With voice at least let her honour God, if with good deeds she cannot. With hymns let her link the days together, and no night pass without singing of her Lord. Let her fight against heresies, expound the Catholic faith, trample on the rites of the heathen, strike down thy idols, O Rome, devote song to the martyrs, and praise the apostles. And while I write or speak of these themes, O may I fly forth in freedom from the bonds of the body, to the place whither my busy tongue's last word shall tend.

^a See Introduction, p. viii.

LIBER CATHEMERINON

I

HYMNUS AD GALLI CANTUM

ALES diei nuntius
lucem propinquam praecinit ;
nos excitator mentium
iam Christus ad vitam vocat.
“ auferte ” clamat “ lectulos 5 aegros, soporos, desides ;
castique, recti ac sobrii vigilate, iam sum proximus.”
post solis ortum fulgidi serum est cubile spernere, 10 ni parte noctis addita tempus labori adieceris.
vox ista qua strepunt aves stantes sub ipso culmine, paulo ante quam lux emicet, 15
nostri figura est iudicis.
tectos tenebris horridis stratisque opertos segnibus suadet quietem linquere iam iamque ventura die, 20 ut, cum coruscis flatibus aurora caelum sparserit, omnes labore exercitos
confirmet ad spem fuminis.

THE DAILY ROUND

I

A HYMN FOR COCK-CROW

THE bird that heralds day forewarns that dawn is at hand; now Christ, the awakener of our souls, calls us to life. "Away," He cries, "with beds that belong to sickness, sleep, and sloth. Be pure and upright and sober and awake, for now I am very near." It is late to spurn the couch after the shining sun is up, unless by adding a part of the night thou hast given more hours to toil. The loud chirping of the birds perched under the very roof, a little while before the light breaks forth, is a symbol of our Judge. As we lie closed in by foul darkness, buried under the blankets of sloth, He bids us leave repose behind, for day is on the point of coming; that when dawn besprinkles the sky with her shimmering breath she may make us all, who were spent with toil, strong to embrace the hope of light. This

PRUDENTIUS

hic somnus ad tempus datus est forma mortis perpetis: peccata, ceu nox horrida, cogunt iacere ac stertere.	25
sed vox ab alto culmine Christi docentis praemonet adesse iam lucem prope, ne mens sopori serviat,	30
ne somnus usque ad terminos vitae socordis opprimat pectus sepultum crimine et lucis oblitum suae.	35
ferunt vagantes daemonas laetos tenebris noctium gallo canente exterritos sparsim timere et cedere.	40 invisa nam vicinitas lucis, salutis, numinis, rupto tenebrarum situ noctis fugat satellites.
hoc esse signum praescii norunt repromissae spei, qua nos soporis liberi speramus adventum Dei.	45
quae vis sit huius alitis, Salvator ostendit Petro, ter antequam gallus canat sese negandum praedicans.	50 fit namque peccatum prius quam praeco lucis proximae inlustret humanum genus finemque peccandi ferat.	55 flevit negator denique ex ore prolapsus nefas,

THE DAILY ROUND, I

sleep that is given us for a time is an image of everlasting death. Our sins, like foul night, make us lie snoring; but the voice of Christ from the height of heaven teaches and forewarns us that daylight is near, lest our soul be in bondage to slumber, and to the very end of a slothful life sleep lie heavy on a heart that is buried in sin and has forgotten its natural light. They say that evil spirits which roam happily in the darkness of night are terrified when the cock crows, and scatter and flee in fear; for the hated approach of light, salvation, Godhead, bursts through the foul darkness and routs the ministers of night. They have foreknowledge that this is a sign of our promised hope, whereby being freed from slumber we hope for the coming of God. What this bird signifies the Saviour showed to Peter, when He declared that ere the cock crew He should be thrice denied. For sin is committed before the herald of coming-day sheds light on the race of men and brings an end of sinning. So he who denied Christ wept for the wickedness that fell from his lips while his cum mens maneret innocens animusque servaret fidem.	60 nec tale quidquam postea linguae locutus lubrico est, cantuque galli cognito peccare iustus destitit.

PRUDENTIUS

inde est quod omnes credimus illo quietis tempore quo gallus exultans canit Christum redisse ex inferis.	65
tunc mortis oppressus vigor, tunc lex subacta est Tartari, tunc vis diei fortior noctem coegit cedere.	70
iam iam quiescant improbi, iam culpa furva obdormiat, iam noxa letalis suum perpressa somnum marceat.	75
vigil vicissim spiritus quodcumque restat temporis, dum meta noctis clauditur, stans ac laborans excubet.	80
Iesum ciamus vocibus flentes, precantes, sobrii; intenta supplicatio dormire cor mundum vetat.
sat convolutis artubus sensum profunda oblivio pressit, gravavit, abruit vanis vagantem somniis.	85
sunt nempe falsa et frivola quae mundiali gloria, ceu dormientes, egimus: vigilemus, hic est veritas.	90

THE DAILY ROUND, I

mind remained upright and his heart kept faith; nor ever after did he speak any such word by slip of tongue, and when he heard the cock crow he was made a just man and ceased to sin. Hence it is that we all believe it was at this hour of rest, when the cock crows in his pride, that Christ returned from the dead. Then was the strength of death crushed, then was the law of hell subdued, then did the stronger potency of day force night to flee. Now, now let wickedness sink to rest, now let dark sin fall asleep, now let deadly guilt wither away, the victim of its own slumber; and let the spirit in its turn awake, and for the time that remains, while the night's course is drawing to a close, stand and be active at its post. Let us call on Jesus with our voices, in tears and prayers and soberness; earnest supplication keeps the pure heart from slumbering. Long enough has deep forgetfulness, as we lay curled up, pressed heavily on our sense and buried it while it wandered in baseless dreams. Surely false and worthless are the things we have done because of worldly glory, as though we did them in sleep. Let us awake! Reality is here. Gold, pleasure, joy,

PRUDENTIUS

aurum, voluptas, gaudium, opes, honores, prospera, quaecumque nos inflant mala, fit mane, nil sunt omnia.	95
tu, Christe, somnum dissice, tu rumpe noctis vincula, tu solve peccatum vetus, novumque lumeningere.	100

II

HYMNUS MATUTINUS

Nox et tenebrae et nubila, confusa mundi et turbida, lux intrat, albescit polus, Christus venit, discedite.
caligo terrae scinditur percussa solis spiculo, rebusque iam color redit vultu nitentis sideris.	5
sic nostra mox obscuritas fraudisque pectus conscium ruptis resectum nubibus regnante pallescet Deo.	10
tunc non licebit claudere quod quisque fuscum cogitat, sed mane clarescent, novo secreta mentis prodita.	15
fur ante lucem squalido inpune peccat tempore, sed lux dolis contrafia latere furtum non sinit.	20

THE DAILY ROUND, II

riches, honour, success, all the evil things that puff us up,—comes morning, all are naught. Do Thou, O Christ, scatter our slumbers. Do Thou burst the bonds of night. Do Thou undo our long-established sin, and pour in upon us the light of the new day.

II

A MORNING HYMN

NIGHT and darkness and clouds, all the world's perplexed disorder, get ye gone! The dawn comes in, the sky is lightening, Christ is coming. Earth's blackness is split asunder by the stroke of the sun's dart, and now the world resumes its colour under the glance of his shining orb. So presently will the darkness in us, the heart that knows its own sin, be cleared with the breaking of the clouds and grow light under the rule of God. Then we shall not be free to hide our dark thoughts, but in the newness of morning the secrets of the heart will be revealed and made manifest. It is in the murky time before the light comes, that the thief offends unpunished; but light, the foe of guile, suffers not theft to be

PRUDENTIUS

versuta fraus et callida amat tenebris obtegi, aptamque noctem turpibus adulter occultus fovet.

sol, ecce, surgit igneus : 25
piget, pudescit, paenitet, nec teste quisquam lumine peccare constanter potest.

quis mane sumptis nequiter 30
non erubescit poculis,
cum fit libido temperans, castumque nugator sapit ?

nunc, nunc severum vivitur, nunc nemo temptat ludicrum, inepta nunc omnes sua 35
vultu colorant serio.

haec hora cunctis utilis qua quisque quod studet gerat, miles, togatus, navita, opifex, arator, institor. 40

illum forensis gloria,
hunc triste raptat classicum.
mercator hinc ac rusticus avara suspirant lucra.

at nos lucelli ac faenoris 45
fandique prorsus nescii, nec arte fortes bellica, te, Christe, solum novimus.

te mente pura et simplici, te voce, te cantu pio 50
rogare curvato genu
flendo et canendo discimus.

his nos lucratur quaestibus, hac arte tantum vivimus,

THE DAILY ROUND, II

hidden. Sly, cunning dishonesty loves to shroud itself in darkness, and the stealthy paramour cherishes the night because it is fitted for base deeds. But lo! the fiery sun arises, and there come regret and shame and sorrow, and no man can sin coolly under the eye of light. Who does not blush in the morning after a bout of the wine-cup? For then desire moderates and the ne'er-do-well savours purity. Now, now it is that life is serious, now none essays aught sportive, now all men put a grave face on their follies. This is the hour that profits all for carrying on their several businesses, be it soldier or citizen, sailor, workman, husbandman or huckster. One is carried away by desire for fame in the courts, another by the grim war-trump; and here are the trader and the countryman sighing for their greedy gains. But we, who know nought of paltry gain or usury or eloquence, nor show our prowess in the art of war, know Thee, O Christ, alone. Of Thee with pure and single heart, with devout voice and song, on bended knee with tears and singing we learn to make request. This is the trafficking whereby we grow rich, this

PRUDENTIUS

haec inchoamus munera, cum sol resurgens emicat.	55
intende nostris sensibus vitamque totam dispice ; sunt multa fucis inlita, quae luce purgentur tua.	60 durare nos tales iube, quales, remotis sordibus, nitere pridem iusseras Iordane tinctos flumine.
quodcumque nox mundi dehinc infecit atris nubibus, tu, rex, Eoi sideris vultu sereno inlumina,	65
tu, sancte, qui taetram picem candore tinguis lacteo, ebenoque crystallum facis, delicta tergens ¹ livida.	70
sub nocte Iacob caerula, luctator audax angeli, eo usque dum lux surgeret, sudavit inpar proelium ;	75
sed cum iubar claresceret, lapsante claudus poplite femurque victus debile, culpae vigorem perdidit.	80
nutabat inguen saucium, quae corporis pars vilior longeque sub cordis loco diram fovet libidinem.
hae nos docent imagines hominem tenebris obsitum, si forte non cedat Deo, vires rebelles perdere,	85

THE DAILY ROUND, II

the employment by which alone we live, these the duties we enter upon when the sun breaks forth at its rising again. Look into our thoughts, and examine our whole life; many stains are there to be cleansed by Thy light. Bid us so continue as Thou didst aforetime bid us shine when we were dipped in Jordan's stream and our uncleanness was done away. Whatsoever the night of the world since then has darkened with its black clouds do Thou, O King, illumine with the bright face of the morning star, Thou, O Holy One, who dost give to foul pitch the whiteness of milk and make crystal of ebony and dost wipe away the stains of sin. It was under the dusk of night that Jacob, wrestling boldly with the angel, toiled hard in unequal fight until the light arose. But when the beam shone forth his ham gave way and he was lamed, and being overcome in the infirmity of his thigh he lost the strength to sin. His loins were wounded and enfeebled, that baser part of the body, far below the heart, which nurtures fearful lust. These figures teach us that man, sunk in darkness, if he yield not to God, loses the strength

¹ Some MSS. of Beryman's class B have terge.

PRUDENTIUS

erit tamen beator,
intemperans membrum cui luctando claudum et tabidum dies oborta invenerit. 90

tandem facessat caecitas, quae nosmet in praeceps diu lapsos sinistris gressibus errore traxit devio. 95

haec lux serenum conferat purosque nos praestet sibi;
nihil loquamur subdolum, volvamus obscurum nihil. 100

sic tota decurrat dies, ne lingua mendax, ne manus oculive peccent lubrici, ne noxa corpus inquinet.

speculator adstat desuper, 105 qui nos diebus omnibus
actusque nostros prospicit a luce prima in vesperum.

hic testis, hic est arbiter, hic intuetur quidquid est 110
humana quod mens concipit;
hunc nemo fallit iudicem.

III

HYMNUS ANTE CIBUM

O CRUCIFER bone, lucisator, omniparens pie, Verbigena, edite corpore virgineo,
sed prius in genitore potens, astra, solum, mare quam fierent, 5

THE DAILY ROUND, III

to resume the fight; yet he will be more blessed in whom the day, when it appears, finds the unruly body lamed and wasted with the struggle. At last let the blindness be gone, which has long caused us to fall into danger and made us wander from the path with misguided steps. May this light give us a clear day and make us pure to meet it; let us speak no guile and think no dark thought. So may the whole day pass that neither lying tongue, nor hands, nor straying eyes commit sin, nor any guilt stain our body. There is One that stands by watching from above, who each day views us and our doings from dawn of light till evening. He is witness, He is judge; He looks on every thought the mind of man conceives, and this judge none can dupe.

III

A HYMN BEFORE MEAT

O KIND bearer of the cross, spreader of light, loving source of all, born of the Word, Thou that wert the fruit of a virgin's body, yet mighty in the Father ere stars and earth and sea were made, hither, I pray, huc nitido, precor, intuitu flecte salutiferam faciem fronte serenus et irradiâ, nominis ut sub honore tui has epulas liceat capere. 10

PRUDENTIUS

te sine dulce nihil, Domine, nec iuvat ore quid adpetere, pocula ni prius atque cibos, Christe, tuus favor inbuerit, omnia sanctificante fide. 15

fercula nostra Deum sapiant, Christus et influat in pateras;
 seria, ludicra, verba, iocos, denique quod sumus aut agimus, trina superne regat pietas. 20

hic mihi nulla rosae spoliâ, nullus aromate fragrat¹ odor, sed liquor influit ambrosius nectareamque fidem redolet fusus ab usque Patris gremio. 25

sperne, Camena, leves hederas, cingere tempora quis solita es, sartaque mystica dactylico texere docta liga strophio, laude Dei redimita comas. 30

quod generosa potest anima, lucis et aetheris indigena, solvere dignius obsequium, quam data munera si recinat artificem modulatæ suum? 35

ipse homini quia cuncta dedit, quae capimus dominante manu;
 quae polus aut humus aut pelagus aëre, gurgite, rure creant,

THE DAILY ROUND, III

with bright look turn Thy saving face, and with gladsome countenance shine upon us, that we may take this meal in honour of Thy name. Without Thee, Lord, nought is sweet, and appetite finds no relish unless Thy grace, O Christ, first flavour cups and food, while faith sanctifies all. May our dishes savour of God, and Christ be poured into our bowls;
may all things grave or light, our talk, our merriment, all that we are or do, be governed by the threefold love from on high. Here no plunder of the rose, no scent of spice smells in my nostrils, but an ambrosial liquor flows into me, with the aroma of faith sweet as nectar, and pouring from the Father's breast.
Put away, my Muse, the paltry ivy-leaves wherewith thou hast been wont to encircle thy brows; learn to weave mystic garlands and tie them with a band of dactyls,^a and wear thy hair wreathed with the praise of God. What worthier service can the high-born soul, native of light and heaven, pay, than to chant
the gifts she has received, singing of her Creator?
For He has given all things to man, and we take them with a hand that bears dominion; all that sky or earth or sea produces in air or flood or field, all this

^a The phrase is suited to the metre of this hymn, which is the dactylic tetrameter (catalectic).

¹ Here and elsewhere the spelling of the MSS. varies between fragl- and flagr-.

PRUDENTIUS

haec mihi subdidit, et sibi me. 40

callidus inlaqueat volucres aut pedicis dolus aut maculis, inlita glutine corticeo vimina plumigeram seriem inpediunt et abire vetant. 45

ecce per aequora fluctivagos texta greges sinuosa trahunt; piscis item sequitur calamum raptus acumine vulnifico, credula saucius ora cibo. 50

fundit opes ager ingenuas, dives aristiferae segetis, hic ubi vitea pampineo
bracchia palmite luxuriant, pacis alumna ubi baca viret. 55

haec opulentia Christicolis servit et omnia subpeditat.
absit enim procul illa fames, caedibus ut pecudum libeat sanguineas lacerare dapes. 60

sint fera gentibus indomitae prandia de nece quadrupedum; nos holeris coma, nos siliqua feta legumine multimodo paverit innocuis epulis. 65

spumea mulctra gerunt niveos ubere de gemino latices, perque coagula densa liquor in solidum coit, et fragili lac tenerum premitur calatho. 70

mella recens mihi Cecropia nectare sudat olente favus;
haec opifex apis aërio

THE DAILY ROUND, III

has He put under me, and me under Himself. Cunning craft snares birds in gins or meshes, or twigs smeared with the glue that comes from bark catch a line of the feathered creatures and will not let them go. See how through the waters the encircling nets draw the shoals that roam the waves; and fish fall to the rod too, caught by the sharp, piercing hook, their too trustful mouth wounded by the bait. The land pours forth its native wealth in all the riches of its corn-crop, while here too the vine's branches luxuriate with leafy shoots and the berry that is the nursling of peace^a flourishes. All this abundance is in the service of Christ's followers and supplies their every need. Far from us be the appetite that would choose to slay cattle and hack their flesh to make a bloody feast. Let tribes uncivilised have their savage meals from the slaughter of four-footed beasts: as for us, the leaves of greens, the pod that swells with beans of diverse sorts, will feed us with an innocent banquet. Foaming pails bear the snow-white milk drawn from a pair of teats; and by means of thickening rennet the liquor solidifies, and the soft curd is pressed in a frail wicker basket. The fresh comb exudes for me Cecropian^b honey with the scent of nectar; the worker bee, that knows no

^a I.e. the olive.

^b I.e. Athenian, a literary epithet, Attic honey being famous.

PRUDENTIUS

rore liquat tenuique thymo, nexilis inscia conubii. 75

hinc quoque pomiferi nemoris munera mitia proveniunt;
arbor onus tremefacta suum deciduo gravis imbre pluit puniceosque iacit cumulos. 80

quae veterum tuba quaeve lyra flatibus inclyta vel fidibus divitis omnipotentis opus, quaeque fruenda patent homini, laudibus aequiperare queat? 85

te, Pater optime, mane novo, solis et orbita cum media est,
te quoque luce sub occidua, sumere cum monet hora cibum, nostra, Deus, canet harmonia. 90

quod calet halitus interior, corde quod abdita vena tremit, pulsat et incita quod resonam lingua sub ore latens caveam, laus superi Patris esto mihi. 95

nos igitur tua, sancte, manus caespitem composuit madido, effigiem meditata suam,
utque foret rata materies flavit et indidit ore animam.¹ 100

tunc per amoena virecta iubet frondicomis habitare locis, ver ubi perpetuum redolet prataque multicolora latex quadrifluo celer amne rigat. 105

“haec tibi nunc famulentur” ait;
“usibus omnia dedo tuis,

THE DAILY ROUND, III

union in wedlock, makes this clear fluid from the dew of the air and the slender thyme. From the earth too come the ripe gifts of the orchard. The heavy tree is shaken and rains down its load in a falling shower, casting its red fruits in heaps upon the ground. What trumpet or lyre of old, with famous music of wind or strings, could fitly praise the work of Him who is rich and almighty, and all that is provided for man's enjoyment? Of Thee, best Father, when the morn is new, and when the sun's course is half-way run, of Thee too under the sinking light, when the time of day admonishes us to take food, of Thee, O God, shall be our song. For the breath that is warm within me, for the blood that pulses unseen in my heart, for the tongue ensconced within my mouth and beating nimbly on its sounding chamber, let me praise the Father on high. Thy hand, then, it was, O Holy One, that made us from the moist earth. After His own image He made us, and that our substance might be perfected, breathed with His mouth into us the breath of life. Then He bade man dwell in a leafy place, ranging over pleasant lawns, where the scent of spring was unending and a swift stream in fourfold channel^a watered the many-coloured meads. "Be all this now in thy service," He said. "All I give over to thee for thy enjoyment. But I bid thee

^a Cf. Genesis ii, 10.

¹ ore animam dedit ex proprio A.

PRUDENTIUS

sed tamen aspera mortifero stipite carpere poma veto, qui medio viret in nemore.” 110

hic draco perfidus indocile virginis illicit ingenium, ut socium malesuada virum mandere cogeret ex vetitis, ipsa pari peritura modo. 115

corpora mutua (nosse nefas)
post epulas inoperta vident, lubricus error et erubuit:
tegmina suta parant foliis, dedecus ut pudor occuleret. 120

conscia culpa Deum pavitans sede pia procul exigitur.
innuba femina quae fuerat, coniugis excipit imperium, foedera tristia iussa pati. 125

auctor et ipse doli coluber plectitur improbus, ut mulier colla trilingua calce terat;
sic coluber muliebri solum suspicit atque virum mulier. 130

his ducibus vitiosa dehinc posteritas ruit in facinus, dumque rudes imitatur avos, fasque nefasque simul glomerans, in pia crimina morte luit. 135

ecce venit nova progenies, aethere proditus alter homo,
non luteus velut ille prius, sed Deus ipse gerens hominem, corporeisque carens vitiis. 140 fit caro vivida Sermo Patris,

THE DAILY ROUND, III

not pluck the harsh fruit from the deadly tree that grows in the midst of the wood." Then the treacherous serpent beguiled the simple heart of the maid to seduce her male partner and make him eat of the forbidden fruit, being herself doomed to ruin in like manner. Each other's body (unlawful knowledge), after eating, they saw uncovered, and their sinful lapse brought the blush to their cheeks; coverings they made by stitching leaves, that modesty might veil their shame. Trembling before God for the guilt they felt, they were driven out from the abode of innocence, and the woman, till then unwedded, came under a husband's rule and was commanded to submit to stern laws. The wicked serpent, too, that devised the guile, was condemned to have its three-tongued head bruised by the woman's heel; so the serpent was under the woman's foot, as the woman under the man. Following their lead, succeeding generations are corrupted and rush into sin, and through copying their primitive ancestors, lumping right and wrong together, pay with death for their rebellious deeds. But lo! there comes a new scion, a Second Man sent forth from heaven, not of clay as was that one before, but God Himself putting on man without the body's faults. The Word of the Father becomes

PRUDENTIUS

numine quam rutilante gravis non thalamo, neque iure tori, nec genialibus inlecebris intemerata puella parit. 145

hoc odium vetus illud erat, hoc erat aspidis atque hominis digladiabile discidium, quod modo cernua femineis vipera proteritur pedibus. 150

edere namque Deum merita
omnia virgo venena domat;
tractibus anguis inexplicitis virus inerme piger revomit, gramine concolor in viridi. 155

quae feritas modo non trepidat terrata de grege candidulo, inpavidas lupus inter oves tristis obambulat et rabidum sanguinis inmemor os cohibet. 160

agnus enim vice mirifica
ecce leonibus imperitat, exagitansque truces aquilas per vaga nubila perque Notos sidere lapsa columba fugat. 165

tu mihi, Christe, columba potens, sanguine pasta cui cedit avis, tu niveus per ovile tuum agnus hiare lupum prohibes, subiuga tigridis ora premens. 170 da, locuples Deus, hoc famulis rite precantibus, ut tenui membra cibo recreata levent, neu piger inmodicis dapibus viscera tenta gravet stomachus. 175

THE DAILY ROUND, III

living flesh; pregnant by the shining Godhead, not by wedlock nor espousal nor allurements of marriage, a maid inviolate bears it. This was the meaning of that age-long hate, that quarrel to the death between snake and man, that now the serpent on his belly is crushed by a woman's feet. For the virgin who proved worthy to give birth to God subdues all its poisons, and the snake, its length twisted in coils it cannot unravel, feebly spews its harmless venom on the green grass whose hue it matches. What wild beast does not tremble now in fear of the white-clad flock? The dire wolf prowls amid fearless sheep, and with no thought of blood keeps close his ravening mouth. For see—by a wondrous change the lamb commands the lions, and the dove gliding from the sky drives the fierce eagles in flight through the unresting clouds and the winds. Thou for me, O Christ, art the puissant dove to which the blood-fed bird gives place. Thou art the snow-white lamb that dost prevent the wolf from opening his jaws in all Thy fold and dost subdue and close the tiger's mouth. Grant, mighty God, to Thy servants' devout prayers that with a frugal meal they may refresh and sustain their bodies, and that the stomach be not heavy with immoderate feasting and strain and weigh upon the inner parts. Far from us be the

PRUDENTIUS

haustus amarus abesto procul, ne libeat tetigisse manu exitiale quid aut vetitum ; gustus et ipse modum teneat, sospitet ut iecur incolume.	180
sit satis anguibus horrificis liba quod in pia corporibus a ! miseram peperere necem ; sufficiat semel ob facinus plasma Dei potuisse mori.	185
oris opus, vigor igneolus non moritur, quia flante Deo compositus superoque fluens de solio patris artificis vim liquidae rationis habet.	190
viscera mortua quin etiam post obitum reparare datur, eque suis iterum tumulis prisca renascitur effigies, pulvere coeunte situ.	195
credo equidem, neque vana fides, corpora vivere more animae ; nam modo corporeum memini de Phlegethonte gradu facili ad superos remeasse Deum.	200
spes eadem mea membra manet, quae redolentia funereo iussa quiescere sarcophago, dux parili rediivus humo igneus Christus ad astra vocat.	205

THE DAILY ROUND, III

baneful draught; let it not please us to handle aught that is deadly or forbidden; and let our eating, too, observe due measure, to preserve the flesh but hurt it not. Let the terrible serpents be content that sinful food brought forth, alas! sad death to men's bodies; be it enough that once through sin God's creature could die. The work of His mouth, the glowing life, dies not, because being created by the breath of God and flowing from the heavenly throne of the Father, its maker, it has the force of pure reason. Yea, it is even granted to restore the dead flesh after its decease, and once again from its tomb the old form is reborn, when the mouldering dust comes together. I indeed believe (and my faith is not vain) that bodies live as does the soul; for now I bethink me it was in bodily form that God returned from Phlegethon with easy step to heaven. The same hope awaits my members, which, though they are bidden to rest scented with spices in the tomb of death, Christ my leader, who rose from the like earth, calls to the glowing stars.

PRUDENTIUS

IV

HYMNUS POST CIBUM

PASTIS visceribus ciboque sumpto, quem lex corporis inbecilla poscit, laudem lingua Deo Patri rependat, Patri, qui Cherubin sedile sacrum nec non et Seraphin suum supremo 5 subnixus solio tenet regitque.
hic est quem Sabaoth Deum vocamus, expers principii carensque fine, rerum conditor et repertor orbis, fons vitae liquida fluens ab arce, 10
infusor fidei, sator pudoris, mortis perdomitor, salutis auctor.
omnes quod sumus aut vigemus, inde est.
regnat Spiritus ille sempiternus a Christo simul et Parente missus. 15 intrat pectora candidus pudica, quae templi vice consecrata rident postquam conbiberint Deum medullis.
sed si quid vitii dolive nasci inter viscera iam dicata sensit, 20 ceu spurcum refugit celer sacellum.
taetrum flagrat enim vapore crasso horror conscius aestuante culpa, offensumque bonum niger repellit.
nec solus pudor innocensve votum 25 templum constituunt perenne Christo in cordis medii sinu ac recessu, sed ne crapula ferveat cavendum est, quae sedem fidei cibis refertam usque ad congeriem coartet intus. 30

THE DAILY ROUND, IV

IV

A HYMN AFTER MEAT

Now that we have fed our flesh, taking the food which the weakly law of our body requires, let our tongue render due praise to God the Father, the Father who, sitting on the supreme throne, holds sway over Cherubim and Seraphim, His sacred seat. This is He whom we call God of Sabaoth, who is without beginning and without end, maker of all things and creator of the world, source of life flowing from the clear light of heaven, who inspires faith and implants goodness in us, the conqueror of death and author of salvation. From Him do we all have our being and our life. The Spirit reigns eternal, He whom both Christ and His Father have sent. In His purity He enters chaste hearts, which are consecrated as His temple, smiling brightly when they have drunk deep of God. But if He perceives sin or guile arising in the flesh now dedicated to Him, swiftly He departs as from an unclean shrine. For the disordered conscience burns foully with thick smoke as the fire of sin rages, and its blackness offends and drives away the good. Yet not alone do purity and innocent desire make an everlasting temple for Christ in the depths of the heart within us, but we must beware of the fever of excess that would stuff in food till the mass of it constricted the seat

PRUDENTIUS

parcis victibus expedita corda infusum melius Deum receptant;
 hic pastus animae est saporque verus.
 sed nos tu gemino fovens paratu artus atque animas utroque pastu 35 confirmas, Pater, ac vigore conples.
 sic olim tua praecluens potestas inter raucisonos situm leones inlapsis dapibus virum refovit.
 illum fusile numen execrantem 40 et curvare caput sub expolita aeris materia nefas putantem plebs dirae Babylonis ac tyrannus morti subdiderant, feris dicarant saevis protinus haustibus vorandum. 45
 o semper pietas fidesque tuta!
 lambunt indomiti virum leones, intactumque Dei tremunt alumnum.
 adstant comminus et iubas reponunt, mansuescit rabies, fameque blanda 50
 praedam rictibus ambit incruentis.
 sed cum tenderet ad superna palmas expertumque sibi Deum rogaret clausus iugiter indigensque victus, iussus nuntius advolare terris, 55
 qui pastum famulo daret probato, raptim desilit obsequente mundo.
 cernit forte procul dapes inemptas, quas messoribus Ambacum ¹ propheta agresti bonus exhibebat arte. 60 huius caesarie manu prehensa, plenis, sicut erat, gravem canistris

¹ This is the form of the name in the Septuagint, and presumably in the Latin version (if any) used by Prudentius.

THE DAILY ROUND, IV

of faith in us. Hearts that spare living leaves unencumbered receive better the inpouring of God; He is the soul's true food and savour. But Thou dost make twofold provision for our nurture; our bodies and our souls with two several kinds of sustenance Thou dost strengthen and invigorate. Thus once Thy renowned power revived a man set amid rough-voiced lions, with a meal that came to him.^a Because he abominated a god cast in metal and thought it sin to bow his head before a material image of polished bronze, the people of fell Babylon and their king had exposed him to death, giving him over to the wild beasts to be devoured forthwith by their cruel jaws. How safe always are goodness and faith! The untamed lions lick the hero, and tremble before the child of God, hurting him not! They stand close by him with manes laid back; their fury turned to gentleness and their hunger to fawning, they walk round their prey with jaws unbloodied. But when he stretched his hands towards heaven in prayer to the God he had proved before, being confined without remission and in need of food, a messenger was bidden to fly to earth and give nourishment to His tried servant, and quickly descended, while the heavens made way. It chanced that some way off he descried a home-grown meal which the kindly prophet Habakkuk was providing with the countryman's rude art for his reapers. Grasping him by the hair, he carried him off the ground just as he was, with the load of his full baskets, ^a The story is in "Bel and the Dragon," to be found among the Apocrypha, and also in the Septuagint and Vulgate as chapter 14 of the Book of Daniel.

PRUDENTIUS

suspensum rapit et vehit per auras.
tum raptus simul ipse prandiumque sensim labitur in lacum leonum,	65 et quas tunc epulas gerebat offert.
“sumas laetus ” ait “ libensque carpas, quae summus Pater angelusque Christi mittunt liba tibi sub hoc periclo.”
his sumptis Danielus excitavit	70 in caelum faciem, ciboque fortis “ amen ” reddidit, “ alleluia ” dixit.
sic nos muneribus tuis refecti, largitor Deus omnium bonorum, grates reddimus et sacramus hymnos.	75
tu nos tristifico velut tyranno mundi scilicet inpotentis actu , conclusos regis et feram repellis, quae circumfremit ac vorare temptat, insanos acuens furore dentes,	80 cur te, summe Deus, precemur unum. vexamur, premimur, malis rotamur; oderunt, lacerant, trahunt, lacesunt; iuncta est suppliciis fides iniquis.
nec defit tamen anxiis medella;	85 nam languente truci leonis ira inlapsae superingeruntur escae.
quas si quis sitienter hauriendo, non gustu tenui sed ore pleno, internis velit implicare venis,	90
hic sancto satiatuꝛ ex propheta iustorum capiet cibos virorum, qui fructum Domino metunt perenni.
nil est dulcius ac magis saporum, nil quod plus hominem iuvare possit,	95
quam vatis pia praecinētis orsa.

THE DAILY ROUND, IV

and bore him through the air. Then the ravished prophet and his meal together glided gently down into the lions' den, and he proffered the feast he was carrying. "Take with good cheer," said he, "and eat readily the viands which the supreme Father and the angel of Christ send thee in this thy danger." So Daniel took them and lifted his face towards heaven, and being now fortified with food, said "Amen, Alleluia" in response. In the same manner we, being refreshed by Thy gifts, O God, the generous giver of all good things, return thanks and dedicate our hymns to Thee. Imprisoned as we are by the world's cruel violence, as it were by a grim despot, Thou dost direct us and drive away the wild beast that goes roaring round about and seeks to devour us, sharpening its teeth to frenzy with rage, for that, O God supreme, we pray to Thee alone. We are afflicted, oppressed, tossed about with evils; men hate us, tear us, carry us away captive, assail us; faith is yoked to unjust penalties. Yet in our trouble we lack not healing comfort, for food comes down to us from above, and the lion's fierce wrath subsides. And if a man be willing to swallow it eagerly, not tasting daintily but by mouthfuls, and make it part and parcel of his inner being, then will he receive from the holy prophet the food of righteous men who reap the harvest for their everlasting Master, and will be satisfied. Nought is sweeter or more savoury, nought more helpful to man, than the devout words of the prophet foretelling things to his sumptis licet insolens potestas pravum iudicet inrogetque mortem, inpasti licet inruant leones, nos semper Dominum Patrem fatentes 100

PRUDENTIUS

in te, Christe Deus, loquemur unum, constanterque tuam crucem feremus.

V

HYMNUS AD INCENSUM LUCERNAE

INVENTOR rutili, dux bone, luminis, qui certis vicibus tempora dividis, merso sole chaos ingruit horridum.
lucem redde tuis, Christe, fidelibus.
quamvis innumero sidere rêgiam 5 lunarique polum lampade pinxeris, incussu silicis lumina nos tamen monstras saxigeno semine quaerere, ne nesciret homo spem sibi luminis in Christi solido corpore conditam, 10 qui dici stabilem se voluit petram, nostris igniculis unde genus venit.
pinguis quos olei rore madentibus lychnis aut facibus pascimus aridis, quin et fila favis scirpea floreis 15
presso melle prius conlita fingimus.
vivax flamma viget, seu cava testula sucum linteolo suggerit ebrio, seu pinus piceam fert alimoniam, seu ceram teretem stuppa calens bibit. 20 nectar de liquido vertice fervidum guttatim lacrimis stillat olentibus, ambustum quoniam vis facit ignea

THE DAILY ROUND, V

come. Once we take this food, arrogant power may pass perverse judgment and condemn us to death, the starved lions may rush upon us; but as for us, we shall ever make confession that our Lord the Father is one in Thee, O God Christ, and with constancy shall bear Thy cross.

V

A HYMN FOR THE LIGHTING OF THE LAMP

CREATOR of the glowing light, our kindly guide, who dost divide the times in a fixed order of seasons, now the sun has sunk and the gruesome darkness comes upon us; give light again, O Christ, to Thy faithful ones. Albeit Thou hast adorned the heavens, Thy royal court, with countless stars and with the moon's lamp, yet Thou teachest us to seek light from a stone-born spark by striking the flint, that man might know that his hope of light is founded on the firm body of Christ, who willed that He be called the steadfast rock, from whence our little fires draw their origin. With lamps bedewed with rich oil, or with dry torches, we feed them, and we make rush-candles too, smearing them with flower-scented wax of the combs after the honey has been pressed from them. The lively flame thrives, whether it be a little earthen bowl that supplies sap to a thirsty linen wick, or pinewood that brings its pitchy sustenance, or a warm tow that drinks up the smooth, round wax, while hot nectar trickles from the molten top in scented tear-drops, for the strong heat sends them dripping in a imbrem de madido flere cacumine.

PRUDENTIUS

splendent ergo tuis muneribus, Pater,	25
flammis nobilibus ¹ scilicet atria, absentemque diem lux agit aemula, quam nox cum lacero victa fugit peplo.
sed quis non rapidi luminis arduam
manantemque Deo cernat originem?	30
Moses nempe Deum spinifero in rubo vidit conspicuo lumine flammeum.
felix qui meruit sentibus in sacris caelestis solii visere principem, iussus nexa pedum vincula solvere	35
ne sanctum involucris pollueret locum.
hunc ignem populus sanguinis inclyti, maiorum meritis tutus et inpotens, suetus sub dominis vivere barbaris,
iam liber sequitur longa per avia.	40
qua gressum tulerant castraque caerulae noctis per medium concita moverant, plebem pervigilem fulgure praevio ducebat radius sole micantior.
sed rex Niliaci litoris invido	45
fervens felle iubet praevalidam manum in bellum rapidis ire cohortibus, ferratasque acies clangere classicum.
sumunt arma viri seque minacibus accingunt gladiis, triste canit tuba.	50
hic fidit iaculis, ille volantia praefigit calamis spicula Gnosiis.
densetur cuneis turba pedestribus, currus pars et equos et volucres rotas conscendunt celeres, signaque bellica	55 praetendunt tumidis clara draconibus.

¹ mobilibus in some MSS. of both classes,

THE DAILY ROUND, V

burning shower from the liquid summit. So our halls shine, Father, with Thy gifts of noble flames; their emulous light plays the part of day when it has gone, and night with torn mantle flees before it in defeat. But who would not discern that the swift light has its source on high and flows from God? Moses in truth saw God in a prickly bush in the form of flame with brilliant light. Blessed was he who was worthy to behold in the sacred brier the lord of the heavenly throne, and was bidden to undo the ties on his feet lest with their coverings he pollute the holy place. It was this fire that the nation of illustrious blood, preserved by its fathers' merits and of no strength itself, when at last set free after long living under barbarous lords, followed far over desert ways. Wherever they turned their steps, rousing and moving their camp amid the darkness of night, a ray that flashed brighter than the sun led the unsleeping people with a gleam that went before them. But the king who ruled on the banks of the Nile, burning with a jealous hatred, commands a mighty force to go to war in swift-marching companies, and his iron-clad ranks to sound the loud bugle. His warriors take up arms, girding themselves with menacing swords, and the trumpet blows its grim call. One puts his trust in javelins, another fixes sharp, flying heads on Gnosian^a shafts. The multitude forms up in serried ranks of foot; others swiftly mount chariots with their horses and flying wheels, and display their banners of war with their famous dragons^b ^b Prudentius ascribes to Pharaoh a banner of the Roman imperial armies. It is described by Ammianus Marcellinus, XVI, 10, 7.

^a I.e. Cretan, another literary epithet.

PRUDENTIUS

hic iam servitii nescia pristini gens Pelusiatis usta vaporibus tandem purpurei gurgitis hospita rubris litoribus fessa resederat.	60
hostis dirus adest cum duce perfido, infert et validis proelia viribus. Moses porro suos in mare praecipit constans intrepidus tendere gressibus.
praebent rupta locum stagna viantibus, riparum in faciem pervia sistitur circumstans vitreis unda liquoribus, dum plebs sub bifido permeat aequore.	65
pubes quin etiam decolor asperis inritata odiis rege sub inpio Hebraeum sitiens fundere sanguinem audet se pelago credere concavo.	70
ibant praecipiti turbine percita fluctus per medios agmina regia, sed confusa dehinc unda revolvitur in semet revolans gurgite confluo.	75
currus tunc et equos telaque naufraga ipsos et procures et vaga corpora nigrorum videas nare satellitum, arcis iustitium triste tyrannicae.	80
quae tandem poterit lingua retexere laudes, Christe, tuas? qui domitam Pharon plagis multimodis cedere praesuli cogis iustitiae vindice dextera;
qui pontum rabidis ¹ aestibus invium persultare vetas, ut ² refluo in solo ² securus pateat te duce transitus, et mox unda rapax ut voret inpios;	85
cui ieiuna eremi saxa loquacibus exundant scatebris, et latices novos	90

THE DAILY ROUND, V

swelling. At this time, free now from its ancient bondage, the race that had burned under Egypt's heat had at length halted, weary and in a strange land, on the shores of the Red Sea. Their dread enemy is upon them under his faithless leader, and with strong forces launches the attack; but Moses firmly bids his people go forward into the sea with steps unfaltering. The flood separates and makes room for them as they travel; the waves, opening a path as it were between banks, stand still with glassy waters on either hand while the people pass over on the bed of the divided sea. Yea, the swarthy warriors too, under their ungodly king, stirred by their bitter hatred and thirsting to shed Hebrew blood, venture to trust themselves to that trough in the deep. In head-long rush the king's columns were sweeping like a hurricane through the midst of the flood; but now the waters pour together and roll back on themselves, racing to meet again. Then could be seen the wreck of chariots and horses and weapons, and the princes too, and bodies of their black henchmen floating this way and that, a sad day of mourning for the despot's throne. What tongue can tell Thy praises, O Christ? Thou dost overcome Egypt and by manifold afflictions compel her to give way to the protector of righteousness through the deliverance of Thy right hand. The sea, impassable when its surges rage, Thou dost forbid to leap, that on its bed laid bare there may open a passage that is safe under Thy guidance, and then the ravenous waves may swallow up the ungodly. At Thy command the barren rocks of the desert gush with babbling springs, and the cleft flint pours forth

¹ rapidis in some MSS. of class B.

² salò in some MSS. of both classes.

PRUDENTIUS

fundit scissa silex, quae sitientibus dat potum populis axe sub igneo.

instar fellis aqua tristifico in lacu fit ligni venia mel velut Atticum.
lignum est quo sapiunt aspera dulcius, 95 nam praefixa cruci spes hominum viget.

inplet castra cibus tunc quoque ninguidus, inlabens gelida grandine densius;
his mensas epulis, hac dape construunt, quam dat sidereo Christus ab aethere. 100

nec non imbrifero ventus anhelitu crassa nube leves invehit alites, quae, difflata in humum cum semel agmina fluxerunt, reduci non revolant fuga.

haec olim patribus praemia contulit 105 insignis pietas numinis unici, cuius subsidio nos quoque vescimur pascentes dapibus pectora mysticis.

fessos ille vocat per freta saeculi discissis populum turbinibus regens, 110 iactatasque animas mille laboribus iustorum in patriam scandere praecipit.

illic purpureis tecta rosariis omnis fragrat humus caltaque pingua et molles violas et tenues crocos 115 fundit fonticulis uda fugacibus.

illic et gracili balsama surculo desudata fluunt, raraque cinnama spirant, et folium, fonte quod abdito praelambens fluvijs portat in exitum. 120

felices animae prata per herbida concentu pariles suave sonantibus hymnorum modulis dulce canunt melos, calcant et pedibus lilia candidis.

THE DAILY ROUND, V

new streams, giving drink to the multitudes that thirst under the burning sky. Water that tasted like gall in the pool of bitterness is made, by virtue of a log of wood, like the honey of Attica.^a Wood it is whereby bitter things taste sweeter; for it is when fixed on the cross that men's hope is strong. Then food, too, fills the camp, dropping like snow, showering more thickly than the chilly hail; and with this meal, this feast, which Christ gives them from the starry heavens, they furnish their tables.^b And the wind with rainy blast brings light-winged birds in a thick cloud, which when once their ranks are scattered by the breeze and stream to the ground, fly not away again.^c These gifts once the surpassing goodness of the one God gave to our fathers; and by His support we too are fed, nurturing our hearts with a mystic feast. He calls the weary over the sea of the world and guides His people, cleaving the storms; souls that have been tossed by a thousand distresses He bids go up into the country of the righteous. There all the ground is covered and scented with beds of red roses; watered by running streamlets it pours forth rich marigolds and soft violets and tender crocuses. There balsam, too, exudes in a stream from its slender shoot, the rare cinnamon breathes its scent, and the leaf^d which the river by whose stream it grows carries from its hidden source to its mouth. The blessed souls over the grassy meads sing their sweet song in harmonious concert, and pleasantly sounds the melody of their hymns, as with white feet they tread the lilies. And the guilty

^a Cf. Exodus xv, 23-25.

^b Exodus xvi, 14 ff.

^c Numbers xi, 31.

^d Of nard, brought down the Indus and the Ganges.

PRUDENTIUS

sunt et spiritibus saepe nocentibus 125 poenarum celebres sub Styge feriae illa nocte, sacer qua rediit Deus stagnis ad superos ex Acherunticis, non sicut tenebras de face fulgida surgens Oceano Lucifer inbuit, 130 sed terris Domini de cruce tristibus maior sole novum restituens diem.
 marcent suppliciis Tartara mitibus, exultatque sui carceris otio functorum ¹ populus liber ab ignibus, 135 nec fervent solito flumina sulphure.
 nos festis trahimus per pia gaudia noctem conciliis votaue prospera certatim vigili congerimus prece, extructoque agimus liba sacrario. 140 pendent mobilibus lumina funibus, quae suffixa micant per laquearia, et de languidulis fota natatibus lucem perspicuo flamma iacit vitro.
 credas stelligeram desuper aream 145 ornatam geminis stare trionibus, et qua bosphoreum temo regit iugum passim purpureos spargier hesperos.
 o res digna, Deus,² quam tibi roscidae noctis principio grex tuus offerat, 150 lucem, qua tribuis nil pretiosius, lucem, qua reliqua praemia cernimus.
 tu lux vera oculis, lux quoque sensibus, intus tu speculum, tu speculum foris;
 lumen quod famulans offero, suscipe, 155 tinctum pacifici chrismatis unguine, per Christum genitum, summe Pater, tuum, in quo visibilis stat tibi gloria,

THE DAILY ROUND, V

spirits too, in their crowds often have holiday from punishment in hell, on the night on which the holy God returned to the world of men from the waters of Acheron, not like the morning star when it rises from Ocean and first tinges the darkness with its shining torch, but a greater than the sun, restoring new day to a world saddened by the cross of its Lord. Hell's force abates, its punishments are mild, and the people of the dead, set free from the fires, rejoices in the relaxation of its imprisonment, nor do the sulphurous rivers boil as hot as they are wont. As for us, we pass the long night with pious gladness in festal congregations,^a in sleepless prayer we earnestly heap up petitions that will be granted, and on the altar raised up make offerings to God. The lamps gleam out, that hang by swaying cords from every panel of the roof, and the flame, fed by the oil on which it floats lazily, casts its light through the clear glass. One would think the starry space stood over us, decked with the twin Bears, and that bright evening stars were everywhere scattered, where the Wain directs its team of oxen. How worthy a thing, O God, for Thy flock to offer Thee at dewy night's beginning—light, Thy most precious gift, light, by which we perceive all Thy other blessings! Thou art the true light of our eyes, the true light of our minds; by Thee we see as in a glass within, a glass without. Take the light which in Thy service I offer, dipped in the unction of the oil of peace; through Christ Thy son, O Highest Father, in whom Thy glory stands visible;

^a At the service on Easter eve, lasting throughout the night, and for which churches were brilliantly illuminated.

¹ umbrarum in A and some other MSS. of both classes.

² Pater in ACD.

PRUDENTIUS

qui noster Dominus, qui tuus unicus spirat de patrio corde Paraclitum. 160 per quem splendor, honos, laus, sapientia, maiestas, bonitas et pietas tua regnum continuat numine triplici, texens perpetuis saecula saeculis.

VI

HYMNUS ANTE SOMNUM

ADES, Pater supreme,
quem nemo vidit umquam,
patrisque Sermo Christe, et Spiritus benigne,
o Trinitatis huius 5
vis una, lumen unum,¹ deus ex Deo perennis,
deus ex utroque missus.
fluxit labor diei,
redit et quietis hora, 10
blandus sopor vicissim
fessos relaxat artus.
mens aestuans procellis,
curisque sauciata,
totis bibit medullis 15
obliviale poclum.
serpit per omne corpus Lethaea vis, nec ullum
miseris doloris aegri patitur manere sensum. 20
lex haec data est caducis deo iubente membris,

THE DAILY ROUND, VI

Christ our Lord and Thy only-begotten, who from His Father's heart breathes the Comforter; through whom Thy glory and honour and praise and wisdom, Thy majesty and goodness and love extend Thy kingdom with its three-fold Godhead, uniting age to age for ever and ever.

VI

A HYMN BEFORE SLEEP

BE present, most high Father, whom no man hath seen at any time, and Christ the Word of the Father, and Thou, kindly Spirit; O Thou who in this Trinity art one essence and one light, God of God everlasting, and God sent forth of both. The day's toil is past and the hour of rest comes again; caressing slumber in its turn relaxes our tired limbs. The mind storm-tossed and careworn drinks deep the cup of forgetfulness. Oblivion steals over all the body and lets no sense of soreness abide with the afflicted. This is the law appointed by God's command for our frail

¹ ACDP (followed by Bergman) have vis ac potestas una.

PRUDENTIUS

ut temperet laborem medicabilis voluptas.
sed dum pererrat omnes	25
quies amica venas pectusque feriatum placat rigante somno, liber vagat per auras
rapido vigore sensus,	30
variasque per figuras quae sunt operta cernit ;
quia mens soluta curis, cui est origo caelum
purusque fons ab aethra,	35
iners iacere nescit.
imitata multifformes facies sibi ipsa fingit, per quas repente currens
tenui fruatur actu.	40
sed sensa somniantum dispar fatigat horror.
nunc splendor intererrat,
qui dat futura nosse ;
plerumque dissipatis	45
mendax imago veris animos pavore maestos ambage fallit atra.
quem rara culpa morum
non polluit frequenter,	50
hunc lux serena vibrans res edocet latentes ;
at qui coinquinatum vitiis cor inpiavit, lusus pavore multo	55
species videt tremendas.

THE DAILY ROUND, VI

members, that healing pleasure temper toil. But while kindly repose spreads through all our body, and as sleep floods it, lulls the heart to rest from labour, the spirit roams free through the air, quick and lively, and in diverse figures sees things that are hidden; for the mind, whose source is heaven and whose pure fount is from the skies, cannot lie idle when it is freed from care. By imitation it fashions for itself images of many shapes, to enjoy a ghostly activity while it courses quickly through them. But by contrast terror troubles our thoughts in dreams. At times a brilliant light comes in upon them and gives us knowledge of things to be; often reality is scattered and a lying image makes our minds unhappy and afraid and deceives them with a dark obscurity. If a man's stains of guilty conduct are few and far between, him the clear, flashing light teaches secret things; but he who has polluted and befouled his heart with sins is the sport of many a fear and sees frightful visions. This our patriarch ^a

^a Genesis xl and xli.

PRUDENTIUS

hoc patriarcha noster sub carceris catena geminis simul ministris interpretis adprobavit,	60 quorum regressus unus dat poculum tyranno, ast alterum rapaces fixum vorant volucres.
ipsum deinde regem, perplexa somniantem, monuit famem futuram clausis cavere acervis.	65
mox praesul ac tetrarches regnum per omne iussus sociam tenere virgam, dominae resedit aulae.	70
o quam profunda iustis arcana per soporem aperit tuenda Christus, quam clara, quam tacenda!	75
evangelista summi fidissimus Magistri signata quae latebant nebulis videt remotis:	80 ipsum Tonantis agnum de caede purpurantem, qui conscium futuri librum resignat unus.
huius manum potentem gladius perafmat anceps, et fulgurans utrimque duplicem minatur ictum.	85
quaesitor ille solus animaeque corporisque,	90

THE DAILY ROUND, VI

proved by his interpretation to two ministers who were with him in the bondage of prison: the one is restored and again hands the cup to the king, but the other is hanged and the birds of prey devour him. Next he warned the king himself, when he dreamt a dream inscrutable, to provide against coming famine by shutting plenty up in store. Then was he made ruler and governor over all the kingdom and bidden to bear the sceptre in partnership, and he dwelt at the king's court. How deep the mysteries Christ lays open to the sight of the righteous in their sleep! How clear, and not to be uttered! The most faithful evangelist ^a of the great Master, when the clouds are dispelled, sees things that formerly were sealed in darkness: the very Lamb of the Thunderer, red from the slaughter, who alone unseals the book that has knowledge of things to be. His mighty hand is armed with a two-edged sword, and flashing this way and that it threatens two strokes at once. He alone is inquisitor of soul and body both, and the

^a Revelation v, 6-9.

PRUDENTIUS

ensisque bis timendus prima ac secunda mors est.
idem tamen benignus ultor retundit iram, paucosque non piorum patitur perire in aevum.	95
huic inclytus perenne tribuit Pater tribunal, hunc obtinere iussit nomen supra omne nomen.	100
hic praepotens cruenti extinctor Antichristi, qui de furente monstro pulchrum refert tropaeum.
quam bestiam capax populosque devorantem, quam sanguinis Charybdem Iohannis execratur;	105
hanc nempe, quae sacratum praeferre nomen ausa imam petit gehennam Christo perempta vero.	110
tali sopore iustus mentem relaxat heros, ut spiritu sagaci caelum peragret omne.	115
nos nil meremur horum, quos creber inplet error, concreta quos malarum vitiat cupido rerum.	120
sat est quiete dulci fessum fovere corpus; sat, si nihil sinistrum vanae minentur umbrae.

THE DAILY ROUND, VI

blade twice to be feared is the first and second death. Yet in kindness too the Avenger blunts the edge of His wrath, and suffers but few of the ungodly to perish for ever. To Him the illustrious Father has assigned the everlasting judgment-seat; Him He has commanded to hold a name above every name. He is the mighty destroyer of the bloody Antichrist, and over that raving monster wins a noble victory. This is the beast, which nothing can fill, which devours the nations, the blood-engulfing Charybdis that John curses; the beast that dared to boast the holy name and is slain by the true Christ and plunges to the depths of hell. Such is the sleep with which the righteous hero rests his mind, that with prophetic spirit it traverses the whole heaven. As for us, we merit none of these things, for many an error fills our heart, and a hardened desire for evil things corrupts us. It is enough with sweet repose to refresh the tired body, enough if unsubstantial phan-

PRUDENTIUS

cultor Dei, memento 125
te fontis et lavacri
rorem subisse sanctum,
te chrismate innotatum.

fac, cum vocante somno castum petis cubile, 130
frontem locumque cordis crucis figura signet.

crux pellit omne crimen,
fugiunt crucem tenebrae:
tali dicata signo 135
mens fluctuare nescit.

procul, o procul vagantum portenta somniorum, procul esto pervicaci
praestigiator actu. 140

o tortuose serpens,
qui mille per meandros
fraudesque flexuosas
agitas quieta corda, discede, Christus hic est, 145
hic Christus est, liquesce.

signum quod ipse nosti
damnat tuam catervam.
corpus licet fatiscens
iaceat recline paulum, 150 Christum tamen sub ipso meditabimur sopore.

VII

HYMNUS IEIUNANTIUM

O NAZARENE, lux Bethlem, Verbum Patris, quem partus alvi virginalis protulit,

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

toms threaten no ill. Worshipper of God, remember that thou has been washed in the holy water of baptism and marked with the holy oil. See that, when at the call of sleep thou seekest thy pure couch, the sign of the cross seals thy brow and the place where lies thy heart. The cross drives out every sin; before the cross darkness flees away; consecrated with this sign, the spirit cannot be unquiet. Away, away with the monstrosities of rambling dreams! Away with the deceiver and his persistent guile! O twining serpent that by a thousand winding ways and twisting deceptions dost disturb hearts at rest, depart, for Christ is here! Christ is here: vanish away! The sign thou thyself knowest condemns thy company. Though the weary body lie down for a little, yet even in sleep our thoughts shall be of Christ.

VII.

A HYMN OF THE FASTING

O NAZARENE, Light of Bethlehem, Word of the Father, offspring of a virgin's womb, be present, adesto castis, Christe, parsimoniis, festumque nostrum rex serenus aspice, ieiuniorum dum litamus victimam. 5

PRUDENTIUS

nil hoc profecto purius mysterio, quo fibra cordis expiatur vividi, intemperata quo domantur viscera, arvina putrem ne resudans crapulam obstrangulatae mentis ingenium premat. 10

hinc subiugatur luxur et turpis gula, vini atque somni degener socordia, libido sordens, invecundus lepos, variaeque pestes languidorum sensuum parcam subactae disciplinam sentiunt. 15 nam si licenter diffuens potu et cibo ieiuna rite membra non coerceat, sequitur frequenti marcida oblectamine scintilla mentis ut tepescat nobilis, animusque pigris stertat in praecordiis. 20

frenentur ergo corporum cupidines, detersa et intus emicet prudentia;
sic excitato perspicax acumine liberque flatu laxiore spiritus rerum parentem rectius precabitur. 25

Elia tali crevit observantia, vetus sacerdos, ruris hospes aridi, fragore ab omni quem remotum et segregem sprevisse tradunt criminum frequentiam, casto fruentem Syrtium silentio. 30

sed mox in auras igneis iugalibus curruque raptus evolavit praepete, ne de propinquo sordium contagio dirus quietum mundus afflaret virum olim probatis inclytum ieiuniis. 35

non ante caeli principem septemplex

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

Christ, at our pious acts of abstinence, and as our King look with favour on our holy day while we offer the sacrifice of our fast. Nothing surely is purer than this rite, whereby the heart is enlivened through the cleansing of its tissues, and the intemperate flesh subdued so that fat, exuding the stinking sweat of excess, shall not constrict and choke the mind. Hereby are conquered indulgence and shameful appetite, the debased sloth that comes of wine and slumber, filthy passion, immodest pleasantry, and all the plagues that dull our senses are put down and feel the discipline of restraint. For if uncurbed a man abandons himself to drinking and eating and does not duly control his body by fasting, then in the consequence the spark of the noble soul wastes and cools off by reason of constant indulgence, and the mind falls heavily asleep in the sluggish breast. Let the desires of our bodies, then, be bridled, and the clean flame of wisdom shine within us: so, with judgment awakened, the spirit will see clearly, it will have freedom and more room to breathe, and will pray better to the Father of all things. It was by such observance that Elias, the priest of old, grew strong, when he was a sojourner in a dry land, and they say that thus remote and separate from all the noise of the world he put from him a multitude of sins while he enjoyed the pure silence of the desert. But afterwards he was carried away by horses of fire in a swift-flying chariot and soared into the breezes, lest from the near contagion of filth the fell world should breathe upon a man at peace, whose fasts approved had given him renown. Moses,^a the faithful messenger of the awful throne, was not able

^a Cf. Exodus xxxiv, 28.

PRUDENTIUS

Moses tremendi fidus interpres throni potuit videre, quam decem recursibus quater volutis sol peragrans sidera omni carentem cerneret substantia. 40

victus precanti solus in lacrimis fuit;
 nam flendo pernox inrigatum pulverem humi madentis ore pressit cernuo, donec loquentis voce praestricus Dei expavit ignem non ferendum visibus. 45

Iohannis huius artis haud minus potens Dei perennis praecucurrit Filium, curvos viarum qui retorsit tramites, et flexuosa corrigens dispendia dedit sequendam calle recto lineam. 50

hanc obsequellam praeparabat nuntius mox adfuturo construens iter Deo, clivosa planis, confragosa ut lenibus converterentur, neve quidquam devium inlapsa terris inveniret veritas. 55

non usitatis ortus hic natalibus:
 oblita lactis iam vieto in pectore matris tetendit serus infans ubera, nec ante partu de senili effusus est quam praedicaret virginem plenam Deo. 60

post in patentes ille solitudines, amictus hirtis bestiarum pellicibus saetisve tectus hispida et lanugine, secessit, horrens inquinari et pollui contaminatis oppidorum moribus. 65

illic dicata parcus abstinentia potum cibumque vir severae industriae in usque serum respuebat vesperum, rarum lucustis et favorum agrestium liquore pastum corpori suetus dare. 70

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

to see the Lord of the sevenfold heavens till the sun in his passage through the constellations had rolled forty times on his returning path and beheld him lacking all sustenance. While he prayed, his only meat was in his tears; for with his weeping all night long he watered the dust and the ground was wet where he lay with face bowed low on it, until God spoke and His voice touched him and he trembled at the fire his eyes could not bear. John was no less a master of this power, he who went before the Son of the everlasting God, who made straight the crooked paths and by setting right the twisting ways gave a direct course to follow. This service the messenger made ready beforehand, making a way for God who was presently to come, so that the steep places should be changed to level and the rough places to smooth, and that Truth coming to the earth should find no devious way. No common birth was his: it was a late child that strained nipples that had forgotten their milk, on his mother's shrunken breast; and ere he was brought forth from her aged womb he proclaimed a virgin pregnant with God. Afterwards he withdrew into the wide solitudes, wrapped in shaggy skins of beasts or covered with rough hair and coarse wool, dreading defilement and corruption from the impure ways of towns. There, living sparsely with devoted abstinence, in his unremitting strictness he would put food and drink from him until the late time of evening, and used to give his body sustenance at these long intervals with locusts and the honey from wild honey-combs. He hortator ille primus et doctor novae fuit salutis. nam sacrato in flumine veterum piatas lavit errorum notas, sed tincta postquam membra defaecaverat, caelo refulgens influebat Spiritus. 75

PRUDENTIUS

hoc ex lavacro labe dempta criminum ibant renati, non secus quam si rudis auri recocta vena pulchrum splendeat, micet metalli sive lux argentei sudum polito prae nitens purgamine. 80

referre prisci stemma nunc ieiunii libet fideli proditum volumine, ut diruendae civitatis incolis fulmen benigni mansuefactum Patris pie repressis ignibus pepercerit. 85

gens insolenti praepotens iactantia pollebat olim, quam fluentem nequiter corrupta vulgo solverat lascivia, et inde bruto contumax fastidio cultum superni neglegebat numinis. 90

offensa tandem iugis indulgentiae censura iustis excitatur motibus, dextram perarmat rompheali incendio, nimbos crepantes et fragosos turbines vibrans tonantum nube flammaram quatit. 95

sed paenitendi dum datur diecula, si forte vellent inprobam libidinem veteresque nugas condomare ac frangere, suspendit ictum terror exorabilis, paulumque dicta substitit sententia. 100

Ionam prophetam mitis ultor excitat, poenae imminenti iret ut praenuntius, sed nosset ille qui minacem iudicem servare malle quam ferire ac plectere,

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

was the first preacher and teacher of the new salvation, for in the consecrated stream he washed clean the marks of old sins, but after he cleansed the tainted bodies the Spirit flowed shining into them from heaven. From this baptism, the stain of sin removed, men came reborn, shining as fair as does rough gold when it is refined, bright as the glistening sheen of silver ore when it is purified and polished. I will now recount the history of a fast in ancient times, a tale made known to us by the faithful Book, how the merciful Father's thunderbolt was appeased, its fires in love suppressed, and spared the inhabitants of a city that merited destruction. There flourished once a mighty and arrogant nation, given over to evil indulgence, and which in its debased wantonness had in the mass passed all restraint; wherefore being stiff-necked in its stupid pride, it was disregarding the worship of God on high. Justice ever merciful is at last offended and aroused in righteous wrath. It arms its right hand with a fiery sword and brandishes rattling storms and crashing whirlwinds in a cloud of fire and thunder. Yet giving them a brief space for repentance, if haply they might be willing to subdue and break their wicked lust and long-continued follies, the awful Judge, who is yet easily entreated, suspends the blow, the doom pronounced is for a little stayed. The merciful Avenger calls Jonah the prophet to go and proclaim impending punishment; but he, knowing that the Judge who threatened would rather save than strike and

PRUDENTIUS

- tectam latenter vertit in Tharsos fugam. 105
 celsam paratis pontibus scandit ratem, udo revincta fune puppis solvitur, itur per altum : fit procellosum mare, tum causa tanti quaeritur periculi, sors in fugacem missa vatem decedit. 110
 iussus perire solus e cunctis reus, cuius voluta crimen urna expresserat, praeceps rotatur et profundo inmergitur :
 exceptus inde beluinis faucibus, alvi capacis vivus hauritur specu. 115 transmissa raptim praeda cassos dentium eludit ictus incruentam transvolans inpune linguam, ne retentam mordicus offam molares dissecarent uvidi os omne transit, et palatum praeterit. 120 ternis dierum ac noctium processibus mansit ferino devoratus gutture ;
 errabat illic per latebras viscerum, ventris meandros circumibat tortiles anhelus extis intus aestuantibus. 125 intactus exim tertiae noctis vice monstri vomentis pellitur singultibus ;
 qua murmuranti fine fluctus frangitur salsosque candens spuma tundit pumices, ructatus exit seque servatum stupet. 130
 in Ninevitas se coactus percito gressu reflectit, quos ut increpaverat pudenda censor inputans opprobria,
 " inpendet " inquit " ira summi vindicis, urbemque flamma mox cremabit, credite." 135 apicem deinde ardui montis petit, visurus inde conglobatum turbidae fumum ruinae cladis et dirae struem,

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

punish, flees in secret and turns his steps privily to Tarshish. He embarks on a tall ship by the gangway standing ready; the wet mooring-rope cast off, the vessel sails and they make their way over the deep. But the sea grows stormy, and then search is made for the cause of the great peril, and the lot is cast and falls on the fugitive prophet. Arraigned, he alone of them all, and condemned to die, for the turning of the urn had made his guilt manifest, he is hurled headlong and plunged in the deep, caught then in a monster's jaws, and swallowed up alive in the vault of its great belly. Passing swiftly over, the prey escapes the futile stroke of the teeth, for he flies unhurt over the tongue without shedding of blood, so that the wet grinders cannot hold the morsel in their bite and break it in pieces; right through the mouth he passes, and beyond the palate. While three days and nights went by he remained engulfed in the beast's maw, wandering there in the darkness of its inward parts, round and round the tortuous windings of its guts, his breath choking with the heat of the entrails. From thence, when the third night comes round, the monster retching spews him out unharmed; where the wave breaks at its loud-sounding close and the white spray beats on the briny rocks he is belched out, amazed at his preservation. Back to Nineveh perforce he turns with quickened step, and after upbraiding and censuring its people, laying their shameful misdeeds to their charge, he cries: "The wrath of the great Judge hangs over you and will presently burn your city with fire, believe ye." Then he makes for the peak of a high mountain, to see from there the thick smoke arise from the jumbled ruin, and the city in a heap of dire destruction, while tectus flagellis multinodis germinis, nato et repente perfruens umbraculo. 140

PRUDENTIUS

sed maesta postquam civitas vulnus novi hausit doloris, heu, supremum palpitat :
cursant per ampla congregatim moenia plebs et senatus, omnis aetas civium, pallens iuventus, eiulantes feminae. 145

placet frementem publicis ieiuniis placare Christum ; mos edendi spernitur, glaucos amictus induit monilibus matrona demptis, proque gemma et serico crinem fluentem sordidus spargit cinis. 150 squalent recincta veste pullati patres, saetasque plangens turba sumit textiles, inpexa villis virgo bestialibus nigrante vultum contegit velamine, iacens harenis et puer provolvitur. 155

rex ipse Coos aestuantem murices laenam revulsa dissipabat fibula, gemmas virentes et lapillos sutiles insigne frontis exuebat vinculum, turpi capillos inpeditus pulvere. 160

nullus bibendi, nemo vescendi memor, ieiuna mensas pubis omnis liquerat :
quin et negato lacte vagientium fletu madescent parvulorum cunulae, sucum papillae parca nutrix derogat. 165

greges et ipsos claudit armentalium sollers virorum cura, ne vagum pecus contingat ore rorulenta gramina, potum strepentis neve fontis hauriat ;
vacuis querellae personant praesepibus. 170

mollitus his et talibus brevem Deus iram refrenat temperans oraculum

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

he shelters under the shoots of a plant that sprouts from many a joint and enjoys a shade that of a sudden has grown up.^a But ah! the saddened people, pierced by grief not known before, is in the agony of death. Commons and councillors, citizens of every age, young men with pale faces, wailing women, rush to and fro in crowds all about the wide city. Resolved to appease the angry Christ with public fasts, they put the habit of eating from them; the matron, taking off her necklaces, dons dark vestures, and instead of jewels and silk foul ashes besprinkle her flowing hair. The fathers wear the dark robes of mourning all ungirt, the common crowd in lamentation put on coarse haircloth, the maids, with hair unkempt and shaggy like a beast's, cover their faces with black veils, the children lie rolling in the sand. The king himself, pulling away the clasp, tore in pieces his mantle that had the glow of Coan purple, put off his bright jewels, his band of precious stones, the emblem that clasped his brows, and cluttered his hair with unsightly dust. None had any thought of drinking or of eating; the whole manhood had turned from the table to fasting; nay, the cradles are wet with the tears of little ones crying because milk is denied them, for the niggard nurse withdraws the liquor of the breast. The very flocks the herdsmen take shrewd care to enclose, lest roaming at large the cattle put their lips to the dewy grass or drink a draught from the brawling stream, and the sound of their complaints fills the foodless stalls. Softened by these and the like acts, God restrains His short-lived anger and turns propitious, mitigating

^a Cf. Jonah iv, 5-6.

PRUDENTIUS

prosper sinistrum; prona nam clementia haud difficulter supplicem mortalium solvit reatum fitque fautrix flentium. 175

sed cur vetustae gentis exemplum loquor, pridem caducis cum gravatus artubus Iesus dicato corde ieiunaverit, praenuncupatus ore qui prophetico Emmanuel est, sive "nobiscum Deus"? 180

qui corpus istud molle naturaliter, captumque laxo sub voluptatum iugo, virtutis arta lege fecit liberum, emancipator servientis plasmatis, regnantis ante victor et cupidinis. 185

inhospitali namque secretus loco quinis diebus octies labentibus nullam ciborum vindicavit gratiam, firmans salubri scilicet ieiunio vas adpetendis inbecillum gaudiis. 190

miratus hostis posse limum tabidum tantum laboris sustinere ac perpeti explorat arte sciscitator callida deusne membris sit receptus terreis, sed increpata fraude post tergum ruit. 195

hoc nos sequamur quisque nunc pro viribus, quod consecrati tu magister dogmatis tuis dedisti, Christe, sectatoribus, ut, cum vorandi vicerit libidinem, late triumphet imperator spiritus. 200

hoc est quod atri livor hostis invidet, mundi polique quod gubernator probat, altaris aram quod facit placabilem, quod dormientis excitat cordis fidem, quod limat aegram pectoris rubiginem. 205

perfusa non sic amne flamma extinguitur,

THE DAILY ROUND, VII

His awful sentence; for His ready mercy willingly cancels the guilt of men when they humble themselves, and shows favour to their tears. But why do I speak of the example of an ancient race, seeing that Jesus, long since, when He was burdened with a mortal body, fasted with consecrated heart, He who was aforetime by the mouth of the prophet named Emmanuel, God with us? This body, which is by nature weak and a prisoner under the lawless tyranny of pleasures, He set at liberty by the strict law of virtue; He gave freedom to the enslaved flesh and conquered the passion that held sway before. For, living remote in an inhospitable place, while forty days passed, He never claimed the pleasant taste of food, but with wholesome fasting strengthened the vessel which is enfeebled by its seeking after joys. The enemy, wondering that perishing clay can sustain and endure such effort, tries to find out by cunning artful inquiry whether it is God that has been received in an earthly body; but his trickery is rebuked and he flees behind Christ's back. Let us now follow, each according to his strength, this that Thou, O Christ, the teacher of holy doctrine, hast given to Thy followers, that the spirit, being in command and having overcome the lust of eating, may triumph over all the field. This it is that earns the black enemy's malice and spite, this that wins the approval of Him who rules earth and heaven, that makes the altar of sacrifice propitious, awakens faith in the sleeping heart, and clears away the unhealthy blight from our breasts. Not so surely does

PRUDENTIUS

nec sic calente sole tabescunt nives, ut turbidarum scabra culparum seges vanescit almo trita sub ieiunio, si blanda semper misceatur largitas.	210
est quippe et illud grande virtutis genus, operire nudos, indigentes pascere, opem benignam ferre supplicantibus, unam paremque sortis humanae vicem inter potentes atque egenos ducere.	215
satis beatus quisque dextram porrigit laudis rapacem, prodigam pecuniae, cuius sinistra dulce factum nesciat: illum perennes protinus complent opes, ditatque fructus faenerantem centiplex.	220

VIII

HYMNUS POST IEIUNIUM

CHRISTE, servorum regimen tuorum, mollibus qui nos moderans habenis leniter frenas, facilique saeptos lege coerces, ipse cum portans onus inpeditum corporis duros tuleris labores, maior exemplis famulos remisso dogmate palpas.	5
nona summissum rotat hora solem, partibus vixdum tribus evolutis, quarta devexo superest in axe portio lucis.	10
nos brevis voti dape vindicata solvimus festum, fruimurque mensis adfatum plenis, quibus inbuatur prona voluptas.	15

THE DAILY ROUND, VIII

water put out fire, or the snows melt in the heat of the sun, as the unclean crop of rebellious sins vanishes under the cleansing of a restoring fast, if kindly liberality be ever joined with it. For it is a noble form of virtue too, to clothe the naked, feed the needy, give kindly aid to them that beg for it, hold that rich and poor share one and the same humanity. Blest enough the man who holds out a right hand that grasps at merit but is lavish of money, whose left hand knows not the kind deed: him everlasting wealth straightway satisfies, and profit an hundred-fold on his lending makes him rich.

VIII

A HYMN AFTER FASTING

CHRIST, the director of Thy servants, who dost govern us with light rein and gentle curb and dost hedge and restrain us with an easy law, since Thou Thyself whilst bearing the cumbering burden of the body didst endure hardship, Thy example makes Thee greater, and Thy hand is light on Thy servants and Thy decree is mild. The ninth hour is wheeling the sun on his downward course, scarce yet has the daylight three parts rolled away, and the fourth still is left in the down-sloping sky; we, taking our meat, break off the observance of our short vow and let eager appetite enjoy its first taste of the table's

PRUDENTIUS

tantus aeterni favor est Magistri, doctor indulgens ita nos amico lactat hortatu, levis obsequella ut mulceat artus.	20
addit et ne quis velit invenusto sordidus cultu lacerare frontem, sed decus vultus capitisque pexum comat honorem.
“ terge ieiunans ” ait “ omne corpus, neve subducto faciem rubore luteus tinguat color aut notetur pallor in ore.”	25
rectius laeto tegimus pudore quidquid ad cultum Patris exhibemus; cernit occultum Deus et latentem munere donat.	30
ille ovem morbo residem gregique perditam sano, male dissipantem vellus adfixis vepribus per hirtae devia silvae	35
inpiger pastor revocat lupisque gestat exclusis umeros gravatus, inde purgatam revehens aprico reddit ovili,	40
reddit et pratis viridique campo, vibrat inpexis ubi nulla lappis spina, nec germen sudibus perarmat carduus horrens, sed frequens palmis nemus, et reflexa vernatur herbarum coma, tum perennis gurgitem vivis vitreum fluentis laurus obumbrat.	45
hisce pro donis tibi, fide pastor, servitus quaenam poterit rependi?	50

THE DAILY ROUND, VIII

abundant plenty. Such favour does our eternal Teacher show us, with exhortation so friendly does our kind Instructor draw us on, that the light obedience is comfortable to the flesh. He commands, too, that none clothe himself in dismal, untidy garb and disfigure his brows, but that we comb and dress our hair, which is the ornament of our countenance, the glory of our head.^a "Cleanse thy whole body," He saith, "when thou fastest; and let not thy cheeks lose their redness and wear a yellow hue, nor a pale cast be marked on thy face." Better is it to cover with a cheerful modesty anything that we do for the honour of the Father: God sees that which is in secret, and rewards him who acts by stealth. When a sheep lags behind because it is sick, and is lost from the healthy flock, wasting its wool by catching on thorny bushes along unfrequented ways in the rough woodland, He as a tireless Shepherd calls it again, and driving off the wolves, takes the load on His shoulders and carries it, and so brings it home cleansed and restores it to the sunny fold; restores it to the meadows too, and the green field, where no rough, prickly burs quiver and no bristling thistle arms its shoots with spikes, but the grove is filled with palms, the bending leaves of grass flourish, and the glassy stream of running water is shaded with evergreen bay. For these gifts, O faithful Shepherd, what service can ever be repaid

^a Cf. Matthew vi, 16-18.

PRUDENTIUS

nulla compensant pretium salutis vota precantum.
quamlibet spreto sine more pastu sponte confectos tenuemus artus teque contemptis epulis rogemus 55
nocte dieque,
vincitur semper minor obsequentum cura nec munus genitoris aequat, frangit et cratem luteam laboris grandior usus. 60
ergo ne limum fragilem solutae deserant vires et aquosus albis umor in venis dominetur aegrum corpus enervans,
laxus ac liber modus abstinendi 65
ponitur cunctis, neque nos severus terror inpellit; sua quemque cogit velle potestas.
sufficit, quidquid facias, vocato numinis nutu prius inchoare, 70 sive tu mensam renuas cibumve sumere temptes.
adnuit dexter Deus et secundo prosperat vultu, velut hoc salubre fidimus nobis fore, quod dicatas 75 carpimus escas.
sit bonum, supplex precor, et medellam conferat membris animumque pascat sparsus in venas cibus obsecrantum Christicolarum.

THE DAILY ROUND, VIII

to Thee? No vows that we can offer in our prayers can make up for the price of salvation. Though we should turn utterly from food, and of our own will weaken and mortify our bodies, and disdaining the table pray to Thee night and day, yet the zeal with which we serve Thee is ever inferior and over-matched and cannot equal the Father's gift, and our frame of clay cannot bear to practise endurance overmuch. Therefore, lest our strength be undone and desert the frail clay, and a watery fluid prevail in whitened veins, enfeebling and unmanning the body, an easy and free measure of abstinence is laid on all; no stern fear drives us; it is each one's own power that constrains him to be willing. Sufficient is it, whatever a man does, to set about it after first appealing for God's approval, whether he refuse the table or put forth his hand to take food. God is propitious and with favourable countenance gives consent and blessing; as now we trust it will be healthful for us that we eat of these dedicated viands. Humbly I ask that our act be good for us and that our food, spreading into the veins, may bring healing to the body and nourish the spirit of Christ's worshippers who offer this prayer.

PRUDENTIUS

IX

HYMNUS OMNIS HORAE

DA, puer, plectrum, choreis ut canam fidelibus dulce carmen et melodum, gesta Christi insignia.
hunc Camena nostra solum pangat, hunc laudet lyra.

Christus est, quem rex sacerdos adfuturum protinus

infulatus concinebat voce, chorda et tympano, 5 spiritum caelo influentem per medullas hauriens.

facta nos et iam probata pangimus miracula.
testis est orbis, nec ipsa terra quod vidit negat, comminus Deum docendis proditum mortalibus.

corde natus ¹ ex parentis ante mundi exordium, 10 alpha et Ω cognominatus, ipse fons et clausula omnium quae sunt, fuerunt, quaeque post futura sunt.

ipse iussit, et creata, dixit ipse, et facta sunt terra, caelum, fossa ponti, trina rerum machina, quaeque in his vigent sub alto solis et lunae globo. 15 corporis formam caduci, membra morti obnoxia induit, ne gens periret primoplasti ex germine, merserat quem ² lex profundo noxialis Tartaro.

o beatus ortus ille, virgo cum puerpera edidit nostram salutem feta Sancto Spiritu, 20 et puer redemptor orbis os sacratum protulit.

psallat altitudo caeli, psallite omnes angeli, quidquid est virtutis usquam psallat in laudem Dei,

nulla linguarum silescat, vox et omnis consonet.
ecce, quem vates vetustis concinebant saeculis, 25

¹ fusus in the Ambrosian MS. (B).

THE DAILY ROUND, IX

IX

A HYMN FOR EVERY HOUR

GIVE me my quill, page, that in loyal trochees I may sing a sweet, tuneful song of the glorious deeds of Christ. He alone shall be my Muse's theme, Him alone my lyre shall praise. Christ it is whose speedy coming the priest-king in his priestly vestment sang with sound of voice and string and tambour, drinking deep the inspiration that flowed on him from heaven. Of wonders done and proved we sing; the world is witness, the very earth denies not that which it has seen, God made manifest to men to teach them in His own person. Born of the Father's love before the world's beginning, called Alpha and Omega, He is both source and end of all things that are or have been or hereafter shall be. He gave the word and they were created, He spoke and they were made—earth, heavens, the deep sea, the threefold fabric of the world, and all that lives in them under the lofty globes of sun and moon. He put on the shape of mortal body, members doomed to die, so that the race that sprang from the first man's stock should not perish though the law of sin had plunged him deep in hell. O blessed birth, when a virgin in labour, having conceived by the Holy Spirit, brought forth our salvation, and the child who is the world's Redeemer revealed His sacred face! Let high heaven sing, sing all ye angels, let every power in every place sing to the praise of God, let no tongue keep silence, and every voice sound in concert. Lo, He whom seers in ancient times foretold, and the ² quam some MSS. of class B.

PRUDENTIUS

quem prophetarum fideles paginae spoponderant, emicat promissus olim: cuncta conlaudent eum.

cantharis infusa lympa fit Falernum nobile, nuntiat vinum minister esse promptum ex hydria, ipse rex sapore tinctis obstupescit poculis. 30

“ membra morbis ulcerosa, viscerum putredines mando ut abluantur ” inquit: fit ratum quod iusserat;

turgidam cutem repurgant vulnerum piamina.

tu perennibus tenebris iam sepulta lumina inlinis limo salubri sacri et oris nectare: 35

mox apertis hac medella lux reducta est orbibus.

increpas ventum furentem quod procellis tristibus vertat aequor fundo ab imo, vexet et vagam ratem:
ille iussis obsecundat, mitis unda sternitur.

extimum vestis sacratae furtim mûlier attigit: 40 protinus salus secuta est, ora pallor deserit, sistitur rivus cruore qui fluebat perpeti.

exitu dulcis iuventae raptum ephebum viderat, orba quem mater supremis funerabat fletibus; “ surge ” dixit: ille surgit, matri et adstans redditur. 45

sole iam quarto carentem, iam sepulcro abscon-ditum

Lazarum iubet vigere reddito spiramine:

foetidum iecur reductus rursus intrat halitus.

ambulat per stagna ponti, summa calcat fluctuum:

mobilis liquor profundi pēndulam praestat viam, 50
nec fatiscit unda sanctis pressa sub vestigiis.

suetus antro bustuali sub catenis frendere, mentis inpos, efferatis percitus furoribus prosilit ruitque supplex, Christum adesse ut sen-serat.

THE DAILY ROUND, IX

faithful pages of the prophets pledged, comes forth, promised of old : let all things join in praise of Him. Water poured into tankards is changed to noble wine ; the servant tells how the wine was drawn from the water-pot, and the very master of the feast is amazed at the taste that flavours the cups. " Bodies diseased and ulcerous, festering flesh I command," saith He, " to be washed " ; His bidding is done, and the cleansing of the wounds makes the swollen skin pure. Eyes buried in perpetual darkness Thou dost anoint with healing clay and the nectar of Thy sacred mouth, and presently by this cure their orbs are opened and light restored to them. Thou dost rebuke the raging wind for upturning the sea from its very depths with fearful blasts, and tossing the ship without rest ; it obeys Thy bidding and the wave sinks calmed. A woman has stealthily touched the edge of Thy holy garment, and straightway healing has come ; the pallor leaves her cheek, the ever-flowing stream of blood is stayed. He saw a young man cut off just at the passing of sweet youth, the bereaved mother bearing him to the grave with tears of farewell : " Arise," He said ; and he rises and stands restored by his mother's side. To Lazarus, now four days shut sunless in the tomb, He gives again the power to breathe and bids him live, and the breath restored enters again into the decaying flesh. He walks over the waters of the sea, treading on the surface of the flood, and the restless deep holds up a pathway, the wave sinks not under the holy footsteps. One that was wont to dwell in chains in a tomb-cavern, gnashing his teeth, out of his mind, driven by wild frenzies, leaps forth and flings himself on his knees when he sees that Christ

PRUDENTIUS

pulsa pestis lubricorum milleformis daemonum 55 corripit gregis suilli sordida spurcamina, seque nigris mergit undis et pecus lymphaticum.

ferte qualis ter quaternis ferculorum fragmina;
adfatis referta iam sunt adcubantum milia quinque panibus peresis et gemellis piscibus. 60

tu cibus panisque noster, tu perennis suavitas;
nescit esurire in aevum qui tuam sumit dapem, nec lacunam ventris inplet, sed fovet vitalia.

clausus aurium meatus et sonorum nescius purgat ad praecepta Christi crassa quaeque obstacula, 65
vocibus capax fruendis ac susurris peryius.

omnis aegritudo cedit, languor omnis pellitur, lingua fatur, quam veterna vinxerant silentia, gestat et suum per urbem laetus aeger lectulum.

quin et ipsum, ne salutis inferi expertes forent, 70 Tartarum benignus intrat; fracta cedit ianua, vectibus cadit revulsis cardo dissolubilis.¹

illa prompta ad inruentes, ad revertentes tenax, obice extrorsum recluso ² porta reddit mortuos, lege versa, et limen atrum iam recalcandum patet. 75

sed Deus dum luce fulva mortis antra inluminat, dum stupentibus tenebris candidum praestat diem, tristia squalentis aethrae palluerunt sidera.

sol refugit et lugubri sordidus ferrugine igneum reliquit axem seque maerens abdidit; 80 fertur horruisse mundus noctis aeternae chaos.

¹ indissolubilis in some MSS. of both classes.

THE DAILY ROUND, IX

is nigh: driven out, the thousand-formed plague of treacherous devils seizes upon an unclean, filthy herd of swine and plunges itself and the maddened beasts together in the black waters. Bring ye in baskets twelve the fragments left from the feast; the guests in their thousands are now amply filled with the eating of five loaves of bread and a pair of fishes. Thou art our meat and our bread, Thou our sweet savour that never fails; he can never hunger any more who partakes of Thy banquet, not filling a void in his belly but refreshing that by which he truly lives. The closed avenue of the ears, that knows no sound, clears away at Christ's bidding all its thick obstructions and gains the power to enjoy voices and give passage to whispers. Every sickness yields, every weakness is banished, the tongue speaks that had been tied in torpid silence, and the sick man carries his bed rejoicing through the city. Yea, lest those below should have no part in salvation, in His goodness He enters Tartarus. The door is forced and yields before Him; the bolts are torn away, down falls the pivot broken; that gate so ready to receive the inrush, so unyielding in face of those that would return, is unbarred and gives back the dead; the law is reversed, and the black doorway stands open to be retrodden. But while God with golden light was illumining the vaults of death, giving bright day to the astounded night, the sky was darkened and the stars dimmed in sadness; the sun fled, clad in the gloom of mourning, from the fiery heavens, and in sorrow hid himself away. 'Tis said the world shuddered in fear of the darkness of eternal night.

² revulso A, reculso B (Bergman).

PRUDENTIUS

solve vocem, mens sonora, solve linguam mobilem,

dic tropaeum passionis, dic triumphalem crucem, pange vexillum notatis quod refulget frontibus.

o novum caede stupenda vulneris miraculum ! 85 hinc cruoris fluxit unda, lympa parte ex altera ;
lympa nempe dat lavacrum, tum corona ex sanguine est.

vidit anguis inmolatam corporis sacri hostiam, vidit, et fellis perusti mox venenum perdidit, saucius dolore multo, colla fractus sibila.¹ 90

quid tibi, profane serpens, profuit rebus novis plasma primum perculisse versipelli hortamine ?² diluit culpam recepto forma mortalis Deo.

ad brevem se mortis usum dux salutis dedit, mortuos olim sepultos ut redire insuēsceret, 95 dissolutis pristinorum vinculis peccaminum.

tunc patres sanctique multi conditorem praeivum iam revertentem secuti tertio demum die carnis indumenta sumunt, eque bustis prodeunt.

cerneres coire membra de favillis aridis, 100 frigidum venis resumptis pulverem tepescere, ossa, nervos, et medullas glutino cutis tegi.

post, ut occasum resolvit vitae et hominem reddidit,

arduum tribunal alti victor ascendit Patris, inclytam caelo reportans passionis gloriam. 105

macte iudex mortuorum, macte rex viventium, dexter in parentis arce qui cluis virtutibus, omnium venturus inde iustus ultor criminum.

¹ So the two oldest MSS. A and B; cf. Virgil, Geo. III, 421, Aen. V, 277. Most of the others used by Bergman have sibilat.

THE DAILY ROUND, IX

Release thy voice, my tuneful heart, release thy nimble tongue. Tell of the victory of the passion, tell of the triumphant cross, sing of the glittering ensign marked upon our brows. How strange the marvel of the wound in His amazing death! Here flowed a stream of blood, there water: water gives washing, and the crown is won with blood. The serpent saw the sacred body offered in sacrifice, saw, and straightway lost the venom of his inflamed gall; smitten he was with sore distress, his hissing throat shattered. What has it bootéd thee, thou wicked serpent, when the world was new, to have brought the first-created man to ruin with thy crafty incitement? The mortal frame has washed its guilt away by receiving God. The leader of our salvation gave Himself up to a short experience of death, that He might teach the dead long buried to return, by breaking the bonds of their former sins. Then many a patriarch and saint, following their creator's lead as He now returned on the third day, put on the garment of flesh and came forth from their tombs. There were the limbs assembling out of the dry ashes, the cold dust taking veins again and growing warm, the bones and sinews and innermost parts being covered with binding skin. Then, when He had annulled death and restored man to life, He ascended in victory the lofty judgment-seat of the Father on high, carrying back to heaven the illustrious glory of His passion. Glory be to Thee, judge of the dead and king of the living, who on Thy Father's throne at His right hand art renowned for Thy merits, and shalt come from thence to be the righteous avenger of all sins. Thee let ² astutia A (Bergman).

PRUDENTIUS

te senes et te iuventus, parvulorum te chorus, turba matrum virginumque, simplices puellulae, 110
voce concordēs pudicis perstrepat concentibus.

fluminum lapsus et undae, litorum crepidines, imber, aestus, nix, pruina, silva et aura, nox, dies omnibus te concelebrent saeculorum saeculis.

X

HYMNUS CIRCA EXEQUIAS DEFUNCTI

DEUS, ignee fons animarum, duo qui socians elementa,
vivum simul ac moribundum, hominem, Pater, effigiasti, et tua sunt, tua, rector, utraque, 5 tibi copula iungitur horum, tibi dum vegetata cohaerent et spiritus et caro servit.
rescissa ¹ sed ista seorsum solvunt hominem perimuntque; 10
humus excipit arida corpus,
animae rapit aura liquorem;
quia cuncta creata necesse est

¹ In the oldest MS. A (followed by Bergman) lines 9–16 are as follows:

resoluta sed ista seorsum propriis revocantur in ortus;
petit halitus aëra fervens,
humus excipit arida corpus.
sic cuncta creata necesse est obitum tolerare supremum, ut semina dissociata
sibi sumat origo resorbens.

Some other MSS. have both versions, or the A version, in whole or part, added in the margin.

THE DAILY ROUND, X

old men and young, Thee the choir of little children, the company of mothers and maidens and artless girls praise with loud, harmonious voice in pure strains together. Let the gliding waters of the rivers, the shores of the seas, rain, heat, snow, frost, woodland and wind, night and day unite to extol Thee for ever and ever.

X

A HYMN ON THE BURIAL OF THE DEAD

God, the burning source of spirits, who, by uniting two elements, one living and one dying, together, didst in Thy Fatherhood create man, Thine, O Ruler, Thine are both; it is for Thee the bond is drawn between them; Thee, while they cleave together in quickening life, both soul and flesh serve. But ^a their sundering apart is the dissolution and the end of man: the dry earth receives his body, the breath of air carries off the pure spirit; for all that is created

^a Lines 9-16 according to the text of A: "But when they are disjoined one from the other they are called back each to its source; the glowing spirit seeks the heavens, the dry earth receives the body. All that is created must needs suffer death at the end in such wise that the elements are parted and their original draws them back into itself." It is plausibly suggested that this was recast because it savours too much of pagan philosophies. Though the text followed above is preserved in much later MSS. (the Ambrosian 7th century MS. fails us here), it does not read like the work of a late interpolator, and it probably represents a revision by Prudentius himself.

PRUDENTIUS

labefacta senescere tandem, compactaque dissociari, 15 et dissona texta retexi.

hanc tu, Deus optime, mortem famulis abolere paratus, iter inviolabile monstras, quo perdita membra resurgant, 20
ut, dum generosa caducis, ceu carcere clausa, ligantur,
pars illa potentior extet, quae germen ab aethere traxit.

si terrea forte voluntas 25
luteum sapit et grave captat, animus quoque pondere victus sequitur sua membra deorsum.

at si generis memor ignis contagia pigra recuset, 30 vehit hospita viscera secum, pariterque reportat ad astra.

nam quod requiescere corpus vacuum sine mente videmus, spatium breve restat, ut alti 35
repetat collegia sensus.

venient cito saecula, cum iam socius calor ossa revisat animataque sanguine vivo habitacula pristina gestet. 40

quae pigra cadavera pridem tumulis putrefacta iacebant, volucres rapientur in auras, animas comitata priores.

hinc maxima cura sepulcris 45 inpenditur, hinc resolutos honor ultimus accipit artus

THE DAILY ROUND, X

must needs at last grow weak and waste away, all that is joined together be separated, every fabric of contrary parts be undone. This death, O good God, Thou art ready to do away for Thy servants, and dost show them an indestructible path whereby bodies that have perished shall rise again, that so long as the noble is bound up with the mortal, as it were imprisoned, that part may prove the stronger which has drawn its source from heaven. If haply the earthly longing savours the mire and seeks after that which is gross, the spirit too is overcome by the weight and follows its bodily members downwards; but should the fire, remembering its origin, reject the numbing contagion, it carries with it the flesh with which it has sojourned, and takes it, too, home to the stars. For whereas we see the body lying at rest bereft of the spirit, there remains but a short time ere it seek again its union with the soul on high. Soon will come the time when the warmth that bore them company shall return to the bones, and wear again its old dwelling quickened with living blood. Bodies that long lay dead and still and mouldering in their tombs will be carried into the flying breezes in company with their former souls. This is why we spend such great care on graves, this is why the last honour awaits the lifeless frame and the

PRUDENTIUS

et funeris ambitus ornat, candore nitentia claro praetendere lintea mos est, 50 aspersaque myrrha Sabaeo corpus medicamine servat.

quidnam sibi saxa cavata, quid pulchra volunt monumenta, nisi quod res creditur illis 55 non mortua, sed data somno?

hoc provida Christicolarum pietas studet, utpote credens fore protinus omnia viva quae nunc gelidus sopor urget. 60

qui iacta cadavera passim miserans tegit aggere terræ, opus exhibet ille benignum Christo pius omnipotenti, quia lex eadem monet omnes 65 gemitum dare sorte sub una, cognataque funera nobis aliena in morte dolere.

sancti sator ille Tobiae, sacer ac venerabilis heros, 70 dapibus iam rite paratis ius praetulit exequiarum.

iam stantibus ille ministris cyathos et fercula liquit, studioque accinctus humandi 75
 fletu dedit ossa sepulcro.

veniunt mox praemia caelo, pretiumque rependitur ingens;
 nam lumina nescia solis deus inlita felle serenat. 80

iam tunc docuit Pater orbis

THE DAILY ROUND, X

funeral procession graces it, why it is our custom to spread over it linen cloths of gleaming whiteness, and sprinkled myrrh with its Sabaeen drug preserves the body. What mean the chambered rocks, the noble monuments, but that something is entrusted to them which is not dead but given up to sleep? This earnest care the provident piety of Christ's followers takes because they believe that all that are now sunk in cold slumber will presently be alive. He who finds bodies lying unheeded and in pity covers them with a mound of earth ^a offers in love a work of kindness to Christ the all-powerful; for the same law bids us all mourn as under a common lot, and in a stranger's death to grieve for the loss of our own kin. The father of saintly Tobias,^b a holy and reverend worthy, though his meal was in readiness, gave preference over it to the claims of burial. Though his servants stood ready in their places, he left cups and dishes behind, and with all his mind on the interment, laid the bones in the grave with tears. Presently comes his reward from heaven, and he is requited with a great price; for when his eyes, which knew not the Sun, have been smeared with gall God enlightens them. Even then the Father of the world taught how sharp and bitter is ^a Cf. Tobit i, 18-19.

^b Tobit ii.

PRUDENTIUS

quam sit rationis egenis mordax et amara medella, cum lux animum nova vexat.

docuit quoque non prius ullum 85
caelestia cernere regna quam nocte et vulnere tristi toleraverit aspera mundi.

mors ipsa beatior inde est, quod per cruciamina leti 90
via panditur ardua iustis, et ad astra doloribus itur.

sic corpora mortificata redeunt melioribus annis, nec post obitum recalescens 95 compago fatiscere novit. “

haec, quae modo pallida tabo color albidus inficit, ora tunc flore venustior omni sanguis cute tinguet amoena. 100

iam nulla deinde senectus frontis decus invida carpet, macies neque sicca lacertos suco tenuabit adeso.

Morbus quoque pestifer, artus 105
qui nunc populatur anhelos, sua tunc tormenta resudans luet inter vincula mille.

hunc eminus aëre ab alto victrix caro, iamque perennis, 110 cernet sine fine gementem quos moverat ipse dolores.

quid turba superstes inepta clangens ululamina miscet?
cur tam bene condita iura 115

THE DAILY ROUND, X

the remedy for them that want reason, when the new light makes the mind smart.^a He taught too that no man sees the heavenly kingdom ere in darkness and sore hurt he has borne the adversities of the world. Therefore is death itself more blessed, in that through the pains of death a way on high is opened for the righteous and by their sufferings they pass to the skies. Thus bodies that have perished return in better days, and the frame growing warm again after its decease cannot any more decline. These cheeks which now are wan and white with wasting shall then have beauteous skin tinged with the bloom of blood more charming than any flower. No longer then shall jealous age steal away the grace of the brow, nor withered leanness consume the sap of the arms and leave them shrunken. Baleful Disease too, which now wastes our panting frames, will then in sweat suffer the penalty of his own torments in a thousand bonds.^b From high heaven, far off, the flesh, victorious and now immortal, shall see him bemoaning without end the very pains himself had caused before. Why does the band of survivors join in a loud noise of foolish lamentation, and senseless grief in its mourning blame laws so surely

^a Tobit xi, 7-13.

^b Morbus, personified as by Virgil at Aeneid VI, 275 (cf. Cicero, De Natura Deorum III, 44), is here probably identified with Satan; morbus often has a moral sense (= vitium).

PRUDENTIUS

luctu dolor arguit amens?
 iam maesta quiesce querella, lacrimas suspendite, matres:
 nullus sua pignera plangat, mors haec reparatio vitae est. 120

sic semina sicca virescunt iam mortua, iamque sepulta, quae reddita caespite ab imo veteres meditantur aristas.

nunc suscipe, terra, fovendum, 125 gremioque hunc concipe molli:
 hominis tibi membra sequestro,
 generosa et fragmina credo.

animae fuit haec domus olim factoris¹ ab ore creatae; “ 130 fervens habitavit in istis Sapientia principe Christo.

tu depositum tege corpus;
 non inmemor ille requiret sua munera fictor et auctor 135 propriique aenigmata vultus.

veniant modo tempora iusta, cum spem Deus inpleat omnem, reddas patefacta necesse est qualem tibi trado figuram. 140

non, si cariosa vetustas dissolverit ossa favillis, fueritque cinisculus arens minimi mensura pugilli, nec, si vaga flamina et aerae 145 vacuum per inane volantes tulerint cum pulvere nervos, hominem periisse licebit.

sed dum resolvable corpus

THE DAILY ROUND, X

established? Be silent now, sad plaint; stay your tears, ye mothers. Let none lament for his dear ones, for this death is the renewal of life. It is thus that dry seeds shoot forth green after they are dead and buried, and, being restored from the depths of the ground, repeat the harvests of former years. Receive now, earth, this our brother into thy care, take him to thy gentle bosom. It is a man's body I leave in thy keeping; nobly born the remains that I commit to thy trust. This was once the home of a soul created from its Maker's mouth; in these remains dwelt glowing Wisdom, whose head is Christ. Do thou cover the body entrusted to thee; He who is its maker and author will not forget it, and will seek again that which He gave, the image of His own countenance. Come the just time when God shall fulfil every hope, thou must needs be opened up and give back the form, such as I give it up to thee. Never, though time's decay reduce the bones to dust, and the dry and scanty ashes be but the measure of a very little handful, never, though the inconstant winds, the breezes that fly through the empty void, carry the flesh away and leave no speck behind, will the man be allowed to have perished. But till Thou

¹ cui nobilis ex Patre fons est ACD (Bergman).

PRUDENTIUS

revocas, Deus, atque reformas,	150
quanam regione iubebis animam requiescere puram ?
gremio senis addita sancti recubabit, ut est Eleazar,
quem floribus undique saeptum	155
dives procul aspicit ardens.
sequimur tua dicta, Redemptor, quibus atra e morte triumphans tua per vestigia mandas
socium crucis ire latronem.	160
patet ecce fidelibus ampli via lucida iam paradisi, licet et nemus illud adire, homini quod ademerat anguis.
illic, precor, optime ductor,	165
famulam tibi praecipe mentem genitali in sede sacrari, quam liquerat exul et errans.
nos tecta fovebimus ossa
violis et fronde frequenti,	170 titulumque et frigida saxa liquido spargemus odore.

XI

HYMNUS VIII KAL. IANUARIAS

QUID est quod artum circulum sol iam recurrēns deserit ?
Christusne terris nascitur, qui lucis auget tramitem ?
heu quam fugacem gratiam	5
festina volvebat dies !
quam paene subductam facem

THE DAILY ROUND, XI

dost recall the mortal body, O God, and make it new, in what region wilt Thou bid the pure soul rest? In the bosom of the holy patriarch shall it lie, like Eleazar ^a with flowers all about him, while the rich man, as he burns, looks upon him from afar. We follow Thy words, O Redeemer, with which, in Thy triumph over the blackness of death, Thou dost bid the robber, Thy companion on the cross, to walk in Thy steps. See now, for the faithful a shining way lies open to the spacious garden of paradise, and they may enter that grove which the serpent took from man. There, I pray, good Leader, give command that the spirit, Thy servant, be consecrated to Thee in the home of its birth, which it left to wander in exile. We shall care for the entombed bones with violets and green leaves in plenty, and with perfumed essence sprinkle the cold stones that bear the epitaph.

XI

A HYMN FOR THE 25TH OF DECEMBER

WHAT means it that the sun is now returning, leaving his narrow circle behind him? Is not Christ, who enlarges the path of light, born this day on earth? Ah, how fleeting was the grace day was bestowing as it rolled on in its haste, its light all but withdrawn

^a The Lazarus of Luke xvi, 20.

PRUDENTIUS

sensim recisa extinxerat ! caelum nitescat laetius, gratetur et gaudens humus : scandit gradatim denuo iubar priores lineas.	10
emerge, dulcis pusio, quem mater edit castitas, parens et expers coniugis, mediator et duplex genus.	15
ex ore quamlibet Patris sis ortus et Verbo editus, tamen paterno in pectore Sophia callebas prius,	20
quae prompta caelum condidit, caelum diemque et cetera virtute Verbi effecta sunt haec cuncta, nam Verbum Deus.	25
sed ordinatis saeculis, rerumque digesto statu, fundator ipse et artifex permansit in Patris sinu,	30
donec rotata annalium transvolverentur milia, atque ipse peccantem diu dignatus orbem viseret.	35
nam caeca vis mortalium venerans inanes nenias, vel aera vel saxa algida vel ligna credēbat Deum.	40
haec dum sequuntur, perfidi praedonis in ius venerant, et mancipatam fumido vitam barathro inmerserant.	40
stragem sed istam non tulit

THE DAILY ROUND, XI

and put out as by degrees it shortened! But now let the sky shine more joyously, the earth rejoice and be glad, for the splendour is climbing again step by step to its former paths. Come forth, sweet boy. Thy mother is Chastity herself, a mother yet unwedded, O mediator twofold in nature. Albeit Thou didst come from the mouth of the Father and wert born of the Word, yet in the Father's heart as Wisdom Thou hadst understanding aforetime. Wisdom coming forth established the heavens, the heavens and the day and all things else; by the power of the Word were all these made, for the Word was God. But when the ages were appointed and the world set in order, the Creator and Artificer himself remained in the bosom of the Father, until the thousands of years should roll past and He himself deign to visit a world long given to sin. For the blind nature of men, paying respect to vain babblings, believed that a piece of bronze or chilly stone or wood was God; and in following these they had fallen into the power of the false robber, made over their soul to him, and plunged it in the smoking pit. But Christ

PRUDENTIUS

Christus cadentum gentium. inpune ne forsani sui Patris periret fabrica, mortale corpus induit, ut excitato corpore mortis catenam frangeret, hominemque portaret Patri.	45
hic ille natalis dies, quo te creator arduus spiravit et limo indidit, sermone carnem glutinans.	50
sentisne, virgo nobilis, matura per fastidia pudoris intactum decus honore partus crescere?	55
o quanta rerum gaudia alvus pudica continet, ex qua novellum saeculum procedit et lux aurea!	60
vagitus ille exordium vernantis orbis prodidit, nam tunc renatus sordidum mundus veterum depulit.	65
sparsisse tellurem reor rus omne densis floribus, ipsasque harenas Syrtium fragrasse nardo et nectare.	70
te cuncta nascentem, puer, sensere dura et barbara, victusque saxorum rigor obduxit herbam cotibus.	75
iam mella de scopulis fluunt, iam stillat illex arido sudans amomum stipite,	75

THE DAILY ROUND, XI

did not suffer the nations thus to fall and be destroyed. Lest perchance His Father's handiwork perish unregarded, He put on a mortal body, so that by raising the body to life He might break death's chain and carry man to the Father. This is the natal day on which the Creator on high breathed Thee forth and set Thee in a frame of clay, uniting flesh with the Word. Feelest thou, noble maiden, through thy weariness now come to its time, that the undefiled glory of thy purity waxes with the honour of the child thou bearest? What joys for the world that chaste womb holds, whence comes forth the new age with its golden light! That child's crying showed forth the beginning of the world's spring, for then the world reborn put away its foul torpor. The earth, I ween, thickly besprinkled all the countryside with flowers, and the very sands of the desert were scented with nard and nectar. All things rough and rude were conscious of Thy birth, O Child; even the hardness of stone was overcome and clothed the rocks with grass. Now honey flows from the crags, now the oak sweats drops of perfume from its dry

PRUDENTIUS

iam sunt myricis balsama.

o sancta praesepis tui, aeterne rex, cunabula,
populisque per saeculum sacra
mutis et ipsis credita!

80

adorat haec brutum pecus, indocta turba scilicet, adorat excors natio
vis cuius in pastu sita est.

sed cum fideli spiritu
concurrat ad praesepia
pagana gens et quadrupes, sapiatque quod brutum fuit,

85

negat patrum prosapia
perosa praesentem Deum :
credas venenis ebriam,
furiisve lymphatam rapi.

90

quid prona per scelus ruis?
agnosce, si quidquam tibi mentis resedit integrae, ducem tuorum principum.

95

hunc, quem latebra et obstetrix et virgo feta et cunulae, et inbecilla infantia,
regem dederunt gentibus,

100

peccator intueberis
celsum coruscis nubibus, deiectus ipse et inritis plangens reatum fletibus, cum vasta signum bucina terris cremandis miserit, et scissus axis cardinem mundi ruentis solverit.

105

insignis ipse et praeminens

THE DAILY ROUND, XI

trunk, and the tamarisks bear balsam. How holy Thy manger-cradle, King eternal! The nations through all time, and even the dumb beasts, hold it sacred. The brute cattle adore it, a mere herd without knowledge; the senseless tribe adores it, whose only vigour is in feeding. Yet though with faithful spirit heathen race and four-footed beast come together to the stall and what was brutish show understanding, the seed of the patriarchs deny Him, hating the God who is present among them, as if they were drugged with poisons or maddened by Furies. Why dost thou rush headlong on the path of sin? Recognise, if thou hast any remainder of sound sense, the leader of thy princes. On this child, whom place of refuge and midwife and maiden mother and little cradle and feeble infancy have given to the nations as their King, thou as a sinner shalt look when He is seated on high in flashing clouds, thyself cast down and bemoaning thy guilt with vain tears, when the awful trump shall have sounded the signal for the burning of the earth, and the axis of the universe is broken and lets its pole fall down and it crashes in ruin. He himself, raised in eminence above all, shall

PRUDENTIUS

meritis rependet congrua, 110
his lucis usum perpetis, illis gehennam et Tartarum.
Iudaea, tunc fulmen crucis experta, qui sit senties quem, te furoris praesule, 115 mors hausit et mox reddidit.

XII

HYMNUS EPIPHANIAE

QUICUMQUE Christum quaeritis, oculos in altum tollite :
illic licebit visere
signum perennis gloriae.
haec stella, quae solis rotam 5
vincit decore ac lumine, venisse terris nuntiat
cum carne terrestri Deum.
non illa servit noctibus secuta lunam menstruam, 10 sed sola caelum possidens cursum dierum temperat.
Arctoa quamvis sidera
in se retortis motibus
obire nolint, attamen 15 plerumque sub nimbis latent.
hoc sidus aeternum manet,
haec stella nunquam mergitur, nec nubis occursu abdita obumbrat obductam facem. 20 tristis cometa intercizat, et, si quod astrum Sirio

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

requite each according to his deserts, giving these to enjoy unending light, those to suffer hell and Tartarus. Then, O Judaea, when thou hast felt the thunderbolt of the cross, thou shalt understand who He is whom death, raging under thy patronage, swallowed up, and then gave back.

XII

A HYMN FOR EPIPHANY

ALL ye that seek the Christ, lift up your eyes on high; there may you see the sign of everlasting glory. This star which in its beauty and light surpasses the sun's orb proclaims that God has come to earth with earthly flesh. No servant of the night is this, attending the monthly moon, but sole tenant of the sky, ruling the course of the days. Though the constellations of the Bears, whose motions turn again upon themselves, refuse to set, yet oft are they hidden under storm-clouds. This star abides for ever, this star never sinks nor is hidden by oncoming cloud drawing a shade over its brightness. Perish the ill-omened comet, let every star that burns even with fervet vapore, iam Dei sub luce destructum cadat.

PRUDENTIUS

en Persici ex orbis sinu;	25
sol unde sumit ianuam, cernunt periti interpretes regale vexillum magi.
quod ut refulsit, ceteri cessere signorum globi,	30
nec pulcher est ausus suam conferre formam Lucifer.
“ quis iste tantus ” inquit “ regnator astris imperans,	35
quem sic tremunt caelestia, cui lux et aethra inserviunt ?
inlustre quiddam cernimus, quod nesciat finem pati, sublime, celsum, interminum, antiquius caelo et chao.	40
hic ille rex est gentium populique rex Iudaici, promissus Abrahae patri eiusque in aevum semini.
aequanda nam stellis sua cognovit olim germina primus sator credentium, nati inmolator unici.	45
iam flos subit Daviticus radice Iessea editus,	50
sceptri per virgam virens rerum cacumen occupat.”
exim sequuntur perciti fixis in altum vultibus, qua stella sulcum traxerat claramque signabat viam,	55

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

Sirius' heat sink now in destruction under God's light. See, from the far corner of the Persian land, whence the sun makes his entry, wise men, skilled interpreters, discern the royal ensign. As soon as it flashed out, all other starry orbs gave place, and even the fair morning star durst not put his beauty in comparison. "Who," say they, "is this great ruler who commands the stars, of whom the heavenly bodies thus stand in awe, whom light and sky obey? It is a glorious thing we see, that can suffer no end, exalted, lofty, boundless, more ancient than heaven and the realm of darkness. This is that king of the nations and of the people of Judaea, who was promised to father Abraham and to his seed for ever. For the first father of all believers, he who offered his only son in sacrifice, learned that his progeny must one day be made equal to the stars.^a Now comes the flower of David, sprung from the root of Jesse, blooming along the sceptre-rod^b and taking the highest place in the world." Then quickly did they follow, with eyes fixed on high, where the star was marking the way with its trail of light. But the sign

^a Genesis xv, 5.

^b Cf. Numbers xvii, 1-8.

PRUDENTIUS

sed verticem pueri supra signum pependit inminens, pronaque submissum face caput sacratum prodidit.	60
videre quod postquam magi, Eoa promunt munera, stratique votis offerunt tus, myrrham et aurum regium.	65 agnosce clara insignia virtutis ac regni tui, puer o, cui trinam Pater praedestinavit indolem :	70
regem Deumque adnuntiant thesaurus et fragrans odor turis Sabaei, at myrrheus pulvis sepulcrum praedocet.	75
hoc est sepulcrum, quo Deus, dum corpus extingui sinit atque id sepultum suscitatur, mortis refregit carcerem.	80
o sola magnarum urbium maior Bethlem, cui contigit ducem salutis caelitus incorporatum gignere !	85
altrice te summo Patri heres creatur unicus, homo ex Tonantis spiritu, idemque sub membris Deus.	90
hunc et prophetis testibus isdemque signatoribus testator et sator iubet adire regnum et cernere, regnum, quod ambit omnia dia et marina et terrea	95

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

hung in the heavens above the child's head, and, coming low, with downward beam revealed the sacred Person. And seeing Him the wise men bring forth gifts from the East, and prostrating themselves in worship make offerings of incense and myrrh and royal gold. Recognise, O Child, the clear emblems of Thy power and sovereignty, Thou for whom the Father fore-ordained a threefold nature. King and God the treasures proclaim, and the sweet scent of Sabaeen incense; but the powder of myrrh foretells the tomb. This is the tomb in which God, by suffering the body to die and raising it again from the grave, has broken death's prison. O Bethlehem, greatest art thou of great cities, since to thee it has fallen to bring to birth incarnate the heaven-sent leader of salvation. Thou dost nurse the only-begotten heir of the supreme Father, who is man born of the Thunderer's breath, yet also God in the flesh. Him His Father's testament, with the prophets to witness and affix their seals, bids enter on His kingdom and take possession ^a—a kingdom that embraces all things in heaven and sea and earth from east to west, ^a Prudentius has in mind some of the formalities connected with a Roman will. In this connection cernere is a technical term = hereditatem adire. Cf. Festus (Lindsay) 46, 18, Varro De Lingua Latina VII, 98. The sentence refers, of course, to the Old Testament and plays on two meanings of testamentum,

PRUDENTIUS

a solis ortu ad exitum, et Tartara et caelum supra.
 audit tyrannus anxius
 adesse regum principem, qui nomen Istrahelⁱ regat, 95
 teneatque David regiam.
 exclamat amens nuntio
 " successor instat, pellimur :
 satelles, i, ferrum rape, perfunde cunas sanguine. 100
 mas omnis infans occidat, scrutare nutricum sinus, interque materna ubera
 ensem cruentet pusio.
 suspecta per Bethlem^{nihi} 105
 puerperarum est omnium
 fraus, ne qua furtim subtrahat prolem virilis indolis." transfigit ergo carnifex mucrone districto furens 110
 effusa nuper corpora,
 animasque rimatur novas.
 locum minutis artubus
 vix interemptor invenit quo plaga descendat patens, 115 iuguloque maior pugio est.
 o barbarum spectaculum !
 inlisa cervix cautibus
 spargit cerebrum lacteum, oculosque per vulnus vomit ; 120 aut in profundum palpitans mersatur infans gurgitem, cui subter artis faucibus singultat unda et halitus.

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

the depths of hell and the skies above. The uneasy monarch hears of the coming of the King of Kings to rule over the name of Israel and possess the throne of David. Out of his mind at the news, he cries "He that shall take my place is upon me, driving me out. Go, guard, grasp thy sword and steep the cradles in blood. Let every male child perish. Search the nurses' bosoms, and at the mother's breasts let the boy-child's blood redden thy blade. I suspect guile in all that have borne babes in Bethlehem, lest one of them by stealth save her male progeny." So the executioner raging madly with drawn sword pierces the new-born bodies and tears the young life out of them. Scarce can the slayer find room on the little frames for the gaping wound to fall upon; the dagger is bigger than the throat. O barbarous sight! A head dashed against the stones scatters the milk-white brains and spews out the eyes through the wound; or a babe is flung all throbbing into the depths of the flood, and beneath in his narrow throat water and breath make choking

¹ This spelling is found in pre-Vulgate Latin Scriptures.

PRUDENTIUS

salvete, flores martyrum, quos lucis ipso in limine Christi insecutor sustulit, ceu turbo nascentes rosas.	125
vos, prima Christi victima, grex inmolatorum ¹ tener, aram ante ipsam simplices palma et coronis luditis.	130
quo proficit tantum nefas? quid crimen Herodem iuvat? unus tot inter funera inpune Christus tollitur.	135
inter coaevi sanguinis fluenta solus integer ferrum, quod orbatat nūsus, partus fefellit virginis.	140 sic stulta Pharaonis mali edicta quondam fugerat Christi figuram praeferens Moses, receptor civium.
cautum et statutum ius erat quo non liceret matribus, cum pondus alvi absolverent, puerile pignus tollere.	145
mens obstetricis sedulae pie in tyrannum contumax ad spem potentis gloriae furata servat parvulum,	150
quem mox sacerdotem sibi adsumpsit orbis conditor, per quem notatam saxeis legem tabellis traderet.	155
licetne Christum noscere tanti per exemplum viri?

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

spasms. Hail, martyr-flowers, whom on the very threshold of life the persecutor of Christ destroyed, as the stormy wind kills roses at their birth. You are Christ's first offerings, a tender flock slain in sacrifice, and before the very altar you play in innocence with palm and crowns. What boots such wickedness? What profits Herod from his crime? Amid so many deaths Christ alone is reared unharmed. While the blood of His generation flowed, the virgin's child alone has escaped untouched the sword that robbed young married mothers of their babes. It was thus that Moses, the protector of his people, prefiguring Christ, once escaped the wicked Pharaoh's foolish proclamation. A law had been decreed and ordained whereby mothers, when they were delivered of the womb's burden, might not rear a boy-child. But the zealous midwife, her spirit loyally disobedient to the monarch, stole away the little one and saved him for the hope of mighty glory; and by and by the world's Creator took him to be His priest, by whose hands He should transmit the law graven on tables of stone. May we not recognise Christ in the example of this great man? That

¹ inmaculatorum A B (followed by Bergman).

PRUDENTIUS

dux ille caeso Aegyptio absolvit Istrahel iugo ;	160
at nos, subactos iugiter erroris imperio gravi, dux noster hoste saucio mortis tenebris liberat.
hic expiatam fluctibus plebem marino in transitu repurgat undis dulcibus, lucis columnam praeferens ;	165
hic proeliante exercitu, pansis in altum bracchiis, sublimis Amalec premit, crucis quod instar tunc fuit.	170
hic nempe Iesus verior, qui longa post dispendia victor suis tribulibus promissa solvit iugera.	175
qui ter quaternas denique refluentis amnis alveo fundavit et fixit petras, apostolorum stemmata.	180 iure ergo se Iudae ducem vidisse testantur magi, cum facta priscorum ducum Christi figuram pinxerint. ¹
hic rex priorum iudicum, rexere qui Iacob genus, dominaeque rex ecclesiae, templi et novelli et pristini.	185
hunc posterì Ephrem colunt, hunc sancta Manassae domus, omnesque suspiciunt tribus bis sena fratrum semina.	190

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

leader, after he slew the Egyptian, freed Israel from the yoke; but us, who are in continual subjection to the grievous power of sin, our Leader, disabling our enemy, sets free from the darkness of death. Moses cleanses the people in the waves in the crossing of the sea and purifies them with sweet ^a waters, and carries before them a pillar of light. Moses, while the host does battle, stands aloft stretching up his arms and subdues Amalech,^b and this was then a symbol of the cross. He ^c indeed is a truer Jesus, who, after long wanderings gained the victory and parted the promised lands to his tribesmen ^d; and lastly twelve stones did he plant firmly in the bed of the river where its waters were stayed,^e and these are the forerunners of the apostles. Rightly, then, do the wise men bear witness that they have seen the Leader of Judah, since the deeds of old-time leaders pictured the figure of Christ. He is King of the judges of former times who ruled over the race of Jacob, and King of the church which now holds sway, King both of the new temple and the old. Him the descendants of Ephraim worship, Him the holy house of Manasses and all the tribes, the twelve-fold progeny of the brothers, reverence. Nay, even all

^a The reference is possibly to Exodus xv, 25, 26.

^b Exodus xvii, 10-13.

^c Joshua, whose name appears as Jesus in the Septuagint and may have had this form in a pre-Vulgate Latin version known to Prudentius.

^d Joshua xiii, 7.

^e Joshua iii, 14-iv, 9.

PRUDENTIUS

quin et propago degener ritum secuta inconditum, quaecumque dirum fervidis 195
Bahal caminis coxerat,

fumosa avorum numina,
saxum, metallum, stipitem,
rasum, dolatum, sectile,
in Christi honorem deserit. 200

gaudete, quicquid gentium est, Iudaea, Roma et Graecia, Aegypto, Thrax, Persa, Scythia :
rex unus omnes possidet.

laudate vestrum principem 205
omnes beati ac perditii, vivi, inbecilli ac mortui :
iam nemo posthac mortuus.

THE DAILY ROUND, XII

the fallen breeds that followed a barbarous ritual and baked a fearful idol in burning furnaces, now abandon the smoke-grimed gods of their forefathers, of stone or metal or wood, filed smooth or hewn or cut, to honour Christ. Rejoice, all ye nations, Judaea, Rome and Greece, Egypt, Thracian, Persian, Scythian: one King is master of all. Praise your Lord every one, blessed and lost alike, the quick, the feeble, and the dead; no man henceforth is dead.

APOTHEOSIS

HYMNUS DE TRINITATE ¹

Est tria summa Deus, trinum specimen, vigor unus.
corde Patris genita est Sapientia, Filius ipse est; Sanctus ab aeterno subsistit Spiritus ore.
tempore nec senior Pater est, nec numine maior, nam sapiens retro semper Deus edidit ex se, 5 per quod semper erat, gignenda ad saecula Verbum.
edere sed Verbum Patris est, at cetera Verbi, adsumptum gestare hominem, reparare peremptum, conciliare Patri, dextraque in sede locare.
Spiritus ista Dei conplet, Deus ipse: fideles 10
in populos charisma suum diffundere promptus, et patris et Christi virtutem in corpora transfert.

<PRAEFATIO>

Est vera secta? te, Magister, consulo.
rectamne servamus fidem?
an viperina non cavemus dogmata,
et nescientes labimur?
artam salutis vix viam discernere est 5
inter reflexas semitas.
tam multa surgunt perfidorum conpeta tortis pol^l erroribus,

¹ There is little MS. authority for this heading.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

A HYMN ON THE TRINITY

GOD is three supremes, threefold in person, one living power. Of the Father's love was begotten Wisdom, and the same is the Son; the Holy Spirit is from the everlasting lips. The Father is neither older in time nor greater in divinity; for God was wise through infinite time past, and gave forth from Himself, to bring the world into being, the Word whereby He ever was. But while to give forth the Word belongs to the Father, all else is of the Word, to take on and wear the nature of man and restore him from destruction, to reconcile him to the Father and set him at His right hand. This the Spirit of God accomplishes, who himself is God: ever ready to diffuse His gracious gift upon the faithful peoples, He transmits into their persons the power both of the Father and of the Christ.

PREFACE

Is our doctrine true? To Thee, the Master, I appeal. Are we keeping the right faith, or from want of guarding against venomous teachings are we slipping unawares? Hard is it to discern the narrow way of salvation amid twisting paths. So many cross-roads meet us, which have been trodden smooth by the misguided straying of the faithless; so many

PRUDENTIUS

obliqua sese conserunt divortia hinc inde textis orbitis.	10
quas si quis errans ac vagus sectabitur, rectum relinquens tramitem, scrobis latentis pronus in foveam ruet, quam fodit hostilis manus, manus latronum, quae viantes obsidet iter sequentes devium.	15
quid non libido mentis humanae struat? quid non malorum pruriat?
statum lacesunt omnipollentis Dei calumniosis litibus,	20
fidem minutis dissecant ambagibus ut quisque lingua est nequior; solvunt ligantque quaestionum vincula per syllogismos plectiles.
vae captiosis sycophantarum strophis! vae versipelli astutiae!	25
nodos tenaces recta rumpit regula, infesta dissertantibus.
idcirco mundi stulta delegit Deus, ut concidant sophistica,	30
deque inbecillis subiugavit fortia, simplex ut esset credere.
lapis ecce nostro fixus offensaculo est, impingat in quem vanitas, signum caventi, non caventi scandalum: hunc sternit, illum dirigit.	35
dum plura temptat, caecus incerto gradu, incurrit id quod obvium est.
fax sola fidei est praeferenda gressibus, ut recta sint vestigia.	40
quis in tenebris hostis errantes tamen pulsat trahitque et proterit,

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

side-roads join together, where tracks intertwine on this hand and on that; and if, wandering at random, a man follows them, leaving the straight path, he will plunge into the snare of a hidden pitfall which a band of enemies have dug, a band of robbers who beset travellers when they follow the byway. What would not the lust of men's minds devise? What evil would it not itch after? They assail the being of almighty God with false disputings and cut the faith in pieces with dark, finical reasonings in proportion to the wickedness of their tongues. Using intricate arguments they play fast and loose with the issues they discuss. Woe to the deceivers' cheating quirks! Woe to their crafty cunning! The right rule is a foe to their prating, and bursts their tight knots. God has specially chosen the foolish things of the world to overthrow the sophistical, and by means of weakness has subdued strength, that believing might be simple. Behold, a stone is set to trip us up, that vanity may strike against it, a guide-post to the wary, but to the unwary a stumbling-block; the one it lays low, the other it directs. The blind man groping on with uncertain step runs into that which stands in his way. The torch of faith alone is to be carried before our feet, that our steps may be straight. But when we go astray in this darkness the enemy buffets us, carries us away cap-

PRUDENTIUS

qui sparsa ad ipsum conmeantum transitum frumenta saevus devorat, qui laeta Christi culta fur interpolat 45
addens avenas aemulas.
quas de veneni lacte in herbam fertiles patitur colonus crescere, ne forte culmum fibra inanis spiceum simul revulsa internecet. 50 expectat ergo dum dolosa ¹ et farrea fervens coquat maturitas, det ventilabro lecta quaeque ut horreis, urat recrementum focis.
refert sed ipsa nosse, quae messem necant, 55 zizaniorum semina.

PLURIMA sunt sed pauca loquar, ne dira relatu dogmata catholicam maculent male prodita linguam.
ille Patrem pellens solio detrudit in artum corporis humani gestamen, nec pavet ipsum obiectare neci duroque adfigere ligno. 5 passibilisne Deus? cuius species et imago nulli visa umquam: nec enim comprehendier illa maiestas facilis sensuve oculisve manuve.
Ioannis magni celebris sententia praesto est, haud umquam testata Deum potuisse videri. 10
ille Pater, quem nulla acies violenta tuendo

¹ Most MSS. of the A class, including the 6th-century MS., have vitiosa, which Bergman adopts.

^a In lines 1 to 320 Prudentius deals with heretical doctrines which denied the distinct personal being of the Son, and expounds the orthodox view of the Trinity. One form of "monarchic" doctrine, in order to safeguard the unity of

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

tive, tramples upon us, a cruel enemy who devours the provision laid out along the way for the very passage of travellers, a thief who spoils Christ's rich fields, sowing wild oats in them to compete with the corn. Then the farmer suffers to be enriched by their poisonous sap and grow into a plant, lest haply the pulling up of the worthless blade kill at the same time the stalk that bears the ear of corn. He waits therefore till ripening warmth mature the false grain and the true, that he may store in his barns what the fan selects and burn the refuse in the fire. Yet it concerns us to know the very seeds of the tares that kill the crop.

VERY many teachings there are, but of few shall I tell, lest misguided utterance of unspeakable doctrines stain an orthodox tongue. Yonder is one who, banishing the Father from his throne, thrusts Him into the narrow vesture of a man's body and fears not to subject the Father to death and fasten Him on the cruel cross.^a Can God suffer? His shape and form no man has ever seen; for that majesty is not easily to be grasped by thought or eye or hand. We have the great John's well-known saying on our side, which declares that it has never been possible to see God. He is the Father, whom no eye has ever had force to reach by looking from God, held that in Christ the Father himself was incarnate, whence it followed that the Father suffered on the cross. Sabellius (see 178), who developed this line of thought in the 3rd century, seems to have regarded the Trinity as three manifestations or modes (cf. 14) of the one God.

PRUDENTIUS

eminus ardentis penetravit acumine visus, qui se forma hominis non induit, et Deitatis immensum adsumpto non temperat ore modove.
aut evangelici pietas spernenda libelli 15
iam, blaspheme, tibi est, aut numquam visa beati vis intacta Patris, non admiscenda caducis.
sed tamen et Patris est specimen quod cernere fas sit,
humanis aliquando oculis concurrere promptum, quod quamvis hebes intuitus speculamine glauco 20
umentique acie potuit nebulosus adire.
quisque hominum vidisse Deum memoratur, ab ipso
infusum vidit Gnatum; nam Filius hoc est, quod de Patre micans se praestitit inspiciendum per species quas possit homo comprehendere visu. 25 nam mera maiestas est infinita, nec intrat obtus, aliquo ni se moderamine formet.
hoc vidit princeps generosi seminis Abram,
iam tunc dignati terras invisere Christi hospes homo, in triplicem numen radiasse figuram. 30 hoc conluctantis tractarunt bracchia Iacob.
ipse dator legis divinae accedere coram iussus, amicitiae conlato qui stetit ore comminus et sacris coniunxit verba loquellis, carnis in effigie Christum se cernere sensit. 35
sed maiora petens animum per vota tetendit inconcessa homini, plusquam mortale laborans ipsum, quantus erat, sine corpore visere Christum.
denique post multi sermonis mutua, postque conspectum praesentis Eri et consortia longa, 40

^a Genesis xviii.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

without with keen, flashing vision, and who does not put on the form of man nor qualify the infinity of his Godhead by assuming countenance or mode. Either, thou blasphemer, must thou reject the faithfulness of the gospel-book, or else the intangible being of the blessed Father, which cannot mingle with mortality, has never been seen. Yet still there is a revelation of the Father which it is permitted to see, which at sundry times has presented itself to the eyes of men, and to which our sight, for all its dimness, with its dull vision and watery eyes, has been able through its mists to attain. Whosoever of men is said to have seen God has seen the Son whom He imparted; for it is the Son who, issuing from the Father, has manifested himself to our eyes in forms which man can grasp with his sight; the pure majesty is infinite, and comes not within our vision unless it takes some tempering shape. It is this divinity that Abraham, the founder of the noble race, the mortal man who entertained Christ when even thus early He deigned to visit the earth, saw radiated into three figures^a; it is this that Jacob's arms touched as he wrestled with Him.^b He who gave forth the divine law and was commanded to come into the presence, who stood face to face in friendship and conversed with the Holy One, understood that he saw the Christ in the form of flesh. But seeking greater things, he let his heart reach out in ambitions not permitted to man, desiring beyond mortal powers to see Christ himself in all his greatness without the body; and after much exchange of speech, after seeing his Master in person and holding long fellowship with Him, "I pray

^b Genesis xxxii, 24.

PRUDENTIUS

“quaeso” ait “ut liceat te nunc, Deus optime, nosse.”

respondit Dominus “mea, non me, cernere iustis posteriora dabo.” quid apertius, absque aliena quam sumat facie Verbum non posse videri, posse tamen, cum malit, idem numquam Patre viso 45
terrenis oculis habitu se ostendere nostro, saepe et in angelicas vel mortales moderatum induci species, queat ut sub imagine cerni?
hoc Verbum est quod vibratum Patris ore benigno sumpsit virgineo fragilem de corpore formam. 50 inde figura hominis nondum sub carne Moysi obiecta effigiem nostri signaverat oris, quod quandoque Deus Verbi virtute coactum sumpturus corpus faciem referebat eandem.
sed tamen et sentam visa est excisa cremare 55 flamma rubum. Deus in spinis volitabat acutis, vulnificasque comas innoxius ignis agebat, esset ut exemplo Deus inlapsurus in artus spiniferos, sudibus quos texunt crimina densis et peccata malis hirsuta doloribus implent. 60 inculto nam stirpe frutex vitiosus iniquis luxuriam virgis inhoneste effundere suco coeperat et nodos per acumina crebra ligabat.
cernere erat steriles subito splendescere frondes, accensisque citum foliis magno inpete late 65
conlucere Deum, nec spinea laedere texta, lambere sanguineos fructus et poma cruenta, stringere mortiferi vitalia germina ligni, quandoquidem tristes purgantur sanguine culpae,

^a Exodus xxxiii, 11 and 18-23.

^b The Word being conceived as the Creator. Cf. the Hymn on the Trinity, 6, and John i, 3.

^c Exodus iii, 2.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

Thee," he said, " O God most excellent, let me now know Thee." And the Lord answered, " My back parts, not myself, shall I grant the righteous to see." ^a What is plainer than that, apart from an external form which He assumes, the Word cannot be seen, but that when He so wills, though the Father has never been seen, yet the Word can show himself to earthly eyes in habit like ourselves, and that often He qualifies himself and puts on the shape of angel or of man, that He may be visible in a likeness? This is the Word which, sent forth from the Father's gracious mouth, took upon Him a perishable form from a maiden's body. The figure of a man that was presented to Moses not yet in the flesh bore the likeness of our countenance because God, intending one day to assume a body formed by the power of the Word,^b was producing the same features. Yet flame also came forth and seemed to burn the thorny bush: God was moving amid the sharp pricks, and the fire was tossing its hurt-dealing tresses harmlessly,^c that God might give an example, since He was one day to enter into our thorny frames, which sins entangle with thick-set spikes and bristly transgressions fill with bitter sorrows. For the bush had gone wrong from want of attention to its stock, had begun to spread rankly with bad sap into unwholesome growth, and was making knotty joints along many a sharp-pointed shoot. There were the unprofitable boughs suddenly brightening, and God, stirring amid the burning leaves, shining afar with mighty power, yet not hurting the thorny tangle, lapping the blood-hued fruits, the red berries, and lightly touching the shoots of life on the deathly wood; in as much as the bitterness of sin is cleansed

PRUDENTIUS

quem contorta rubus densis cruciatibus edit. 70 ergo nihil visum nisi quod sub carne videndum, lumen imago Dei, Verbum Deus et Deus ignis, qui sentum nostri peccamen corporis inplet;
 nam lucis genitor, Verbi sator, auctor et ignis creditur extra oculos, ut apostolus edocet auctor, 75 qui negat intuitu fontem Deitatis adiri.
 credite, nemo deum vidit, mihi credite, nemo.
 visibilis de fonte Deus, non ipse Dei fons visibilis; cerni potis est qui nascitur, at non innatus cerni potis est: latet os Patris illud 80 unde Deus qui visibilem se praestitit olim, tale aliquid formans in sese quale sæcuta est passio, quae corpus sibi vindicat; ârdua nam vis est impassibilis, quoniam natura superni ignis ad horrificas nescit descendere poenas, 85 nec capit humanis angoribus excruciami, pura, serena, micans, liquido praelibera motu, subdita nec cuiquam, dominatrix utpote rerum, cui non principium de tempore, sed super omne tempus et ante diem maiestas cum Patre summo, 90 immo animus Patris et ratio, via consiliorum, quae non facta manu nec voce creata iubentis protulit imperium patrio ructata profundo.
 hanc igitur non flagra sæcant, non sputa salivis aspergunt, alapis non vexat palma relisis, 95 nec perfossa cruci clavorum vulnera figunt.
 his adfecta caro est hominis, quam femina praegnans

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

with blood, which the bush sheds as it writhes under tortures unrelieved. So then nothing has been seen but what is to be seen in the flesh, light the image of God, God the Word, God the fire that fills the thorn-bush of sin in our bodies; for the begetter of light, the Father of the Word and the source of the fire is believed to stand beyond the reach of the eyes, as the apostle on whom we rely teaches when he says that sight cannot attain to the fountain-head of deity.^a Believe me, no man has seen God; believe me, no man. God who comes forth from the fountain-head is visible, but the very fountain-head of God is invisible; He that is born can be seen, but He that was not born cannot be seen. Concealed is that mouth of the Father from whence came God who once made himself visible, taking on himself such a form as suffering, which demands a body, followed upon. For the potency on high cannot suffer, since the heavenly fire cannot lower itself to feel dreadful pains, nor does it admit of being racked with human tortures. It is pure, serene, shining, utterly free and unconstrained in movement, not subject to any power, for it is master of all things, having no beginning from a time, but beyond all time and before the days began it is the majesty that resides with the Father supreme, yea, the spirit of the Father, his thought, the channel of his designs, which, not made by his hand nor created by the voice of his command, but emitted from the depths of the Father, carried forth his will. This therefore no scourges cut nor spitting defiles, nor hand hurts with buffeting nor nail-pierced wounds fasten upon a cross. It was the flesh of man that felt these things, flesh that a woman with child enixa est sub lege uteri, sine lege mariti.

PRUDENTIUS

ille famem patitur, fel potat et haurit acetum, ille pavet mortis faciem, tremit ille dolorem. 100 dicite, sacrilegi doctores, qui Patre summo desertum iacuisse thronum contenditis illo tempore quo fragiles Deus est inlapsus in artus, ergo Pater passus? quid non malus audeat error?
ipse puellari conceptus sanguine crevit? 105
ipse verecundae distendit virginis alvum?
et iam falsiloqua est divini pagina libri, quae Verbum in carnis loquitur fluxisse figuram?
at non, qui Verbi Pater est, caro factus habetur.
fige gradum, Scriptura, tuum; nil mobile et anceps 110
adfirmasse decet: Pater est, quem cernere nulli est licitum; Pater est, qui numquam visus in orbe
est,
nec mundana inter radiavit lumina coram.
verbum conspicuum misit, missumque recepit cum voluit: Verbo praestrinxit viscera purae 115 virginis, et Verbo struxit puerilia membra.
ipse quidem in terris virtute et numine praesens semper adest quocumque loci, nec pars vacat ulla maiestate Patris; nusquam est genitor Deus absens, per Verbum sed semper adest; atque inde Philippo 120
Christus ait " tanto tecum iam tempore versor, et Patrem te nosse negas, quem perspicis in me? " est invisibilis donum Patris edere natum visibilem, per quem valeat Pater ipse videri, nec solis sanctorum oculis, sed lumine cassis 125

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

brought forth according to the law of birth, without the law of wedlock. He it is that suffers hunger, that drinks the gall and drains the vinegar. He it is that fears the shape of death and trembles at the pain. Tell me, ye blasphemous teachers, who maintain that the supreme Father abandoned his throne at the time when God entered into a mortal body, was it the Father, then, who suffered? What would not evil error dare? Was the Father himself conceived and did He grow from a maid's blood? Did He himself swell a modest virgin's womb? And does the page of the holy book lie, then, when it says that the Word passed into the form of flesh? It is not He who is the Father of the Word, that is believed to have been made flesh. Plant thy step firmly, O Scripture; it is not seemly to have stated aught that is unsure and undependable. He is the Father, whom none has been permitted to see; He is the Father, who has never been seen in the world nor shone in his own person among the world's luminaries. He sent the visible Word and received again, when He would, the Word He sent. By the Word He touched the pure virgin's flesh, and by the Word built up the child's body. He indeed is always and everywhere present on earth in power and spirit, and no part of it is without the Father's majesty; God the Father is nowhere absent; but it is through the Word that He is ever present, and hence it is that Christ says to Philip, "Am I with thee this long time, and sayest thou that thou knowest not the Father, whom thou seest in me?" It is the gift of the invisible Father that He brings forth the visible Son, through whom the Father himself can be seen, and not only by the eyes of the

PRUDENTIUS

caecorum ; caecos loquor, atra socordia quorum corde tenebroso verum perpendere nescit.
 quem si perspicuum mortalibus infitiaris, fare age, quem videat Babylonis ab arce tyrannus innocuas inter flammas procul exspatiantem, 130 calcantem rapidos inadustis fratribus ignes.
 nempe ait " o proceres, tris vasta incendia anhelis accepere viros fornacibus ; additus unus ecce vaporiferos ridens intersecat ignes.
 Filius ille Dei est ; fateorque et victus adoro. 135 inrisas removete faces, taedasque tepentes subtrahite ; friget succensi sulphuris ardor.
 Filius (haud dubium est) agit haec miracula rerum, quem video, Deus ipse, Dei certissima proles.
 imperat inmensis ardoribus et domat iras, 140 insultans famulante rogo, piceosque furores comprimit et rabiem flammaram algescere cogit.
 barbaricos calida aura sinus non tangere iussa praeterit et tenues stridens transcurrit amictus.
 ipse per Assyrios metuit vapor ire tiaras, 145 ne coma fusa umeris fumo obsordescat amaro."
 haec ait, et varios iubet obmutescere cantus, organa, sambucas, citharas calamosque tubasque.
 stulta superstitio tacuit, vox festa quievit, quae male conspicuae celebrabat imaginis aurum. 150 carmina sanctorum resonant iam sola virorum triplice concentu regem laudantia caeli, qui mare, qui terras, qui lucida sidera fecit,

^a Daniel iii, 24 ff.

^b Prudentius makes Nebuchadnezzar speak like an occidental, just as Virgil does Aeneas (Aeneid ii, 504).

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

holy, but by the sightless eyes of the blind; and by the blind I mean those who in the black dullness of their darkened heart cannot appreciate the truth. If you deny that He is visible to mortals, then tell me who it is that from Babylon's throne the king sees at a distance walking unharmed through the flames, and trampling on the consuming fires with his brethren unscorched.^a He says, you know, "Ye nobles, three men the devouring fire received in the panting furnace, and lo! one more parts asunder with a smile the flame's hot gust. That is the Son of God. I confess it, and yield and worship Him. Take ye away the brands, for they are laughed to scorn; draw off the dying logs of pitch-pine; the brimstone ye set fire to is chilled. It is the Son, no doubt of it, that works these wonders; He is before my eyes, God himself, God's most assured Son, commanding the measureless heat and taming its wrath, triumphing over the fire, his servant; He subdues the raging pitch and compels the fierce flames to grow cold. The hot breath is forbidden to touch the folds of their oriental^b garments; it passes them by, and runs hissing past their fine raiment. The very heat fears to penetrate their Assyrian turbans, lest the hair that falls on their shoulders be dirtied by the acrid smoke." So saying, he bids the varied sounds of music cease, all the instruments, sackbuts, harps, reed-pipes and cornets. Foolish superstition is silent, stilled are the festal notes that were sounding in honour of the golden image wickedly set up to view. Now only the songs of the holy men ring out as with three voices in concert they praise the king of heaven, who made the sea, the lands, the shining stars, and covered his ignibus et mediis securos texit alumnos.

PRUDENTIUS

 semper in auxilium Sermo Patris omnipotentis 155 descendit servando homini, mortalia semper admiscenda sibi proprio curavit amore, ut socianda caro Dominoque inplenda perenni, degenerem vitam quae tunc animalis agebat, [exemplo mutaret eri, similesque per artus] ¹ 160 cernere consortem terreni adsuesceret oris, participemque suum visu velut obside nosse, et consanguineo paulatim accedere Christo.
 ergo animalis homo quondam, nunc Spiritus illum transtulit ad superi naturam seminis, ipsum 165 infundendo Deum mortalia vivificantem.
 nunc nova materies solidata intercute flatu, materies sed nostra tamen, de virgine tracta, exuit antiquae corrupta exordia vitae, immortale bonum proprio spiramine sumens, 170
 filius ille hominis, sed Filius ille Tonantis, iam solus vultum Patris aspicit et videt ipsum.
 nemo Patrem novit nisi Filius et cui monstrat Filius, et nostri mediator et omnipotentis.
 denique concludam brevis ut compendia summae: 175 non Pater in carnem descendit, sed Patris arcem sumpta caro ascendit, Natus per utrumque cucurrit.
 Cede, profanator Christi, iam cede, Sabelli, depositorque Patris Natiq̄ue insane negator.
 nonne Patrem violas dum Natum scire recusas? 180

¹ This line does not appear in the oldest MSS., and is bracketed by Bergman.

^a "The Song of the Three Holy Children" (Benedicite) is in the Greek and the Vulgate Latin versions of Daniel iii, after verse 23, though not in the Hebrew.

^b Cf. 1 Corinthians xv, 46.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

children from fear in the midst of the fire.^a Ever did the Word of the almighty Father come down to help and save man; ever did He of his own love cause his own being to take on humanity, that the flesh which was to be associated with Him and filled with the everlasting Lord, but was then animal in its nature and leading a debased life, might [change it after its Master's example and in like body] learn to recognise Him as sharer of its earthly features, to know Him with the warranty of sight as partaker of its nature, and by degrees draw nearer to Christ its kinsman. So then man was once as the animals, but now the Spirit has transformed him into the nature of a child of heaven by the inpouring of God himself, who quickens what is mortal.^b Now a new substance embodied by the spirit of God within, but yet our substance, derived from a virgin, has put off the corruption that infected the life of old from its beginning and of its own spirit assumes the good that is everlasting. He who is the Son of Man but also Son of the Thunderer now alone looks on the face of the Father and sees Him. None knows the Father save the Son and him to whom the Son, the mediator between us and the Almighty, shows Him. In fine, to put the whole matter in short, it is not the Father that came down into the flesh, but the flesh being assumed has ascended to the Father's throne: the Son passed both ways.

Yield, thou desecrator of Christ, yield now, Sabellius,^c thou that dost put down the Father and madly deny the Son. Dost thou not do violence to the Father in refusing to know the Son? For there

^a See the note on line 5.

PRUDENTIUS

quandoquidem non est genitor, nisi filius extet, nec vocitare patrem potis es quem germine fraudas.
 sed fortasse velis patriae pietatis honore despoliare Deum, contentus nomine nudo, quod Deus est, adimasque decus Patris et generis
 vim. 185

ecquis in idolio recubans inter sacra mille ridiculosque deos venerans sale, caespite, ture, non putat esse deum summum et super omnia solum?

quamvis Saturnis Iunonibus et Cythereis, portentisque aliis fumantes consecret aras, 190 attamen in caelum quotiens suspexit, in uno constituit ius omne deo, cui serviat ingens virtutum ratio variis instructa ministris.
 quae gens tam stolidi animis, tam barbara linguis,
 quaeve superstitio tam sordida, quae caniformem 195
 latrantemque throno caeli praeponat Anubem?
 nemo Cloacinae aut Eponae super astra deabus dat solium, quamvis olidam persolvat acerram sacrilegisque molam manibus rimetur et exta.
 consule barbati deliramenta Platonis, 200
 consule et hircosus Cynicus quos somniat et quos textit Aristoteles torta vertigine nervos.
 hos omnes quamvis anceps labyrinthus et error circumflexus agat, quamvis promittere et ipsi gallinam soleant aut gallum, clinicus ut se 205 dignetur praestare deus, morientibus aequum,

^a In the later paganism belief in one supreme god was prevalent, and many regarded the gods of the old religion as his subordinate agents. See Bailey, Phases in the Religion of Ancient Rome, ch. viii.

^b An Egyptian divinity. Cf. Aeneid viii, 698.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

is no begetter if there be no son, nor canst thou call father one whom thou dost deprive of offspring. But perchance thou wouldst rob God of the glory of fatherly love and be content with the bare name of God, only taking from Him the honour of fatherhood and the power of begetting. Is there anyone who, as he lies in a heathen temple amid a thousand sacred objects, or worships absurd gods with salt and turf-altar and incense, does not suppose there is a supreme god who stands alone above all things? Though he devote smoking altars to a Saturn, a Juno, a Lady of Cythera and other monstrosities, yet whenever he looks up to the sky he places all authority in one god, whom the vast system of powers furnished with diverse agencies obeys.^a What race is so dull in mind or so barbarous in speech, what superstition so low, as to set forward the dog-shaped barking Anubis^b on the throne of heaven? No man gives a seat of power above the stars to the goddesses Cloacina or Epona,^c though he pay an offering of strong-smelling incense and dig unholy hands into the sacred meal and the entrails. Consult the bearded Plato's ravings, consult the close-drawn reasonings which the stinking Cynic produces in his illusion, or Aristotle contrives in a dizzy whirl. Though they are all lost in the uncertainties of a maze in which they wander round and round, though they too are wont to promise a hen or a cock that the physician-god may deign to show himself gracious to them on their

^a Cloacina the divinity associated with the great drain (cloaca maxima) at Rome, Epona with stables and horses.

PRUDENTIUS

cum ventum tamen ad normam rationis et artis, turbidulos sensus et litigiosa fragosis argumenta modis concludunt numen in unum, cuius ad arbitrium sphaera mobilis atque rotunda 210
 volvatur, servantque suos vaga sidera cursus.
 non recipit natura hominis, modo quadrupes ille non sit, et erecto spectet caelestia vultu, non recipit neget ut regimen pollere supremum.
 istud et ipse Numae tacitus sibi sensit haruspex, 215
 semifer et Scottus sentit, cane milite peior.
 sed nos qui Dominum libris et corpore iam bis vidimus, ante fide, mox carne et sanguine ¹ coram, quique voluminibus vatum cruce teste probatis rimantes digitos costarum in vulnera cruda 220 mersimus, et manuum visu dubitante lacunas scrutati aeternum regem cognovimus Iesum, abiurare Deo titulum nomenque paternum credimus esse nefas, qui regem protulit ex se, non regem populi Parthorum aut Romulidarum, 225
 sed regem summae et mediae rationis et imae, atque ideo rerum dominum et super omnia regem.
 carnis habet medium, summum Patris, et Stygis imum.
 defluit his gradibus rursusque revolvitur in se;
 est Deus, est et homo; fit mortuus et Deus idem
 est. 230

¹ The 6th-century MS. has corpore.

^a Socrates' last words (Plato, Phaedo, 118) were a request to Crito to pay a cock which, he said, "we owe to Aesculapius." The cock was really a thank-offering made by persons

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

death-beds,^a none the less, when they come to the standard of reason and logic, they bring their muddy thoughts and their contentious, clamorous arguments to the conclusion that there is one divine power by whose control the round, unresting sphere revolves and the planets keep their courses. Man's nature does not admit—provided he is not a grovelling beast but looks at the heavenly bodies with visage erect—I say, does not admit of denying the might of a supreme governor. Of this even Numa's sooth-sayer was conscious in his heart, and so is the half-bestial Scot, who is worse than a dog that fights in the wars. But we, who have now twice seen the Lord, in the scriptures and in the body, first by faith and then in flesh and blood with us and who, when the books of the prophets were proved true by the witness of the cross, plunged searching fingers into the raw wounds in his side and, because our eyes doubted, explored the holes in his hands and recognised the everlasting king Jesus, believe it sin to deny the title and name of Father to God who brought forth our king from himself—not king of the nation of the Parthians nor of the sons of Romulus, but king of the highest and of the middle and of the lowest realm, and therefore Lord of creation and king over all things. He holds the middle domain, which is that of the flesh, the highest, which is that of the Father, and the lowest, which is that of hell. By these degrees He passes down and again returns to himself. He is God, He is man also; He dies, and who had been cured of illness through sleeping in the temple of Aesculapius at Epidaurus. Socrates was perhaps alluding to his confident belief that his soul would survive; he would awake from death cured of the ills of mortality.

PRUDENTIUS

omnia percurrit naturae munia prona, ut sursum Patris in gremium replicata reportet mortua quae fuerant, ipsos quoque subvehat artus.
 haec fore cum veterum cecinissent organa vatum, nos oculis, manibus, congressu, voce, loquella 235 experti, heroum tandem intelleximus orsa priscorum et viso patefacta oracula Christo.
 haec est nostra salus, hinc vivimus, hinc animamur.
 hoc sequimur: numquam detracto nomine Nati appellare Patrem, Patris et sine nomine numquam 240
 Natum nosse Deum, numquam nisi Sanctus et unus
 Spiritus intersit Natumque Patremque vocare;
 sic tamen haec constare tria, ut ne separe ductu tris faciam, tribus his subsistat sed Deus unus.
 nec Pater ipse autem qui Filius, ut, quia natum 245 scimus ab innato, vere Pater et sata vere sit suboles, nec sit genitor sibi Filius ipse.
 perquam ridiculum est et futile, natus ut ex se sive supernatus ¹ fuerit, sibi ipse repente nascendi nova materies, ac se Deus ultro 250 ediderit natumque sibi se fecerit ipsum.
 nil falsum aut mendax divina vocabula fingunt.
 qui Pater est, gignendo Pater, tum Filius ex hoc Filius, auctore genitus quod sit Patre summo, summus et ipse tamen; nec enim minor aut Patre dispar.

unde in utroque operis forma indiscreta, nisi
 omnem 256

¹ Some MSS. of both Bergman's classes have sive pater natus.
 138

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

still is God. He goes through all the functions of mortal nature that He may turn again and bring up to the Father's bosom all that was dead, and raise up the very bodies also. After the lyres of the old prophets had foretold these things, we, having found them come to pass, with our eyes and hands, meeting Him and hearing his voice and speech, understood at last the words of the valiant men of old and the prophecies that were made plain by the sight of Christ. This is our salvation, hence it is that we live and are quickened. This is the rule we follow, never to address the Father without naming the Son, never to know God the Son without naming the Father, never to call on the Son and the Father together but that the Holy Spirit, who is one with them, have part also; yet that these so exist as three that I must not make three Gods by separating them, but in these three is the being of one God. And He who is the Son is not the Father himself, that, since we know He was begotten of the unbegotten, there may be true Father and true begotten Son, and the Father be not Son to himself. It is very absurd and vain to suppose that He should have been born of himself, or a secondary growth upon himself, suddenly becoming for himself a new substance of birth, and that God should have brought forth himself and made himself his own Son. The divine names make no false or lying pretence. He who is the Father is Father by begetting, and the Son is Son for the reason that He was begotten and the supreme Father is the author of his being; though yet He himself is supreme also, for He is not less than the Father nor unequal with Him. How could the shape of their work be undistinguish-

PRUDENTIUS

vim maiestatis patriae generosus haberet Filius, idque Deus genitor, quod Filius, esset?
 pergunt ulterius scrutantes quid sit id ipsum gignere, si fas est humanos tendere sensus 260 usque ad secretum, quod tempora cuncta diesque praevenit antiquos, et principium super ipsum eminet et, quodcumque potest homo quaerere, transit.
 cum sit difficilis via noscere principiorum semina, qui dabitur mortali exquirere quidnam 265 ultra principium Deus egerit, aut quo pacto ediderit Verbum, quod principio caret omni?
 hoc solum scimus, quod traditur esse Deum, quem non genitus genitor generaverit, unus et unum, integer integrum, non coeptum sed tamen ortum, 270 et conperpetuum retro Patris et Patre natum.
 sed nec decisis Pater est, ut pars Patris esset Filius, extendens nec se substantia tractim produxit minuitque aliquid de numine pleno, dum mutata novum procudit portio Natum. 275 non convertibilis nec demutabilis umquam est Deus aut gignendo aliquid sibi detrahit, atqui totus et ex toto Deus est, de lumine lumen.
 quando autem lumen sine lumine? quando refulgens
 lux fulgore caret? quando est ut proditus ignis 280 ignem deminuat? quando Pater et Deus et lux non lucis Deus et Pater est? qui, si Pater olim non fuit, et serum genuit post tempora Natum, fit novus, inque novum ius proficit. absit, ut umquam
 plenus proficiat, qui non eget incremento. 285 et Deus et genitor lumenque et gloria semper

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

able in both, did not the high-born Son possess all the force of his Father's majesty, and were not God the Father that which the Son is? Men go further, prying into the very meaning of begetting, if it is lawful to stretch human thought to the mystery which precedes all times and days of old and stands beyond the very beginning, passing all the wit of man to search out. Since it is hard to reach an understanding of the seeds of first beginnings, how shall it be given to mortal man to seek out what God did before the beginning, or how He gave forth the Word, which has no beginning? This alone we know: our tradition tells us that He is God whom the unbegotten Father begot, one Father, one Son, perfect Father, perfect Son, who had no beginning and yet originated, who existed eternally in time past equally with the Father and yet was born of the Father. But neither was the Father diminished, so that the Son would be a portion of the Father, nor did his substance extend and prolong itself and deduct something from his full Godhead by changing a portion so as to forge a new being in the Son. God can never turn nor change, nor does He by begetting subtract something from himself; but He is whole God born of whole God, light from light. And when is there light without light? When is there a shining light that does not shine? When does the flame that is emitted diminish the flame? When is He who is Father and God and light not the God and Father of light? If once He was not Father, and late in the passage of time begot the Son, He becomes what He was not before, and advances to a new status. Perish the thought that He who is perfect and needs no enlargement can ever advance! Both God and ille fuit, nec post sibi contulit ut Pater esset.

PRUDENTIUS

 sic fit ut aeternum credamus cum Patre Christum, illo auctore satum, cui nullus praefuit auctor.
 haec tu si dubitas Nati mysteria Christi, 290 perditæ, catholica non es de plebe, sed unus de grege turifero, venerator Deucalionum, devotus cippo, ficulni stipitis unctor.
 quin potius scrutare Dei signacula in ipso fonte vetustatis, percurrere scrinia primi 295 scriptoris, quem non bardus pater aut avus augur, fabula nec veteris famae, nec garrula nutrix, nec sago clangore loquax et stridula cornix rem docuere Dei, sed coram proditus ipse, ipse Deus trepidum mortalem mitis amico 300
 inbuit adloquio seque ac sua summa, rētexit.
 nimirum meminit scriptor doctissimus illo orbis principio non solum nec sine Christo informasse Patrem facturæ plasma novellæ.
 "fecit" ait "condens hominem Deus, et dedit olli 305
 ora Dei." quidnam est aliud quam dicere "solus non erat, atque Deo Deus adsistebat agenti," cum Dominus faceret Domini sub imagine plasma?
 Christus forma Patris, nos Christi forma et imago;
 condimur in faciem Domini bonitate paterna, 310
 venturo in nostram faciem post saecula Christo.
 possum multa sacris exempla excerpere libris,

* Worship of the dead was alien to the old Roman religion, but honours were paid yearly at their tombs. In imperial times, however, the conception of the dead as divine appears. Cippus may here be simply a derogatory term for an idol ("a post"). Deucalion, though not a divinity, seems to be used here contemptuously as a type of mythical personage.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

Father and light and glory He ever was, nor did He afterwards confer fatherhood on himself. Thus does it come about that we believe Christ eternal along with the Father and begotten of Him before whom was no begetter. If thou doubtest these mysteries of Christ the Son, abandoned man, thou art not of the Catholic people, but one of the crew of incense-offerers, a worshipper of Deucalions, devotee of a grave-stone,^a anointer of a fig-tree stump. Rather scan the marks of God in the very fount of antiquity, run through the collection of books of the earliest of writers,^b who did not learn of God from a minstrel sire or soothsaying grand-sire, nor from a tale of old tradition nor garrulous nurse, nor noisy crow that chattered with prophetic cry, but God himself appearing to him graciously instructed the trembling mortal, speaking to him like a friend,^c and revealed himself and his majesty. Clearly the well-informed historian tells us that in that beginning of the world it was not alone nor without Christ that the Father shaped the figure of his new creation. "God," he says, "in creating made man and gave him the features of God." What is this but to say "He was not alone and God was by God's side in the work," since the Lord made the creature in the image of the Lord? Christ is the figure of the Father, and we the figure and image of Christ; we are made after the likeness of the Lord by the goodness of the Father, and Christ was to come into our likeness after ages of time. I can pick many an instance from the holy books, if

^b I.e. Moses, in the Pentateuch.

^c Cf. Exodus xxxiii, 11.

PRUDENTIUS

ni refugis, quae te doceant non in Patre solo vim maiestatis positam, sed cum Patre Christum esse Deum, velut illud ait genealogus idem: 315 “ a Domino Dominus flammam pluit in Sodomitae.”

quis Dominus, de quo Domino, si solus ab arce siderea spectat Pater aut ardescit in iras?
 Filius armatam Domini Patris ignibus iram spargebat Dominus: sunt unum fulmen utraque. 320

Haec si Iudaicos sic intellecta rigassent auditus stupidus ut possent¹ tangere fibras, audissent Dominum virtutum, qui pereuntes venerat ut servaret oves; sed ab auribus omnis fluxerat ornatus, caput et iam coctile Bahal 325 finxerat aurículasque suo spoliabat hōnore.

dux populi peccantis adest de monte corusci luminis adloquioque Dei, tabulasque tremendo incisas digito caeca ad tentoria defert, sed cadit in faciem plebs non visura profundae 330
 legis in effigie scriptum per enigmata Christum.
 infelix, quae luce oculos praestricta paventes texerit et presso faciem velarit amictu!

at nos reiecto Christum velamine coram cernimus atque Deum vultu speculamur aperto, 335 nec sub lege gravi depressa fronte iacemus, sed legis radium sublimi agnoscimus ore.
 heu, frondosa prius ramis felicibus arbor, pinguibus, heu, quondam radix oleagina bacis!
 ecce tibi inserto revirescit nunc oleastro 340

¹ The two oldest MSS. have possint.

^a From this point to line 551 Prudentius attacks the Jews for their rejection of Christ.

^b Cf. Exodus xxxii.

^c Cf. 2 Corinthians iii, 14–18.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

you do not turn your back on them, to prove to you that the potency of majesty lies not in the Father alone, but that Christ is God with the Father, such as the statement of the same author of Genesis: "The Lord rained fire from the Lord upon the Sodomites." What Lord, and from what Lord, if the Father alone looks from the throne of heaven or blazes into anger? The Lord the Son was hurling the wrath of the Lord the Father, armed with fire. The two thunderbolts are one.

Had these truths soaked the ears of the Jews ^a and been understood sufficiently to touch their dull heartstrings, they would have listened to the Lord of the heavenly powers, who had come to save the sheep that were being lost; but all the trappings had vanished from their ears and gone to fashion a cast head of Baal,^b robbing the ears of their honour. The sinning people's leader appears from the mountain of flashing light and from hearing the speech of God, bringing down to their blinded tents the tablets graven by that awful finger; but the people fall on their faces and will not see Christ written symbolically in the figure of the law's mystery. Unhappy race, in that they covered their trembling eyes before the dazzling light and pressed close their garments to veil their faces! But we have thrown back the veil and see Christ in person, looking upon God with countenance uncovered,^c nor do we lie with head bowed down under the weight of the law, but with face lifted up we recognise the law's splendour. Alas for the tree that was once so leafy, its branches so fertile! Alas for the root of the olive whose fruits were once so rich! Lo, since the wild olive was grafted on thee, thy stem flourishes again and is truncus et externi vestitur cortice libri.

PRUDENTIUS

 iam miserere tui. non se silvestris olivi surculus exultans alieno stipite iactat, sed monet ut generis proprii memor unguine amaro contristare comas desuescas, stirpe nec imo 345 invideas missis in celsa cacumina virgis.
 blasphemias Dominum, gens ingratiissima, Christum.
 pascha tuum dic, dic, cuius de sanguine festum tam sollemne tibi est? quis tandem caeditur agnus
 anniculus? sacer ille tibi redeuntibus annis, 350 sed sacer in pecude. stultum est sic credere sacrum,
 sanguine balantis summos contingere^f postes, lascivire choris, similaginis azymon esse, cum fermentati turgescant crimine mores.
 non sapis, imprudens, nostrum te effingere pascha, 355 legis et antiquae praeductis pingere sulcis omne sacramentum retinet quod passio vera, passio, quae nostram defendit sanguine frontem corporeamque domum signato conlinit ore?
 hanc fugit exclusis Aegyptia plaga procellis,¹ 360
 haec regis Pharii regnum ferale resolvit, deque potestatis mundanae grandine densa eripit Abraham cum stirpe et gente fideli.
 Abrahae genus est verum, cui sanguis in ore creditus inscriptusque rubet, cui visus in orbe 365 haud dubitante fide Deus est, Deus ex Patre verus.

ille Deum vidit, visum mox credidit: at tu,

¹ Some MSS. have flagellis.

^a Cf. Romans xi, 13-24,

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

clothed with a covering of bark that is strange to it. Have pity on thyself now. The scion of woodland olive does not vaunt itself, glorying in a stem that is not its own, but gives warning that thou remember thy stock, cease to cloud the foliage with a bitter coating, and envy not, deep in thy trunk, the shoots that rise to high tops.^a Thou dost blaspheme the Lord Christ, ungrateful race. Thy Passover—say, say, whose is the blood that makes it a feast so holy in thine eyes? What is the yearling lamb that is slain? Thou holdest it sacred each returning year, but it is sacred as a beast. It is folly to believe there is aught sacred in touching the tops of thy doorposts with a lamb's blood, in making merry with song and eating unleavened bread, while thy conduct is rising with the leaven of sin. Art thou so ignorant as not to understand it is our Passover thou dost represent? That in the lines drawn before by the old law thou dost portray all the mystery contained in the true passion, that passion which protects our foreheads with blood and smears it on our bodily dwelling in a mark on the brow?^b It is from this that the Egyptian plague flees, its violence shut out; it is this that gives release from the deathly rule of the king of Egypt, and from the thick hail falling on the power of this world saves Abraham and his stock and faithful people. The true descendant of Abraham is he on whose brow the mark of the blood in which he has trusted is written in red, who with assured faith has seen God in the world, true God born of the Father. Abraham saw God and straight-

^b The sign of the cross, made on the forehead, is compared to the smearing of the blood of the lamb on the lintels of the doors (Exodus xii, 7).

PRUDENTIUS

posteritas carnis, carnaliter omnia cernens, carnis opus sub lege geris, quam spiritus inplet interior; nec enim caelo lex carnea fluxit, 370 quam tu carne colis, sed Christo feta meamque spem paritura utero. quam spem, nisi numinis almum

lumen et adventum Domini, quem viderat Abrae prima fides, nostrisque Pater promiserat olim perspiciendum oculis et legis voce probandum? 375 nec solum legis; nam quae iam littera Christum non habet, aut quae non scriptorum armaria Christi

laude referta novis celebrant miraculâ libris?
Hebraeus pangit stilus, Attica copia pangit, pangit et Ausoniae facundia tertia linguae. 380 Pilatus iubet ignorans "I, scribe, tripictis digere versiculis quae sit subfixa potestas, fronte crucis titulus sit triplex, triplice lingua agnoscat Iudaea legens et Graecia norit et venerata Deum percenseat aurea Roma." 385

quidquid in aere cavo reboans tuba curva remugit, quidquid ab arcano vomit ingens spiritus haustu, quidquid casta chelys, quidquid testudo resultat, organa disparibus calamis quod consona miscent, aemula pastorum quod reddunt vocibus antra, 390
Christum concelebrat, Christum sonat, omnia
Christum

muta etiam fidibus sanctis animata loquuntur.
o nomen praedulce mihi! lux et decus et spes

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

way believed he had seen Him; but thou, who art his descendant after the flesh, seest all things in the way of the flesh and doest the work of the flesh under a law which is only fulfilled by a spirit within; for it is not a carnal law that came down from heaven, the law which thou dost honour in the flesh, but one pregnant with Christ, that should give birth to my hope. And what hope, but the kindly light of the Godhead and the coming of the Lord, whom Abraham's faith had been the first to see, and the Father had promised should one day be seen by our eyes and proved by the voice of the law? And not of the law only; for what literature now does not contain Christ? What book-case is not filled with the praise of Christ, celebrating his wonderful works in new books? The Hebrew pen, the fulness of Athens, and third the eloquent tongue of Italy are all composing them. . . Pilate in his ignorance gives command: "Go, scribe, set out in lines thrice inscribed what power it is that is crucified. On the head of the cross let there be a threefold superscription; in the three tongues, as they read, let Judaea recognise and Greece know God, and golden Rome worship Him while she scans the words." All the loud music that sounds in the curved ^a trumpet's hollow metal, all that the great deep-drawn breath pours forth, all the ringing notes of holy harp and lyre, all the mingled harmony of unequal organ-pipes, all the songs that grottos in rivalry re-echo to the shepherds' voices, proclaim Christ and sound Christ's name; even all dumb things are quickened by the holy music and speak of Christ. O name passing sweet to me, my light and glory and hope and my shield! O sure ^a But the tuba properly so called was a straight instrument.

PRUDENTIUS

praesidiumque meum, requies o certa laborum, blandus in ore sapor, fragrans odor, inriguus fons, 395
 castus amor, pulchra species, sincera voluptas!
 si gens surda negat sibi tot praeconia de te, tam multas rerum voces elementaque tantae nuntia laetitiae stolidas intrare per aures, audiat insanum bacchantis energima monstri, 400 quod rabidus clamat capta inter viscera daemon, et credat miseranda suis. torquetur Apollo nomine percussus Christi, nec fulmina Verbi ferre potest; agitant miserum tot verbera linguae, quot laudata Dei resonant miracula Christi. 405
 intonat antistes Domini "fuge, callide serpens, exue te membris, et spiras solve latentes.
 mancipium Christi, fur corruptissime,^a vexas.
 desine, Christus adest, humani corporis ultor:
 non licet ut spoliū rapias, cui Christus inhaesit. 410 pulsus abi, ventose liquor; Christus iubet, exi." has inter voces medias Cyllenius ardens eiulat, et notos suspirat Iuppiter ignes.
 ecce Gerasenos legio ruit effera porcos, et post multiplices busti sub rupe catenas, 415
 poenarum gemitus longis grunnitibus edit.
 clamarat, sed ab ore hominis "cognoscimus, Iesu nate Deo, nate sceptris et germine David, quid sis, quid venias; qua nos virtute repellas novimus, adventusque tui terrore iacemus." 420
 haec, Iudaea, tuas vox non pervenit ad aures?
 pervenit, mentem sed non penetravit egenam lucis, et a primis foribus disclusa refugit.

^a Cf. Mark i, 23 ff., v, 1 ff.

^b Mercury. For the description of the gods of the pagans as "devils" (δαίμονες, δαιμόνια) cf. 1 Corinthians x, 20-21.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

repose from toil, sweet savour in the mouth, fragrant perfume, spring of life-giving water, pure love, beauteous form, delight unmixed! If a race that is deaf says that all this proclaiming of Thee, all these voices of nature, these elements that bring tidings of joy so great, enter not its dull ears, then let it hear the wild monster's demoniacal raving, the cries of the raging devil in the flesh he has taken captive,^a and let it, poor creature, believe its own! Apollo writhes when the name of Christ smites him, he cannot bear the lightnings of the Word, the lashing tongue torments him sorely whenever the praises of the God Christ's wonderful works are sounded. The priest of the Lord thunders: "Away, cunning serpent! Quit his body, and undo thy hidden coils. He whom thou art disquieting, thou corrupt thief, is Christ's property. Give over, for Christ is here to avenge man's body. Thou may'st not make spoil of him to whom Christ cleaves. Away! Thou art beaten, vain spirit. Christ commands: go out of him." In the midst of these words he of Cyllene ^b burns and shrieks, and Jupiter's breath is hot with the fires he knows so well. See, the wild legion drives the Gerasene swine headlong, and after the manifold chains that bound it in the rock-tomb, vents in long-drawn grunts the anguish of its punishment. It had cried out, but with the man's lips, "We know what Thou art, Jesus, the Son of God, born of David's royal stock, and why Thou comest. We know the power wherewith Thou dost drive us away, and are cast down with dread at thy coming." Has not this utterance, Judaea, reached thine ears? Yes, but not penetrated to thy darkened understanding; it was shut out and fled back from the outer door. He that audiit adventum Domini, quem solis Hiberi vesper habet, roseos ¹ et qui novus excipit ortus. 425 laxavit Scythicas verbo penetrante pruinas vox evangelica, Hyrcanas quoque fervida brumas solvit, ut exutus glacie iam mollior amnis Caucasea de cote fluat Rhodopeius Hebrus.

PRUDENTIUS

 mansuevere Getae, feritasque cruenta Geloni 430
 lacte mero sitiens exsanguia pocula miscet libatura sacros Christi de sanguine potus.
 novit et Atlantis pridem plaga perfida Mauri dedere crinitos ad Christi altaria reges.
 ex quo mortalem praestrinxit Spiritus alvum, 435 Spiritus ille Deus, Deus et se corpore matris induit atque hominem de virginitate creavit, Delphica damnatis tacuerunt sortibus antra, non tripodas cortina regit,² non spumat anhelus fata Sibyllinis fanaticus edita libris. 440 perdidit insanos mendax Dodona vapores, mortua iam mutae lugent oracula Cumae, nec responsa refert Libycis in Syrtibus Hammon.
 ipsa suis Christum Capitolia Romula maerent principibus lucere Deum, destructaque templa 445

¹ Some MSS. have roseus et quem.

² Many of the older editions read tegit with very slight MS. support.

^a Prudentius is careless about the geography. The Hebrus (Maritza) is a Balkan river.

^b Ancient statements about Delphi (mainly from Roman times) speak of a chasm or cave, from which vapours arose and inspired the priestess. Modern investigation on the spot shows that there was at most a small underground chamber,

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

dwells under the western sun of evening has heard of the Lord's coming, and he that welcomes anew the rosy dawn. The sound of the gospel with its piercing word has loosened the frosts of Scythia, and its warmth unlocked the Hyrcanian winter, so that Rhodopeian Hebrus, freed from ice, is now a kindlier stream as it flows from the rocks of Caucasus.^a The Getans have grown peaceable and the bloody, savage Gelonian, when he thirsts, fills bloodless cups with pure milk, for he will taste the holy draught of the blood of Christ. The once treacherous land of Moorish Atlas has learned to dedicate its long-haired kings at Christ's altar. Since the Spirit, that Spirit who is God, touched a mortal womb and God entered into a mother's body and by a virgin made himself man, the cavern ^b of Delphi has fallen silent, its oracles condemned; no longer does the cauldron direct responses from the tripod. No longer does a priest possessed utter with foaming mouth and panting breath ^c fates drawn from Sibylline Books. Lying Dodona has lost its maddening vapours. Cumae is dumb and mourns for its dead oracles, and Ammon returns no answer in the deserts of Libya. The very Capitol at Rome laments that Christ is the God who sheds light for her emperors and her temples have and the theory of intoxicating vapours is ruled out by the geological nature of the site. The cortina was a basin-shaped seat on which the priestess sat, supported by the tripod. Even by Cicero's time the oracle had much declined (De Divinatione, I, 37; II, 117), and like the others it had really ceased to function long before it was formally abolished. (Parke, History of the Delphic Oracle.)

^c This language is not appropriate to the Quindecimviri who had charge of the Sibylline Books at Rome and who consulted them when so instructed by the senate.

PRUDENTIUS

imperio cecidisse ducum. iam purpura supplex sternitur Aeneadae rectoris ad atria Christi, vexillumque crucis summus dominator adorat.
 principibus tamen e cunctis non defuit unus me puero, ut memini, ductor fortissimus armis, 450
 conditor et legum, celeberrimus ore manumque, consultor patriae, sed non consultor habendae religionis, amans ter centum milia divum.
 perfidus ille Deo, quamvis non perfidus orbi, augustum caput ante pedes curvare Minervae 455
 fictilis et soleas Iunonis lambere, plantis Herculis advolvi, genua incerare Dianae, quin et Apollineo frontem submittere gypso aut Pollucis equum suffire ardentibus extis.
 forte litans Hecaten placabat sanguine multo; 460 pontificum festis ferienda securibus illic agmina vaccarum steterant, vitulasque revincta fronte coronatas umbrabat torta cupressus.
 iamque insertato reserarat viscera cultro vittatus de more senex manibusque cruentis 465 tractabat trepidas letali frigore fibras, postremosque animae pulsus in corde tepenti callidus interpret numeris et fine notabat:
 cum subito exclamat media inter sacra sacerdos pallidus " en quid ago? maius, rex optime, maius 470 numen nescio quod nostris intervenit aris quam sufferre queant spumantia cymbia lacte,

* The ordinances against paganism did not extend to the destruction of temples; indeed it was the emperors' intention that they should be preserved (cf. Contra Symmachum I, 501-5, referring to statues of gods as works of art). Jerome refers to the Capitoline and other temples at Rome in terms which do not imply more than neglect. But there was much unauthorised spoliation in different places. See Dill, Roman Society in the last Century of the Western Empire, p. 32.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

fallen in ruins at her leaders' command.^a Now the successor of Aeneas, in the imperial purple, prostrates himself in prayer at the house of Christ, and the supreme lord adores the banner of the cross. Yet of all the emperors one ^b there was in my boyhood, I remember, a brave leader in arms, a lawgiver, famous for speech and action, one who cared for his country's weal, but not for maintaining true religion, for he loved myriad gods. False to God, however true to the world, he would bend the head of majesty before Minerva's feet, would lick a clay Juno's sandals, grovel at the feet of Hercules, wax the knees of Diana,^c and bow before a plaster Apollo or smoke Pollux's ^d horse with the burning of entrails. It chanced that he was at sacrifice, making propitiatory offering to Hecate with much blood, and cows had stood there in columns waiting to be struck with the priests' ceremonial axes, and calves with cypress twined in wreaths binding and shading their heads. Already the old man, wearing his ritual head-bands, had put in the knife and laid open the inward parts, and with blood-stained fingers was handling the tissues still palpitating in the chill of death, and like a skilled interpreter counting, till they stopped, the last life-beats in the heart as it grew cold, when suddenly in the midst of the rites the priest turned pale and cried "What do I do? Some greater godhead, O best of princes, is interfering with our sacrifice, yea greater than bowls of frothing milk, the ^b Julian the Apostate (361-363).

^c A reminiscence of Juvenal (Sat. 10, 55) referring to the custom of writing a petition on a wax tablet and laying it on the knees of the image.

^d But it is Castor who is the horseman (Iliad, III, 237).

PRUDENTIUS

caesarum sanguis pecudum, verbena, coronae.
 accitas video longe dispergier umbras, territa Persephone vertit vestigia retro 4' extinctis facibus, tracto ¹ fugitiva flagello.
 nil agit arcanum murmur, nil Thessala prosunt carmina, turbatos revocat nulla hostia manes.
 nonne vides ut turibulis frigentibus ignis marceat, ut canis pigrescat pruna favillis? 48 ecce Palatinus pateram retinere minister non valet, elisa destillant balsama dextra, flamen et ipse suas miratur vertice laurus cedere, et incertum frustratur victima ferrum.
 nescio quis certe subrepsit Christicolarum 48 hic iuvenum; genus hoc hominum tremat infula et omne
 pulvinar divum. lotus procul absit et unctus;
 pulchra reformatis redeat Proserpina sacris."
 dixit, et exsanguis conlabitur ac, velut ipsum cerneret exerto minitanti fulmine Christum, 49 ipse quoque exanimis posito diademate princeps pallet et adstantes circumspicit, ecquis alumnus chrismatis inscripto signaret tempora ligno, qui Zoroastreos turbasset fronte susurros.
 armiger e cuneo puerorum flavicomantum, 49 purpurei custos lateris, deprenditur unus,

¹ Some MSS. of both classes have fracto.

^a Identical with Hecate as goddess of the world of the dead.

^b Cf. Lactantius, Divinae Institutiones, IV, 27: "When they are sacrificing to their gods and some one is standing by whose forehead has been crossed, the rites are ineffectual and the soothsayer cannot read the entrails."

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

blood of slaughtered cattle, holy herbs and wreaths can bear. I see the spirits we summoned being scattered far away. Persephone^a is affrighted and turns her steps back, her torches put out, her scourge trailing as she flees. Of no avail is our secret, muttered prayer, vain our Thessalian spells; no offering can call back the routed spirits. Seest thou not how the flame is wasting away in the cold censers, the fire dying in the white ashes? See, the servant of the palace cannot hold the bowl; his hand is broken and lets the balsams spill over. The very flamen wonders at his bay-leaves slipping from his head, and the victim disappoints the unsteady knife. Surely some young worshipper of Christ has stolen upon us; this sort of men the priestly fillet and the gods' couch ever fear.^b Let any that is washed and anointed depart, and let the rites be renewed and fair Proserpine return." So saying, he fell strengthless to the ground, and the emperor himself, as though he saw the very Christ menacing him with thunderbolt outstretched, turned pale as death, and laying aside his diadem looked round upon the bystanders, to see whether there was any child of unction whose brow bore the sign of the cross and who had disordered the muttered words of Persian ritual.^c One man-at-arms out of the company of flaxen-haired^d lads, guarding the emperor's person, was found and denied not, but threw away his pair of ^c Under Julian there was a revival of the cult of Mithras, which had its origin in the old religion of Persia. See Dill, op. cit. p. 67; Bailey, Phases in the Religion of Ancient Rome, p. 204.

^d I.e. German. Even Augustus and some of his early successors had a personal guard of Germans.

PRUDENTIUS

nec negat, et gemino gemmata hastilia ferro proicit ac signum Christi se ferre fatetur.
 prosiluit pavidus deiecto antistite princeps marmoreum fugiens nullo comitante sacellum, 500 dum tremefacta cohors dominique oblita supinas erigit ad caelum facies atque invocat Iesum.
 iamne piget facti? iam paenitet? en tibi Christum,
 infelix Iudaea, Deum, qui sabbata solvens terrea mortales aeterna in sabbata sumpsit, 505 gentibus emicuit, praefulsit regibus, orbem possidet, imperii dominam sibi cedere ¹ Romam compulit et simulacra deum Tarpeia subegit.
 disce tuis, miseranda, malis, quo vindice tandem vana superstitio lex et carnaliter acta 510 plectatur, cuius virtus te proterat ultrix.
 destructone iacent Solomonia saxa metallo aedificata manu? iacet illud nobile templum.
 cur iacet? artificis quia dextra solubilis illud caementum struxit resolubile; iure solutum est 515 et iacet, in nihilum quoniam redit omne politum.
 quod fieri recipit, recipit quandoque perire.
 si nostrum contra quod sit vis discere templum, est illud quod nemo opifex fabriliter aptans composuit, quod nulla abies pinusve dolata 520 texuit, exciso quod numquam marmore crevit;
 cuius onus nullis fultum sublime columnis fornice curvato tenui super arte pendedit, sed Verbo factum Domini; non voce sonora, sed Verbo, quod semper erat. Verbum caro factum est. 525

¹ Some MSS. of both classes have credere.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

lances with jewelled shafts and acknowledged that he bore the seal of Christ. The emperor leapt forward in fear, upsetting the priest and fleeing from the marble shrine with no attendant, while his trembling retinue, forgetting their master, with heads bent back raised their faces towards heaven and called upon Jesus. Dost thou not now loathe thy deed? Dost thou not now repent? There thou seest Christ, unhappy Judaea, as God, who, doing away the earthly Sabbath, has taken mankind to an eternal Sabbath. He has flashed upon the nations, his glory has shone before kings; He possesses the world, and has constrained imperial Rome to yield to Him, and subdued the images of gods on her Tarpeian Hill. Learn from thy ills, poor creature, by whose vengeance it is that vain superstition and carnal keeping of the law are punished, whose avenging power it is that tramples upon thee. Do not Solomon's stones, that were built up by hand, lie in ruins, his metal-work destroyed? That famous temple lies in ruins. And why? Because it was a craftsman's perishable hand that framed that perishable work of stone. Justly has it perished and now lies in ruins, since every work of art turns again to nothingness; that which admits of being made is bound one day to perish. If on the other hand thou wouldst learn what our temple is, it is one that no workman built up piece by piece with the skill of his craft, no fabric of hewn fir or pine, nor ever rose out of quarried marble. It is one whose mass does not rest high up on pillars, supported with delicate skill on curving arches. It is made from the Word of the Lord; not his loud-sounding voice, but his Word, which ever lived. The Word was made flesh.

PRUDENTIUS

hoc templum aeternum est, hoc finem non habet, hoc tu
 expugnare volens flagris, cruce, felle petisti.
 destructum iacuit poenis vexantibus: esto, matris enim ex utero quod destrueretur habebat.
 sed quod morte brevi materna ex parte solutum
 est 530
 maiestate Patris vivum lux tertia reddit.
 vidisti angelicis comitatum coetibus alte ire meum, cuius servor munimine, templum.
 illius aeternae suspendunt culmina portae, ac per inaccessas scalarum gloria turres 535
 tollitur et gradibus lucet via candida summis.
 at tua congestae tumulant holocausta ruinae.
 quid mereare Titus docuit, docuere rapinis Pompeianae acies, quibus exstirpata per omnes terrarum pelagique plagas tua membra feruntur. 540 exiliis vagus huc illuc fluitantibus errat Iudaeus, postquam patria de sede revulsus supplicium pro caede luit, Christique negati sanguine respersus commissa piacula solvit.
 en quo priscorum virtus defluxit avorum! 545 servit ab antiquis dilapsa fidelibus heres nobilitas, sed iam non nobilis; illa recentem suspectat ¹ captiva fidem. vis tanta novellae credulitatis inest; Christum confessa triumphat gens infida prius, Christi sed victa negatrix 550 subditur imperio dominos sortita fideles.

¹ Bergman reads suscepit with the 6th-century MS.

^a Pompey besieged and took Jerusalem in 63 B.C., but though he entered the Holy of Holies he did not rifle the

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

This is the temple that is everlasting and without end ; this is the temple thou hast attacked, seeking to take it with scourge and cross and gall. It was cast down in destruction by tormenting pains. Be it so, for from the mother's womb it had what could be destroyed : but that which, of the mother's part, was undone in brief death, the third day restores to life by the majesty of the Father. Thou hast seen my temple, by whose protection I am saved, rise on high with companies of angels. Everlasting gates support its high top, glorious stairs rise through towers inviolate, and at the summit of the steps there shines a white pathway. But thy whole burnt offerings are entombed under heaps of ruins. What thou dost merit, Titus has taught thee, and Pompey's armies ^a have taught thee with their rapine. Rooted out by them, thy members are carried over every region of land and sea. From place to place the homeless Jew wanders in ever-shifting exile, since the time when he was torn from the abode of his fathers and has been suffering the penalty for murder, and having stained his hands with the blood of Christ whom he denied, paying the price of sin. See what has become of the virtue of his forefathers of olden times ! The noble race that was heir to the faithful men of old has scattered away from them and is enslaved, no longer noble ; it is in captivity under the younger faith. Such is the strength the new belief possesses ; a race that formerly was unfaithful now confesses Christ and triumphs, but that which denied Christ is conquered and subdued and has fallen into the hands of masters who keep the faith.

Temple. Titus destroyed the city in A.D. 70. The dispersion of the Jews had been in process long before that date.

PRUDENTIUS

Sunt qui Iudaico cognatum dogma furori instituunt media Christum ratione secuti.
 hoc tantum, quod verus homo est, at caelitus illum adfirmant non esse Deum; pietate fatentur, 555 maiestate negant: morum pro laude sacratum concelebrant, adimunt naturae summa supernae.
 omne opus egregium, per quod sollertia pollens emicat, ingenii est aut roboris: illud acuto corde viget, duris excellit viribus istud. 560 mortale est sed utrumque homini; nam cana senescunt
 ingenia et validos consumunt saecula lacertos.
 haec nos in Domini virtute et laude perenni non sequimur: sequimur nullo quod semine terrae germinat, immundum quod non de laebe virili 565 sumit principium; tener illum seminat ignis, non caro nec sanguis patrius nec foeda voluptas.
 intactam thalami virtus divina puellam sincero adflatu per viscera casta maritat;
 inconperta ortus novitas iubet ut Deus esse 570 credatur Christus sic conditus. innuba virgo nubit spiritui, vitium nec sentit amoris.
 pubertas signata manet; gravis intus et extra incolumis, florens de fertilitate pudica, iam mater, sed virgo tamen, maris inscia mater. 575 quid renuis? quid inane caput, non credule, quassas?
 angelus hoc sancto fore nuntiat ¹ ore: placetne credere et angelicis aurem reserare loquellis?

¹ Some MSS. of both classes have sancto pronuntiat (or praenuntiat).

^a In this section (552-781) Prudentius argues against the teaching of some nominally Christian sects among the Jews, who denied the divine birth of Christ while holding that his

162

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

Some there are who set up a doctrine akin to the Jews' raving, and follow Christ by a middle way.^a This much they assert, that He is real man, but they say He is not God from heaven. In respect of goodness they admit, in respect of majesty they deny; they consecrate and honour Him for the merit of his character, but they rob Him of supreme divinity. Now every piece of excellent work through which potent skill shines forth is the work either of mind or of bodily strength, the one having the vigour of keen intelligence, the other surpassing in hardy physical power. But for man each of these is mortal, for the mind grows feeble with hoary age, and time wastes the stout arms. This is not the belief that we follow in the case of our Lord's merit and eternal glory. We believe that He springs from no earthly seed, takes no unclean beginning from sin-stained man. It is the subtle fire that begets Him, not a father's flesh nor blood nor foul passion. The divine power weds a maid inviolate, breathing its pure breath over her untainted flesh. The strange mystery of his birth bids us believe that the Christ thus conceived is God. The unwedded maid is wedded to the Spirit and feels no taint of passion. The seal of her virginity remains unbroken; pregnant within, she is untouched without, blossoming from a pure fertility, a mother now, but still a maiden, a mother that has not known husband. Why dost thou deny? Why shakest thou thy foolish head, O unbeliever? An angel with holy lips proclaims that this shall be. Wilt thou not believe, and unlock thine ear to the angel's goodness entitled Him to be called the Son of God. See the article on Ebionism in Hastings' Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics.

PRUDENTIUS

ipsa coruscantis monitum sacra virgo ministri credidit atque ideo concepit credula Christum; 580 credentes nam Christus adit, dubitabile pectus sub titubante fide refugo contemnit honore.
 virginitas et prompta fides Christum bibit alvo cordis et intactis condit paritura latebris.
 crede quod emissus solio Patris angelus infit. 585 vel, si concretus liquidam de sidere vocem non capit auditus, mulier quid coniuge praegnans clamet anus credens et tandem sobrius audi.
 mira fides! utero puer interceptus anili virgineum Dominum materno ex ore salutat, 590 primus et infantem non natus nuntiat infans iam nostrum; ¹ vagire sibi nam pusio nondum norat et ora Deo reserabat garrula Christo.
 promite secretos fatus; date, pandite librum, evomuit spirante Deo quem sanctus Esaias. 595 percensere libet calamisque revolvere sulcos, sidereis quos illa notis manus aurea duxit.
 ite hinc, dum rutilos apices submissus adoro, dum lacrimans veneror dumque oscula dulcia figo;
 gaudia concipiunt lacrimas, dant gaudia fletum. 600 advenit promissa dies quam dixerat iste adfore versiculus, cum virgo puerpera, teste haud dubie sponso, pacti cui cura pudoris, edidit, Emmanuelque meum me cernere fecit.
 estne Deus iam noster? homo versatur et adstat 605 nobiscum nomenque probat versumque vetustis obscurum saeculis praesenti inluminat ore.

¹ The stop is usually placed after sibi, not after nostrum. The punctuation in the text is due to M. Lavarenne.

^a Cf. Luke i, 41 ff.

^b Cf. Matthew i, 18-20.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

words? The holy Virgin herself believed the shining minister's prophecy, and therefore because of her faith she conceived Christ. For Christ comes to those who believe; the doubting heart, whose faith falters, He rejects and will not honour. Her maidenhood and ready faith drink in Christ in her womb and lay Him up in the pure secrecy of her heart, to bring Him forth in due time. Believe what the angel sent forth from the Father's throne saith; or, if thy hearing is thickened and receives not the clear voice from heaven, be sensible at last and hear with believing ear what an old woman pregnant by her husband cries.^a Marvel of faith!—the child imprisoned in the aged womb greets by his mother's lips his Lord, the maiden's son; a child unborn is the first to proclaim the child who now is ours; for the boy could not as yet utter his own baby voice and so, in honour of the God Christ, was opening lips that were ready of speech. Bring out the mystic prophecies, give me the book, and open it, that holy Esaias uttered under the inspiration of God. I would fain peruse it and unroll the lines which that golden hand traced with the pen in shining characters. Depart ye hence while I humbly adore the glittering letters, doing them reverence with tears, and imprint on them loving kisses. Joy begets tears, joy causes weeping. The promised day has come, which that verse foretold, when a virgin in labour, according to the indubitable witness of her betrothed, who was solicitous for her affianced modesty,^b brought forth a child and caused me to see my Emmanuel. Is not God now ours? As man He lives with us by our side and proves his name, illumining with his presence the verse that was dark to generations of old. Is not He God,

PRUDENTIUS

estne Deus, cuius cunas veneratus Eous lancibus auratis regalia fercula supplex virginis ad gremium pannis puerilibus offert? 610 quis tam pinnatus rapidoque simillimus austro nuntius Aurorae populos atque ultima Bactra attigit, inluxisse diem lactantibus horis, qua tener innupto penderet ab ubere Christus?
 "vidimus hunc" aiunt "puerum per sidera ferri, 615 et super antiquos signorum ardescere tractus." dirigit trepidans Chaldaeo in vertice pernox astrologus, cessisse Anguem, fugisse Leonem, contraxisse pedes lateris manco ordine Cancrum, cornibus infractis domitum mugire Iuxencum, 620
 sidus et Hirquinum laceris marcescere villis.
 labitur hinc pulsus Puer Hydrius, inde Sagittae, palantes Geminos fuga separat, inproba Virgo prodit amatores tacitos in fornice mundi, quique alii horrificis pendent in nubibus ignes 625 Luciferum timuere novum: rota lurida solis haeret, et excidium sentit iam iamque futurum, seque die medio velandum ¹ tegmine glauco, splendoremque poli perituum nocte diurna orbe repentinis caput obnubente tenebris. 630 hunc ego non cumulem myrrhaeque et turis et auri muneribus? scio quem videam, quae dona rependam.
 hunc ego non venerer, qui caelo visus humique inventus rex atque Deus moderatur utrumque naturae specimen, tumuloque inferna refringens 635

¹ So the oldest MS. and some others. Most have velandam.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

to whose cradle the East does reverence, offering on bended knee before the Virgin's lap kingly gifts on gilded platters for the child in swaddling-clothes? What winged messenger, swift as the rushing wind, came to the peoples of the morning in farthest Bactra to tell them a day had dawned whose hours were full of richness, the day on which the babe Christ hung on a breast unwedded? "We have seen," they said, "this child passing over the sky and outshining the trains of the ancient stars." The astrologer watching all night on a height in Chaldaea felt his blood curdle with alarm when he saw that the Serpent had given place, the Lion taken to flight, the Crab drawn in his feet in a crippled row along his side, that the Bull was roaring in defeat, his horns broken, the constellation of the Goat, with his hair torn, fading away. Here slides off in retreat the Boy with the Water Pot, there the Arrows, the Twins wander apart in flight, the false Maiden deserts her silent wooers in the vault of heaven, and the other blazing orbs hanging in awful clouds have feared the new Morning Star. The sun's wan disk stands still feeling his overthrow close at hand, conscious that he is to be curtained with a veil of darkness at noontide and the brightness of the sky to be lost in night by day while his orb covers its head with a sudden blackness.* Shall I not load this child with gifts of myrrh and incense and gold? I know whom I see, and what gifts to offer in recognition. Shall I not worship Him who has been seen in the heavens and appeared on earth, who as king and God governs nature in both her shapes, and who by breaking open the realm of death in the tomb bids them that are

* A prophetic allusion to the time of the crucifixion.

PRUDENTIUS

regna resurgentes secum iubet ire sepultos?
caelum habitat, terris intervenit, abdita rumpit Tartara. vera fides; Deus est, qui totus ubique
est.

numquid vana viros aut mens aut lingua fefellit?
numquid fortuitis frustrantia dona dederunt 640 casibus aut caeco votum sub honore dicarunt?
quae porro causa aut ratio submittere colla ante pedes Mariae puerique crepundia parvi, si tantum mortalis erat, nec summa potestas inplebat teneros divinis flatibus artus? 645 sed iam tolle magos, tus, aurum, myrrhea dona, quae verum docuere Deum, praesepia, pannos, matris adoratum gremium face sideris ardens:
ipsa Deum virtus factorum et mira loquantur.
insanos video subito mitescere ventos 650 cum iubeat Christus, video luctantia magnis aequora turbinibus tranquillo marmore tendi imperio Christi, video calcatus eundem cum patitur gurgis tergum solidante liquore.
ipse super fluidas plantis nitentibus undas 655 ambulat ac presso firmat vestigia fluctu, increpat ipse notos, et flatibus otia mandat.
quis iubeat saevis aquilonibus "ite, silete carceribus vestris amploque facessite ponto," sit nisi caelipotens aquilonum conditor idem? 660 ninguidus agnoscit Boreas atque imbrifer Euris nimborum dominum tempestatumque potentem, excitamque hiemem verrunt ridente sereno.
quis pelagi calcarit aquas? quis per vada glauca gressibus inpressis spatiatius triverit udum 665

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

buried rise and go with Him? He dwells in heaven, He visits the earth, He bursts the depths of hell. It is true belief: He is God, who is everywhere in his wholeness. Did vain thought or speech deceive those men? Did they give bootless gifts in circumstances that were mere matter of chance, or dedicate their offering in worship that was blind? What cause or reason had they to bend their heads before Mary's feet and the little one's baby-things, if He was but human and the supreme power was not filling the tender frame with the breath divine? But take away the wise men, the incense, the gold, the gifts of myrrh, which proved Him true God, the manger, the swaddling-clothes, the mother's adored bosom, that shone with the blaze of the star: yet the very power of his acts, his very miracles, would proclaim Him God. I see the mad winds grow suddenly gentle when Christ commands. I see the seas, contending under violent storms, spread out in calm expanse at Christ's bidding. I see the deep submitting to his tread, the water making a firm surface. He walks on the flowing waves, resting his feet on them and bearing on the flood with firm steps. He rebukes the winds and bids the breezes sink to rest. Who would give command to the raging blasts, "Go, be silent in your prison-houses, depart ye from the broad sea," were he not also the creator of the blasts, the lord of the heavens? The snowy north wind, the rainy east, recognise the lord of the storm-clouds, the ruler of the tempests, and sweep away the storm they raised, leaving a clear, smiling sky. Who would tramp the waters of the sea? Who, walking over the dark deep and planting the weight of his steps on it, would tread the watery path without sinking, non submersus iter, sola pendulus et pede sicco, aequoreae nisi factor aquae, qui Spiritus olim ore superfusus patrio volitabat in undis nondum discretis nec certo litore clausis?

PRUDENTIUS

 sustinuit gressum Domini famulus liquor, ac se 670 mobilitate carens solidos substrinxit ad usus.
 quid diversa Dei memorem facta inclyta Christi?
 altius inspecta quae,¹ maiestate negator, haud dubitans hominem, tute ipse fatebere numen.
 inleuit caecos oculos et lumina limo 675 reddidit umectam sacro sputamine terram contrectans digitis: luteum medicamen operta nox habuit, tenebras obducta uligo removit.
 insuper ostendit quonam caligo lavacro expurganda foret. variis Siloa refundit 680 momentis latices, nec fluctum semper anhelat, sed vice distincta largos lacus accipit haustus.
 agmina languentum sitiunt spem fontis avari, membrorum maculas puro ablutura natatu.
 certatim interea roranti pumice raucas 685 exspectant scatebras et sicco margine pendent.
 hoc limum iubet inpositum de fonte lavari Christus et infusa vultum splendescere luce.
 norat enim limo sese informasse figuram ante tenebrosam, proprii medicamen et oris 690 adiecisse novo, quem primum finxerat, Adae.
 nam sine divino Domini perflamine summi arida terra fuit, nulli prius apta medellae:
 sed postquam liquidus caelesti Spiritus ore virgineam respersit humum, medicabilis illa est. 695 inde trahit sucum lentoque umore salutem

¹ quae is strongly supported by the MSS. Most editions before Bergman's read quem with slight authority.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

his soles upheld and his foot dry, were it not the creator of the waters of the sea, the Spirit who once was breathed on it from the Father's lips and moved to and fro on the waves, ere yet they were separated or shut off by a defined shore? The sea, as its Lord's servant, sustained his step, and stilled and checked itself to afford firm footing. What need to tell of the God Christ's manifold glorious works? If you look deeper into them, you who deny in point of majesty while not doubting his humanity, you will yourself admit they are divine. He smeared blind eyes and with mud restored their sight, working with his fingers earth that was moistened with his sacred spittle; the sightless night found a cure in mud, the coating of wet earth removed the darkness. He showed, besides, the washing-place that was needed to cleanse the mists away. It is at diverse times that Siloam disgorges its waters; not always does it emit the stream, but at intervals the pool receives generous draughts. Companies of the sick yearn for the hope of the niggard spring, waiting to wash away their bodily stains by bathing in its purity. Eagerly meanwhile they look for its loud welling from the dripping stone, and hang over the dry edge. With the water of this spring Christ bids wash the clay He laid on, and the face to shine with the inpouring of light; for He knew that with clay He had formerly shaped a figure that was darkened until He gave the healing power of his mouth to the new Adam whom first He had made. For without the divine breath of the supreme Lord the earth was dry and not yet fit for healing; but since the pure Spirit issuing from the heavenly lips besprinkled a virgin's soil, it has the power to heal; from thence it draws sap, and with inlinit, infunditque diem baptismate lota.

PRUDENTIUS

 caecus adest oculis iam Christi ex ore relectis seque luto et nitidis lucem sumpsisse fluentis clamat, et auctorem stupefacta per oppida monstrat, 700
 auctorem lucis largitoremque dierum, non dedignatum medicae purgamen aquai corpore sub proprio monstrare errantibus aegris.
 milibus ex multis paucissima quaeque retexam, summam relegam totus quae non capit orbis. 705 quinque in deserto panes iubet et duo pisces adponi in pastum populis, qui forte magistrum non revocante fame stipabant undique saeptum, inmemoresque cibi vicos, castella, macellum, oppida, mercatus et conciliabula et urbes 710 respuerant, largo contenti dogmate vesci.
 multa virum strato fervent convivia faeno, centenos simul accubitus iniere sodales, seque per innumeras infundunt agmina mensas, pisciculis—iam crede Deum—saturanda duobus 715 et paucis crescente cibo per fragmina crustis.
 ambesis dapibus cumulatim aggesta redundant fercula, bis senos micarum molibus implent post cenam cophinos; crudus conviva resudat congeriem ventris, gemit et sub fasce minister. 720 quis cumulare potest epulas in grandia parvas?
 quis, nisi qui corpus pastumque et corporis omnem condens ex nihilo nulla existente creavit

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

its clinging moisture spreads salvation, and pours in the light of day when it is washed in baptism. The blind man appears, his eyes now by Christ's mouth opened, crying aloud that he has received the light by means of clay and the shining waters, and declaring the author of his cure through the astonished towns, who is the author of light and giver of day, who did not disdain to show forth the cleansing virtue of healing water in his own body to suffering sinners. Out of numberless miracles I shall narrate but a very few, recounting briefly works which the whole world cannot contain. Five loaves and two fishes He commands in the desert to be served to feed the people, who as it chanced were crowding and pressing round their teacher. Hunger could not call them back; with no thought of food, they had turned their backs on villages, places of defence, markets, towns, centres of trade and trafficking, and cities, and were content to feed on the bounty of his teaching. There is a busy swarm of companies feasting together, with the parched grass beneath them. Like bosom friends they have joined in a hundred parties, spreading in their crowds in countless circles, to be satisfied with two small fishes (believe now that He is God!) and a few loaves of bread, which provide more and more food the more they are broken. When they have partaken heartily the dishes are still piled high and running over with the viands; twelve baskets they heap with the fragments after the banquet; while the cloyed guest is exuding the mass in his belly, the server groans under his load. Who can magnify a little meal into largeness? Who but He who is the maker both of the body and of all that feeds the body, who created the world out

PRUDENTIUS

mundum materia? non sicut sculptor ab aeris rudere decoctam consuescit vivere massam, 725 sed Deus omnipotens orbem sine semine finxit.
 nil erat omne quod est: nil id procedere et esse atque novum fieri, mox et grandescere iussum est.
 parvum de nihilo primum fuit, addita parvo incrementa modis auxerunt omnia plenīs. 730 ergo ego, cum videam manibus sic crescere Christi parva alimenta hominum, possum dubitare per ipsum
 exiguas rerum species elementaque mundi ex nihilo primum modica et mox grandia sensim crevisse, ex modicis quae consummata videmus? 735 ac ne post hominum pastus calcata perirent, neve relictā lupis aut vulpibus exquisve muribus in praedam nullo custode iacerent, bis sex adpositi, cumulati qui bona Christi servarent gravidis procul ostentata canistris. 740 sed quid ego haec autem titubanti voce retexo, indignus qui sancta canam? procede sepulcro, Lazare, dic cuius vocem tellure sub ima audieris, quae vis penetraverit abdita leti, quod, cum te Christus penitus nigrante profundo 745 inmersum vocat ut redeas, ceu proximus audis, nec remoratus ades? quae tam vicina Charybdis regna tenebrarum tenui distantia fine coniungit superis? ubi Taenara tristia vasto in praeceps deiecta chaos, latebrosus et ille 750

^a A promontory (Cape Matapan) in the south of the Peloponnese, where there was a fabled entrance to the world of the dead.

^b Phlegethon, in the under-world.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

of nothing when as yet there were no materials? He is not like the sculptor who brings to life a block that has been smelted from crude ore, but as God almighty He made the world without seed. All that is was nothing, and that nothing was bidden to come forth into being, to become a new thing, and then to grow in magnitude. The first creation out of nothing was small, and enlargements added to the small increased all things in full measure. When, therefore, I see a small supply of nourishment for men thus grow under Christ's hands, can I doubt that by Him, too, the small forms of things and elements of the world first arose in smallness out of nothing, and then by degrees grew great, which now we see from small beginnings made perfect? And lest, after men were fed, the blessings of Christ should be trampled on and wasted, or left to lie uncared for and become the spoil of wolves or foxes or tiny mice, twelve men were put in charge of them, to gather them together and save them and display them in laden baskets. But why do I with my quavering voice recount all this, unworthy as I am to sing of holy things? Come forth from the tomb, Lazarus, and tell whose voice it is that thou hast heard deep down in the earth, what force it is that has reached to the hidden abode of death, that, when thou art sunk in the dark abyss and Christ calls thee to return, thou hearest as though near by, and without delay dost present thyself. What gulf so near unites the realm of darkness to the world of the living with but a slender boundary between? Where is the gloomy Taenarum^a that plunges down precipitously into the desolation of blackness, and that unexplored stream^b that rolls amnis inexpletis volvens incendia ripis?

PRUDENTIUS

ante fores tumuli, quas saxa inmania duro obice damnarant scopulis substructa cavatis, stat Dominus nomenque ciet frigentis amici.
nec mora, funereus revolutis rupibus horror 755 evomit exequias gradiente cadavere vivas.
solvite iam laetae redolentia vincla, sorores.
solus odor sparsi spiramen aromatis efflat, nec de corporeo nidorem sordida tabo aura refert, oculos sanie stillante solutos 760 pristinus in speculum decor excitat, et putrefactas tincta rubore genas paulatim purpura vestit.
quis potuit fluidis animam suffundere, membris?
nimirum qui membra dedit, qui fictilis ulvae perflavit venam madidam, cui tabida glaeba 765 traxit sanguineos infecto umore colores.
o mors auritis iam mitis legibus, o mors surda prius, iam docta sequi quodcumque iubetur, cui tantum de te licuit? convicta fatere esse Deum, solus qui me tibi praecepit, Iesum. 770 abde negatores Christi, nemo invidet, abde; utere sorte tua blasphemis nocte tenendis perpetua. plebem iustorum capta resolve, qui norunt hominem atque Deum sic dicere
Christum
ut verus summusque Deus mortalia gestet. 775
ipse gerit quod struxit opus, nec ferre pudescit factor quod peperit, corpus loquor atque animae vim.
finxerat hoc digitis, animam sufflaverat ore.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

fire between its banks insatiate? Before the doors of the tomb, on which monstrous stones, blocking the chambered rock, had imposed an impenetrable barrier, stands the Lord and calls the name of his friend now cold in death. Straightway the stones roll back and the fearsome grave sends forth a living corpse, the dead man walking! Undo now in joy, you his sisters, the perfumed bands. The scent of the sprinkled spice is the only breath; no foul air brings any stench of bodily corruption. The eyes that were wasted with oozing decay revive and shine like a mirror with their old-time beauty, and a bright tinge of red gradually clothes the cheeks that were putrefied. Who has been able to pour life on the decaying body? Doubtless He who gave the body, who breathed through the wet substance of the slime He moulded, at whose command the crumbling earth, impregnated with moisture, took on the hue of life. O Death, grown gentle now, and whose authority listens to orders, Death that wert aforetime deaf, but now hast been taught to obey command, to whom has such power over thee been given? Confess in thy defeat that Jesus, who alone saves me from thy hands, is God. Put away them that deny the Christ; no man grudges them to thee; put them away. Use the power that falls to thee to keep the blasphemers in unending night. But now that thou art made captive, release the multitude of the righteous, who have learned to call Christ both man and God, meaning thereby that the true and supreme God has put on mortality. He himself wears the work He made, and the creator thinks no shame to bear what He brought to being, I mean the body and the living soul. The body He had shaped with his fingers, the totum hominem Deus adsumit, quia totus ab ipso

PRUDENTIUS

est,
et totum redimit quem sumpserat, omne reducens, 780
quidquid homo est, istud tumulis, ast illud abyssos.

Occurrit dubitans hic dissertator et illud obicit, anne fides capit ut substantia flante inspirata Deo cruciatum sentiat, utque infernī petat ima poli barathroque coquatur? 785 crede animam non esse Deum, sed crede creatis maiores cunctis, ipsam quoque crede creatam.
formata est namque ore Dei, quae non erat ante, sed formata habitu pulcherrima pictaque rebus divinis, et plena Deo similisque creati, 790 non tamen ipsa Deus, quoniam generatio non est, sed factura Dei est; solus de corde Parentis Filius emicuit; verus, verus¹ Deus ille.
conlatum est animae, subito ut, quae non erat, esset.

ille coaeternus Patris est et semper in ipso, 795 nec factus sed natus habet quodcumque paternum
est,

haec similis velut umbra Dei est. sic ipse locutus factor, utroque hominem meditans de figmine iunctim

aedificare sui similem; sed non habet umbra quod corpus solidum, cuius imitatio in umbra est, 800 atque aliud verum est, aliud simulatio veri.
est similis saeculis quod non consumitur ullis, quod sapiens iustique capax reginaque rerum

¹ MSS. of class B have verus Deus ille sed istud. Some
MSS. of class A have both versions combined.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

soul He breathed upon it with his mouth. God takes upon Him the whole man, because man is wholly from Him; and redeems the whole man whom He took on, bringing back all that man is, the body from the tomb, the soul from the pit.

Here ^a a doubting disputant comes up with this objection: does the faith admit the view that the being breathed into us by the breath of God feels torment, goes to the depths of the world below, and is roasted in hell? You must believe that the soul is not God, but that, while it is greater than all created things, it too was created. For it was made by the mouth of God; it did not exist before, but was made, beautiful in form, adorned with qualities divine, filled with God, and like its creator, yet not itself God, since it is not a begetting but a creation of God. The Son alone came forth from the Father's heart; He, He is true God. It was given to the soul that, not being before, it should suddenly come into being; but the Son is co-eternal with the Father and ever in Him; not created but born, He has all that belongs to his Father; whereas the soul is a sort of semblance in the likeness of God. Thus spoke its maker himself when He planned to construct man in his own image of the two created elements in union; but the semblance has not that which the real object has, of which there is but a copy in the semblance; reality is one thing, the likeness of reality is another. It is like God in that no time can waste it, in that it is wise and capable of righteousness, and sits like a queen on ^a The preceding topic leads on to a discussion of the nature of the soul (lines 782-951).

PRUDENTIUS

imperat, ante videt, perpendit, praecavet, infit, verborum morumque opifex instructaque mille 805 artibus et caelum sensu percurrere docta.
his animam similem sibi conditor effigiavit, cetera dissimilem: quippe hanc comprehendere promptum est,
quam modus et species determinat, at Deus ingens atque superfus trans omnia nil habet in se 810 extremum, ut claudi valeat sensuve teneri.
inconpresa manet virtus, cui linea defit ultima, quam spatium non mensurabile tendit.
ergo animam factam, magno et factore minorem maiolemque aliis atque omnibus imperitantem, 815 corruptela putris nascentem turbida carnis concipit, ac membris tabentibus interfusam participat de faece sua; fit mixta deinde peccandi natura luto cum simplice flatu.
sed fortasse animam, Domini quia fluxit ab ore, 820 conpositam factamque neges, velut ipsa Dei pars, quod dictu scelus est, taetras trahat oblita culpas et pessum damnata ruens chaos intret opertum.
sit res illa Dei, non abnuo; pars tamen illa haudquaquam dicenda Dei est, quae tempore coepit, 825
nec prior aut senior quam primum plasma putanda est.
tunc etenim factam video, cum cordis amici intravit germana domum limique recentis hospita et ipsa recens fraterna sedit in aula.
illa quidem flatus Domini est, sed spiritus et vis 830 non est plena Dei, tanto moderamine missa 180

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

the throne of the world; it sees before, thinks, takes heed, speaks, contrives words and laws, is furnished with a thousand forms of skill and can traverse the heavens in thought. In these respects the creator fashioned the soul like himself, but otherwise unlike. For it is easy to grasp the soul, which is bounded by limit and form; but God, being great and extending beyond all things, has no extremity in Him by which He can be enclosed or laid hold of by thought. His power remains beyond our grasp, since it has no bounding line and reaches through infinite space. The soul, then, is created, it is both less than its great creator and greater than other creatures and rules over them all; but at its birth the foul corruption of the flesh, which is subject to decay, receives it, and when it has passed into the wasting body, makes it partaker of its own impurity. Then sin comes about, because it arises from the mingling of the clay and the pure spirit. But perchance you would say that, since the soul flowed from the mouth of the Lord, it was not made nor created; but that would mean that a very part of God contracts the stain of foul sins, a thing which it is wicked to assert, and is condemned and cast down into the dark depths of hell. Granted that it belongs to God (for that I deny not), yet that which has had a beginning in time is not to be called a part of God, nor thought of as earlier or older than the beginning of the body. Plainly it was created at the time when, like a sister, it entered the abode of the friendly heart and settled in the home of its brother to sojourn with the newly-formed clay, itself also newly-formed. It is indeed the breath of God, but not the spirit and full power of God, since it issued under control whereby in quanto flans voluit flandi servare tenorem.

PRUDENTIUS

 est impossibile spectare profunda Sabaoth, sed speculum Deitatis homo est : in corpore discas rem non corpoream sollers interprete Christo 835 qui Patrem proprium mortali in corpore monstrat.
 perspice quam varios fundamus ab ore vapores, spiramus quotiens animae sufflabilis auras.
 nunc flatum tepidum calor exhalatus anhelat, rorantes nebulas udis de faucibus efflans; 840 cum libet, in gelidum flabrali frigore ventum spiritus existit tenuis et sibilat aër.
 adde et distinctum quem musica tibia flatum concipit : aut ille est presso modulamine parvus, aut tumidum largo sublimat flamine bombum, 845 aut raucos frangit modulos, aut lene susurrat, aut exile trahens sonitus producit acutos, aut murmur tenerum sublidit voce minuta.
 haec cum te videas mortali in corpore posse, cur non aeternum potuisse infundere credas 850 qualem animam voluit? praescriptis quam quia condens
 efflavit fuditque modis, sit facta necesse est.
 denique multa sapit, sed non sapit omnia nostrae
 vis animae, certum sapere ac praenoscere iussa.
 iam cui certus inest modus et cui nosse negatum
 est 855
 omnia, factura est; nam condita et aucta pro-batur.
 collige de simili, sitne haec factura. creavit nempe manus Domini corpus mortale lutumque composuit digitis. numquid manus articulatum est digesta Dei? numquid vola? numquid et ungues 860

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

breathing He willed to maintain the level of his breathing. It is impossible to look into the depths of the Lord of Hosts, but man is a mirror of God-head. In the body we may come to know something that is not bodily, if we acquire skill under the guidance of Christ, who shows his Father in a mortal body. Consider how diverse are the exhalations we pour from our mouths in the emission of the breath we breathe. At one time hot breath exhales a warm air, blowing out moist clouds from our wet throat; when we choose, thin breath issues as a chill wind blowing cold, and the air whistles. There is, too, the differing breath of the musical pipe: either it is slight, keeping the music down, or with great blowing it raises a loud swelling sound; it utters harsh, rough strains, or a gentle whisper, or taking in a meagre breath it brings out shrill notes, or with tone reduced it just squeezes out a soft murmur. When you see yourself able to do these things in a mortal body, why should you not believe that the Everlasting could pour into man what breath He would? And since in his act of creation He breathed and poured it forth in appointed measures, it must needs have been created. And again, our soul has power to understand many things, but not all things; only up to a point was it bidden to have understanding and fore-knowledge. Now in as much as it has in it a definite limit and is denied complete knowledge, it is a creation, for it is proved to have been brought into being and developed. You may gather from a comparison whether or no it is a creation. We say, to be sure, that the hand of the Lord made the human body and with its fingers moulded the clay. Is God's hand, then, arranged in jointed parts? Has it a claudere flexibiles patulam seu tendere palmam?

PRUDENTIUS

ista figura manus nostrae est, quam non habet
in se

incircumscriptus Dominus; sed tradita forma
est

humanis quae nota animis daret intellectum,¹ ut per corpoream speciem plasmasse feratur 865 corporis effigiem.¹ sic est plasmata vicissim flatu incorporeo res flabilis, oris et esse fertur opus, tenuis per quod constructa refulsit forma animae atque rudi factam se munere sensit.

si non est factura manus caro nostra, nec oris 870
est factura anima, flatu et spiramine coepta inque locum deducta aliquem; namque omne quod hora
natalis profert, locus accipit; et locus ullus quod cohibere potest, modicum est, nec in omnia fusum;

et quod tam modicum est ut certa sede locetur 875
iam titubare potest; et quod titubaverit intra naturam vitii est; vitiosum denique tristem reccidit in poenam: Deus hoc, mihi credite, non
est.

aut, si maiestas animae est, ostendite quid sit quod lapsam Christique inopem nova gratia inundat, 880

Spiritus et Sanctus baptisinate iustificatam nobilitat, famulaeque decus, quod defuit, addit.
quod quia praestatur meritis meritisque negatur, absurde fertur Deus aut pars esse Dei, quae divinum summumque bonum de fonte perenni 885 nunc bibit obsequio, nunc culpa aut crimine perdit,

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

palm? Has it finger-tips that can bend and close it or spread the hand out open? That is the shape of our hand; it belongs not to the infinite Lord; but a form familiar to human minds has been attributed to Him, to enable them to understand, so that we speak of God having in bodily form created the image of his body. It is in the same sense that that which is spiritual was in its turn created by an incorporeal breath and is called the work of his mouth, through which the finely-textured soul flashed and was conscious of its creation with power yet rudimentary. If our flesh is not the creation of his hand, neither is our soul the creation of his mouth, originating in the expiration of his breath and conducted into a particular place. For all that has a birth-time at which it is brought forth is received in some place; now what can be confined in any place is small, not being extended universally; and what is so small as to be set in a limited place of abode may be unsteady; and what is unsteady partakes of corruption; and the corrupt has become liable to stern punishment. This, believe me, is not God. Else, if the soul has divinity, show me what means it that it falls and is destitute of Christ until a new grace floods it and the Holy Spirit by baptism justifies it, ennobles it, and gives to it as the handmaid of God the honour it lacked. And since it is by desert that this is given or refused, it is irrational to say that the soul is God or a part of God, for at one time by obedience it drinks in the divine and supreme good from its everlasting source, and at another by sin and wickedness

¹ Bergman places a full stop at intellectum and a comma at effigiem.

PRUDENTIUS

et modo supplicium recipit, modo libera calcat.
 miraris peccare animam, quae carne coactam sortita est habitare domum, cum peccet et ipse angelus, hospitium qui nescit adire caducum 890 cratis tabifluæ? peccat quia factus et ipse est, non genitus: quocumque modo sit factus, id unus scit factor Dominus: factum mihi credere sat sit.
 solus labe caret peccati conditor orbis, ingenitus¹ genitusque Deus, Pater et Patre natus, 895

solus et exceptus tormentum admittere triste inviolatus agit, nec quidquam sentit acerbi.
 exsortem dic esse animam crucis atque doloris, si culpae immunem vacuumque a crimine nosti.
 quae peccare valet, valet et succumbere poenae. 900
 ipsa quidem sincera fuit dum conditur olim, quae collata rudem fecit viviscere limum, utpote de liquido naturae semine primos accipiens habitus superoque expressa sereno.
 sed mox, ut gravido iussa est innectier arvo, 905 suavis inlecebris nimium blandita refrixit deque volutabris pretiosum polluit ignem, dum transgressa Dei positum fas improba calcat.
 haec prima est natura animae. sic condita
 simplex

decidit in vitium per sordida foedera carnis, 910 exim tincta malo peccamine principis Adæ infecit genus omne hominum quod pullulat inde, et tenet ingenitas animarum infantia in ortu primi hominis maculas, nec quisquam nascitur insons.

vitandus tamen error erit, ne traduce carnis 915 transfundi in subolem credatur fons animarum

¹ The 6th-century MS. has agenitus, which Bergman accepts.
 186

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

loses it, and now must submit to punishment, again in freedom treads it under foot. Do you wonder that the soul sins, whose lot it is to dwell in a house made of flesh, when the very angel sins, who is incapable of entering a frail dwelling-place of perishing structure? He sins because he too was created, not begotten. How he was created only the Lord, his creator, knows; enough for me to believe that he was created. Only the author of the world is free from the stain of sin, God unbegotten and begotten, the Father and He that was born of the Father; He alone is exempt from stern punishment, lives unassailed, and knows no bitterness. You may say that the soul is free from cross and pain if you know it to be guiltless and sinless. The soul that can sin can also fall under the penalty. It was indeed clean at its creation, when it gave life to the raw clay with which it was united, in as much as it received its first disposition from the uncontaminated source of nature and was formed by the divine purity; but then, being bidden to attach itself to the heavy earth, it was too much charmed by agreeable temptations and grew cold, polluting its precious flame with the mire, and wickedly transgressing and trampling on God's ordinance. Such is the soul's first character. Thus pure at its creation, it fell into sin through unclean alliance with the flesh; then, tainted by the wicked deed of the first man Adam, it infected the whole race of men which springs from him; infant souls at birth have inborn in them the first man's stains, and none is born sinless. But we shall have to shun the error of supposing that the germ of the soul is transmitted to offspring by propagation of the flesh after the manner of the blood, for which the sanguinis exemplo, cui texta propagine vena est.

PRUDENTIUS

 non animas animae pariunt, sed lege latenti fundit opus natura suum, quo parvula anhelent vascula vitalisque adsit scintilla coactis. 920 quae quamvis infusa novum penetret nova semper figmentum, vetus illa tamen de crimine avorum dicitur, inloto quoniam concreta veterno est.
 inde secunda redivit generatio et inde lavatur naturae inlucies, iterumque renascimur intus 925 perfusi, ut veterem splendens anima exuat Adam.
 quae quia materiam peccati ex fomite carnis consociata trahit, nec non simul ipsa sodali est incentivum peccaminis, implicat ambas vindex poena reas peccantes mente sub una, 930 peccandique cremat socias cruciatibus aequis.
 his crucibus Christus nos liberat incorruptae matris et innocui gestator corporis unus.
 naturam poenae expositam, sed non vitiorum naturam expositam contactibus induit Iesus, 935 atque ideo poenae nil debuit intemeratus, fraude carens, omni culparum aspergine liber.¹ quid Christi in membris peccati saeva satellites poena ageret? quid mors hominis sine crimine posset?
 nimirum cassis conatibus et sine nervis 940
 conciderent steriles peccati fomite nullo.
 mors alitur culpa; culpam qui non habet, ipso pastus defectu mortem consumit inanem.
 sic mors in Domini consumpta est corpore Christi, sic periit, solitum dum non habet arida pastum. 945

¹ Between 937 and 938 two MSS. of class B have this line :
 quid peccatorum prosapia corpore in illo.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

vessel is made by generation from the parent stock. Souls do not give birth to souls, but by a mysterious law nature produces a work of her own to give the tiny vessels power to breathe, and supply the spark of life to the assembled parts. Yet though it is always a new soul that is infused into the new body, it is nevertheless said to be old after the sins of its fathers, since dirt unwashed is caked hard upon it. Then comes the second birth and the natural filth is washed away; our inner being is born again when we are baptised, so that the soul shines bright and puts off the old Adam. But as in its fellowship with the body it draws occasion to sin from the incitements of the flesh, and itself also at the same time provokes sin in its comrade, avenging punishment lays hold of both wrongdoers together since they sin with one mind, and burns the partners in sin with like torments. From these torments Christ sets us free, for He alone had a mother immaculate and wore a sinless body; Jesus put on a nature liable to punishment, but not a nature liable to the contagion of sin, and so He owed no debt to punishment, being undefiled, without sin, free from all besmirching fault. What would punishment, which is the stern attendant on sin, do in the body of Christ? What could death do where there was no human wickedness? Naturally their efforts would be vain, they would fall to the ground strengthless and ineffectual where there was nothing to prompt sin. Death is nurtured on sin, and he who has no sin annihilates death because it is exhausted through the very want of what it feeds on. So was death annihilated in the body of Christ our Lord, so was it destroyed, being withered by want of its accustomed food. Reverence there-suspice quapropter solum inculpabile numen, virtutem ¹ Patris et Christi, et iam desine nostrae invidiam conflare animae, quod sit Deus aut quod portio parva Dei, cum Christo abscidere quidquam

PRUDENTIUS

et resecare Deo partem vel carpere tantum 950 numen non liceat, plenum sibi semper et in se.

Est operae pretium nebulosi dogmatis umbram prodere, quam tenues atomi conpage minuta instituunt, sed cassa cadit ventoque liquescit adsimilis, fluxu nec se sustentat inani. 955

aërium Manichaeus ait sine corpore vero pervolitasse Deum, mendax phantasma cavamque corporis effigiem, nil contrectabile habentem.
ac primum specta an deceat quidquam simulatum adsignare Deo, cuius mera gloria falsi 960

nil recipit. membris hic se fallacibus aptans fingeret esse hominem ventosa subdolis arte, mentitus totiens, cum diceret " inveteratis do veniam morbis, simul et peccata remitto : Filius est hominis, pestem qui pellere carnis 965

et scelerum nexus laxare ac solvere possit :
surge valens, surge innocuus, iam tolle grabatum : Filius hoc hominis iubeo " ? dignusne videtur qui testis sibi sit seque ac sua carnea norit ?
quid ? cum discipulos, hominis quid Filius esset 970
passurus, fido iam praescius ore monebat, nonne fatebatur se cum virtute paterna

¹ naturam ACD (Bergman).

* The difficulty of conceiving the union of the divine nature with the inherent imperfection of matter led some thinkers to hold that the body of Christ was not a real human body but a semblance of it. This " docetic " doctrine was de-fore the divinity that alone is sinless, the strength of the Father and of Christ, and cease now to bring about odium for our soul by saying that it is God, or a small part of God, since it is not lawful to cut off anything from Christ or lop a part from God, or to diminish the great Godhead which is ever complete for and in itself.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

It is worth while to make mention of the phantom that belongs to a misty doctrine. It consists of fine particles in minute structure, but it fails for lack of body, vanishes away like the wind, and is too fleeting and unsubstantial to maintain itself.^a There moved about, says the Manichean, a phantasmal God without real body, a false appearance, an empty likeness of body, having nothing tangible. Now see first whether it is fitting to ascribe aught that is counterfeit to God, whose pure glory admits of nothing false. Would such a God furnish himself with unreal members, and with cunning make-believe feign himself man, lying whenever He said "I have mercy on deep-rooted diseases, and in the same act I remit sins. It is the Son of man who is able to drive out the plague of the flesh and to loosen and undo the bonds of wickedness. Arise in health, arise in innocence, take up thy bed. I, the Son of man, command it."^b Does He not appear worthy to bear witness of himself, to know himself and his body of flesh? And when, knowing already before-hand, He warned his disciples with truthful lips what the Son of man was to suffer, was He not confessing that veloped particularly under the influence of Gnosticism, and of Manicheism (cf. 956) which spread widely during the 4th century.

^b Cf. Matthew ix, 2-6.

PRUDENTIUS

esse hominem verum? quod si non credo, fefellit.
 si natura Dei quae sit, Manichaeae, requiris, omne quod est, verum est. nam si mendosus agit quid, 975
 nec Deus est: mendum divinus non capit usus.
 obicis aeterno Domino quod lubricus ad nos venerit, adsimulans aliud quam verus habebat.
 obmutesce, furor; linguam, canis inprobe, morde ipse tuam, lacero consumens verba palato. 980 latranti obsistit Mattheus rabiemque refellit, qui notat omne genus carnalis stirpis ad usque corporeum Christum, per sex septena virorum nomina descendens et venam sanguinis alti ex atavis longo texens per stemmata filo. 985 septimus hebdomadi venit superaddere sextae hunc numerum Christus, placidum qui conficit annum
 cuncta remittentem contractibus inlaqueata multimodis, hominemque hominis de morte levantem.
 imperfectus enim ~~linus~~ mortalis erat tunc : 990
 vir solus perfectus adest atque integer Iesus, cui nihil ex septem septenis defuit, ex quo perficeret mortale genus virtute perenni.
 hic ille est nobis qui septima sabbata complet, ut caro nostra Deo tandem sociata quiescat, 995
 quam bis terna malis vexabant sabbata noxis.
 curramus notis gradibus regumque sequamur progeniem: Christum invenies de carne parentum effluxisse hominum, qui sit de semine David, stirpe recensita numerandus sanguinis heres. 1000 quid? cum sanctiloquus revoluta germine Lucas

^a Matthew i, 1-17.

^b I.e. the year of jubilee (Leviticus xxv, 8 ff.).

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

along with the power of the Father He was true man? If I believe not this, then He deceived them. If thou seekest, O Manichean, to know the nature of God, all that He is is real; for if He is false in anything He does, then is He not God; the divine activity admits of nothing false. Thou chargest against the everlasting Lord that He came to us deceitfully counterfeiting something other than He had in his reality. Be silent, thou madman. Bite thine own tongue, thou wicked dog; let thy torn mouth devour thy words. Matthew withstands thy barking and refutes thy raving, for he marks the whole race of the carnal stock right down to the bodily Christ, coming down through six times seven names of men and tracing the course of noble blood from his ancestors in a long line, generation after generation.^a Seventh came Christ to crown the sixth seven with the number that makes the year of peace, which unlooses all things that are bound up by all manner of contracts, and frees man from man's death.^b For then the mortal clay was imperfect; but now appears the only perfect and unimpaired man Jesus, in whom were completed the seven times seven whereby to make perfect the race of men in everlasting goodness. This is He that fulfils for us the seventh sabbath of years, that our flesh, being at last made partner with God, may find rest after being vexed for six sabbaths with deadly sins. Let us run over the familiar steps and follow the progeny of kings: thou wilt find that Christ came of the flesh of human parents, being of the seed of David, and if thou examine his descent, to be counted the inheritor of his blood. And again, when Luke of holy lips turns the order of descent round and takes

PRUDENTIUS

sursum versus agit seriem, scandente nepotis corpore perque atavos cursum relegente vetustos, septenos decies conscendit Christus in ortus et duo (nam totidem doctores misit in orbem); 1005 descensos nascendo gradus redeundo retextit actus ad usque apicem terreni corporis Adam.
 inde parens Deitas recipit sua nostrarque mixtim, fitque Dei summi per Christum filius Adam.
 restat ut aëriam fingas ab origine gentem, 1010
 aërios proceres, Levi, Iudam, Simeonem, aërium David, magnorum corpora regum aëria, atque ipsam fecundae virginis alvum aëre fallaci nebulisque et nube tumentem; vanescat sanguis perflabilis, ossa liquesçant 1015
 mollia, nervorum pereat textura volantum;
 omne quod est gestum notus auferat inritus, aurae
 dispergant tenues, sit fabula quod sumus omnes.
 et quid agit Christus si me non suscipit? aut quem
 liberat infirmum si dedignatur adire 1020 carnis onus manuumque horret monumenta suarum?
 indignumne putat luteum consciscere corpus,
 qui non indignum quondam sibi credidit ipsum pertrectare lutum, cum vas conponeret arvo nondum viscereis, sed inertis glutine limi 1025 inpressoque putres sub pollice duceret artus?
 tantus amor terrae, tanta est dilectio nostri, dignatur praepinguis humi comprehendere mollem divinis glaebam digitis, nec sordida censet

^a Luke iii, 23-38; but Luke makes 75 generations from Joseph to Adam (inclusive).

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

the line upwards, making the descendant in the flesh mount and retrace his way through old-time ancestors, Christ mounts to seventy generations and two^a (now that is the number of teachers He sent into the world)^b; the steps He came down in his birth He repeats backwards, till He arrives at Adam, the head of all earthly flesh. Then God the Father receives what is his own and ours together, and Adam through Christ becomes the son of the supreme God. All that remains for thee is to suppose the whole race from its origin unsubstantial, unsubstantial princes, Levi, Juda, Simeon, unsubstantial David, unsubstantial persons of great kings, the very womb of the pregnant virgin swelling with mere unsubstantial vapour and unreality; that the blood turn thin-bodied and vanish, the bones grow soft and melt away, the structure of quick-moving muscles perish; that the wind carry away our every act in futility, the thin airs scatter it, and the existence of us all be nothing but a tale. What does Christ achieve if He does not take up my nature? Or whom does He set free from his infirmity if He does not stoop to assume the burden of the flesh and shrinks from that which is the memorial of his own handiwork? Does He think it unfitting to take on a body of clay, who once did not believe it unfitting for Him to handle the same clay, when He was making a vessel of earth not yet become flesh, moulding the mortal frame out of the sticky, sluggish mire under the pressure of his thumb? Such is his love of earth, such his affection for us, He deigns to grasp with the divine fingers a soft clod of soil very fertile, and thinks

^b Luke x, 1. The number is 70 in the English Version (from the Greek), but 72 in the Vulgate Latin.

PRUDENTIUS

haerentis massae contagia. iusserat ut lux 1030 confieret, facta est ut iusserat; omnia iussu imperitante novas traxerunt edita formas:
 solus homo emeruit Domini formabile dextra os capere, et fabro Deitatis figmine nasci.
 quorsum igitur limo tanta indulgentia nostro 1035 contigit, ut Domini manibus tractatus honora arte sacer fieret, tactu iam nobilis ipso?
 decrerat quoniam Christum Deus incorrupto admiscere solo, sanctis quod fingere vellet dignum habuit digitis et carum condere pignus. 1040 destituit natura quidem destructa coactae telluris formam, mortique obnoxia cessit:
 sed natura Dei numquam solvenda caducam tellurem nostro vitiatam primitus usu esse suam voluit, ne iam vitiabilis esset. 1045 Christus nostra caro est: mihi solvitur et mihi surgit;
 solvor morte mea, Christi virtute resurgo.
 cum moritur Christus, cum flebiliter tumulatur, me video: e tumulo cum iam remeabilis adstat, cerno Deum. si membrorum phantasma meorum est, 1050
 et phantasma Dei est; mendax in utroque necesse est
 sit Christus, specie si Christus fallere novit.
 si non verus homo est, quem mors hominem probat ipsa,
 nec verus Deus est, operis quem gloria prodit esse Deum. vel crede mori, vel adesse refelle, 1055 et gemina verum Christum ratione negato.
 nam quid magnificum, si non est mortuus Iesus, et redit? illa Dei virtus memorabilis est, ut

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

it not mean to touch the clinging lump. He had commanded that light be made, and it was made as He commanded; all things were brought forth and took on their new shapes at the word of his command: man alone was held worthy to receive features formed by the Lord's hand and come into being by God's shaping handicraft. To what end, then, has such favour fallen to our clay, that it should have the honour to be worked by the Lord's hands and made holy by his workmanship, being ennobled by his very touch? In as much as God had resolved to unite Christ with earth uncorrupted, He considered it worthy of his will to mould it with his holy fingers and create his dear child. True, its original nature was broken down and lost to the created earthly form and became subject to death; but the divine nature, which can never be destroyed, willed that the mortal clay, corrupted at the first by our use, should be its own, so as to be no more corruptible. Christ is our flesh; for me He dies, and for me He rises. I die by my own death, but by the power of Christ I rise again. When Christ dies and with tears is laid in the tomb, I see myself; when now He returns from the tomb and stands by me, I perceive God. If He is a mere phantom of my body, then of God too He is a phantom; in both Christ must needs be false, if Christ can wear a false appearance. If He is not true man, He whose very death proves Him man, neither is He true God, whose glorious work proclaims Him God. Either must thou believe in his death, or disprove his presence with us, and both ways deny that Christ is real. For where is the sublimity if Jesus returns without having died? It is the wonderful power of God that having been put occisus redeat superis surgatque sepultus.

PRUDENTIUS

quisque Deum Christum vult dicere, dicat eundem 1060

esse hominem, ne maiestas sua fortia perdat.

Nosco meum in Christo corpus consurgere.
quid me

desperare iubes? veniam quibus ille revenit calcata de morte viis: quod credimus, hoc est.
et totus veniam; nec enim minor aut alius quam 1065 nunc sum restituar. vultus, vigor et color idem, qui modo vivit, erit, nec me vel dente vel ungue fraudatum revomet patefacti fossa sepulcri.

qui iubet ut redeam, non reddet debile quidquam;
nam si debilitas redit, instauratio non est. 1070

quod casus rapuit, quod morbus, quod dolor hausit,

quod truncavit edax senium populante veterno,
omne revertenti reparata in membra redibit.
debet enim mors victa fidem, ne fraude sepulcri reddat curtum aliquid, quamvis iam curta vorarit 1075 corpora; debilitas tamen et violentia morbi virtus mortis erat: reddet quod particulatim sorbuerat quocumque modo, ne mortuus omnis non redeat, si quid pleno de corpore desit.

pellite corde metum, mea membra, et credite vosmet 1080

cum Christo reditura Deo; nam vos gerit ille et secum revocat. morbos ridete minaces, inflictos casus contemnite, taetra sepulcra despuite; exsurgens quo Christus provocat, ite.

THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST

to death He returns again to the living, and having been buried He rises. Whosoever will say that Christ is God must also say that He is man, lest his majesty lose its strength.

I know that my body rises in Christ; why dost thou bid me abandon my hope? I shall come by the same paths by which He came again from trampling upon death; it is this we believe. And I shall come whole; for I shall be restored not less nor other than now I am; my features, natural force, complexion, will be the same as they are now in life; when the tomb is opened, the grave will send me forth again without the loss of even a tooth or a nail. He who bids me return will not give back aught infirm; for if it is infirmity that returns, then is there no restoration. What calamity has robbed me of, what illness or pain has drained away, what consuming age with wasting decline has cut off, all will return, at my coming again, to a body renewed. For conquered death must keep faith, not to give back, by the grave's dishonesty, something that is maimed, albeit the bodies it devoured were maimed already; but then infirmity and vehement disease were the strength of death. It will so give back what it swallowed piecemeal in one way or another, that the dead shall not return less than entire, with something lacking to the body's completeness. Cast fear out of your heart, my members, and believe that you will return with Christ who is God; for He wears you, and calls you back with himself. Laugh at the threats of disease, despise the blows of calamity, scorn the foul tomb. Whither Christ at his rising calls you, go.

HAMARTIGENIA

< PRAEFATIO >

FRATRES ephebi fossor et pastor duo, quos feminarum prima primos procreat, sistunt ad aram de laborum fructibus Deo sacrandam munerum primordia.
hic terrulentis, ille vivis fungitur; 5 certante voto discrepantes inmolant, fetus bidentis alter, ast alter sc̄robris.
Deus minoris conprobavit hostiam, reiecit illam quam paravit grandior.
vox ecce summo missa persultat throno: 10 “ Cain, quiesce; namque si recte offeras, oblata nec tu lege recta divides, perversa nigram vota culpam traxerint.”
armat deinde parricidalem manum frater, probatae sanctitatis aemulus; 15 germana curvo colla frangit sarculo, mundum recentem caede tinguit inopia, sero expiandum, iam senescentem, sacro cruore Christi, quo peremptor concidit.
mors prima coepit innocentis vulnere, 20 cessit deinde vulnerato innoxio.
per crimen orta dissoluta est crimine, Abel quod ante perculit, Christum dehinc;
finita et ipsa est finis exsortem petens.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

PREFACE

Two young brothers, a tiller of the ground and a keeper of sheep, first-born of the first woman, set the first offerings at the altar, of the fruits of their labours, to dedicate them to God, the one furnishing things of the earth, the other living creatures; with different offerings in rivalry they sacrifice, the one the young of a sheep, the other the produce of his delving. God has accepted the sacrifice of the younger, but rejected that which the elder brought. Suddenly a loud voice rings from the throne on high: "Peace, Cain; for if thou shouldst offer aright but not divide the offerings by right rule, thy untoward sacrifice would take on the mark of sin."^a Then a brother in jealousy of the goodness that was accepted arms his hand to commit parricide, and breaks his own brother's neck with his bent hoe, staining the new-made world with unnatural bloodshed, a world to be purified late in time when it was already growing old, by the sacred blood of Christ whereby the destroyer fell. Death first began with the wounding of one that was innocent, and passed away by the wounding of one that was guiltless. Through sin it arose, by sin it was done away, in that aforetime it smote Abel, and then Christ; it was itself brought to an end in aiming at one who is ^a Cf. Genesis iv, 7 in the Septuagint version.

PRUDENTIUS

ergo ex futuris prisca coepit fabula	25
factoque primo res notata est ultima, ut ille mortis inchoator rusticus insulsa terrae deferens libamina Deumque rerum mortuarum deputans
rastris redacta digna sacris crederet,	30 viventis atrox aemulator hostiae.
agnosco nempe quem figura haec denotet, quis fratricida, quis peremptor invidus prave sacrorum disciplinam dividat, mactare dum se vota censet rectius.	35
Marcion, arvi forma corruptissimi, docet duitas discrepare a Spiritu, contaminatae dona carnis offerens et segregatim numen aeternum colens.
qui si quiescat nec monentem neglegat,	40
pacem quieta ¹ diligat germanitas, unum atque vivum fassa vivorum Deum.
hic se caduco dedicans mysterio summam profanus dividit substantiam ;
malum bonumque ceu duorum separans	45
regnum Deorum sceptris committit duo, Deum esse credens quem fatetur pessimum.
Cain cruentus, unitatis invidus, mundi colonus, immolator squalidus,
cuius litamen sordet et terram sapit,	50
terram caduci corporis, venam putrem,

¹ So the oldest MS. Most have quietam.

^a Marcion, who lived in the 2nd century, taught that the "just" (or "strict") God of the Old Testament, who created the world and man and gave the law, was different from and inferior to the "good" God revealed by Jesus Christ, who without end. So the tale of olden times took its beginning from things that were to be, and the last deed was indicated by the first, when the countryman who started death, making savourless offerings of the earth and supposing God to be the God of things dead, believed the product of his tools fit for the altar, in his black-hearted jealousy of the living sacrifice. It is plain to see whom this figure denotes, who is his brother's murderer, the jealous slayer who divides the way of holy things amiss while supposing that he makes his offerings more correctly. Marcion, a creature of the foulest clay, teaches men to believe in two Gods, at variance with the Spirit; he offers gifts of flesh defiled, and worships the everlasting Deity in separate shapes.^a If he held his peace and heeded warning, the brotherhood would be happy in undisturbed quiet, acknowledging the one living God of the living. This man, giving himself up to a vain doctrine, sacrilegiously divides the supreme Being, separates a bad realm and a good as belonging to two Gods, and matches two ruling powers against each other, believing one to be a God whom he confesses to be utterly bad. He is a bloody Cain, one that hates unity, a cultivator of the world, who comes to sacrifice all befouled; his offering is unclean and savours of the earth, the earth of the mortal body, corrupt flesh lumped intervened to save men from hopeless subjection to the law. The foundation of Marcion's doctrine was the Pauline contrast between the law and the gospel, not one between opposed powers of good and evil, so that in what follows Prudentius misrepresents his teaching. In the western empire the sect died out in the 4th century, being swallowed up by Manicheism with its opposed powers of light and darkness. (See Hastings' Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics.)

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

PRUDENTIUS

umore denso conglobatam et pulvere, natura cuius fraude floret fertili fecunda fundens noxiorum crimina, animaeque vitam labe carnis enecat. 55 caro in sororem tela mentem dirigit, mens in cerebro ventilatur ebrio, ex quo furores succulentos conligit madens veneno corporis lymphatico.
 Deum perennem findit in duos Deos, 60
 audet secare numen insecabile.
 cadit perempta denegans unum Deum,
 Cain triumphat morte fratris halitus.¹

Quo te praecipitat rabies tua, perfide Cain, divisor blaspheme Dei? tibi conditor unus non liquet, et bifidae caligant nubila lucis?
 insincera acies duo per divortia semper spargitur, in geminis visum frustrata figuris. 5 terrarum tibi forma duplex obcludit, ut excors dividuum regnare Deum super aethera credas.
 bina boni atque mali glomerat discrimina sordens hic mundus, Domino sed caelum obtemperat uni.
 non idcirco duos retinent caelestia reges 10
 quod duo sunt opera humanas agitantia curas.
 exterior terrenus homo est, qui talia cernens conicit esse duo variarum numina rerum.
 dum putat esse Deum qui prava effinxerit olim, et qui recta itidem condens induxerit, ambos 15
 autumat esse Deos natura dispere summos.
 quae tandem natura potest consistere duplex aut regnare diu, quam fons divisus ab arce

¹ So the oldest MS. Many have the metrically impossible alitus. Arevalo conjectured allitus.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

together of thick water and dust, whose nature it is to bloom richly with wickedness, pouring out prolific crops of sin in guilty men, and with the foulness of the flesh to kill the life of the soul. The flesh aims its weapons at its sister the spirit, and the spirit is swung about in a drunken brain, from which it contracts strong frenzies, being intoxicated with the maddening poison of the body. It splits the everlasting God into two Gods, daring to divide the Godhead indivisible, and is slain and perishes in denying the one God, while Cain triumphs in the death of his brother's soul.

To what lengths does thy madness drive thee, faithless Cain, thou blasphemous divider of God? Is not the one creator plain to thee? Is thy vision befogged and double? Sight that is blurred ever divides along two paths, cheating the eyes with double shapes. The twofold form of the world fools thee into the senseless belief that a divided God reigns above the skies. This defiled world is a mixture of two contrasted elements, good and bad, but the heaven obeys one Lord. It does not follow that the heavens contain two kings, because there are two sorts of works that busy the hearts of men. The outer man is of the earth, and seeing such things he infers that there are two Godheads of the different realms. Supposing that there is a God who once fashioned the evil, and one who similarly created and brought in the right, he avers that both are supreme Gods though of unlike nature. What nature that is twofold can maintain itself or reign for long, when a divided source shuts it off from separat, alternaque apicum dicione recidit?

PRUDENTIUS

 aut unus Deus est, rerum cui summa potestas, 20 aut quae iam duo sunt minuuntur dispare summa.
 porro nihil summum nisi plenis viribus unum, distantes quoniam, proprium dum quisque revulso vindicat imperio, nec summa nec omnia possunt.
 ius varium non est plenum, quia non habet alter 25
 quidquid dispar habet; cumulum discretio carpit.
 nos plenum sine parte Deum testamur et unum,
 in quo Christus inest, idem quoque plenus et unus, qui viget ac vigit super omnia quique vigebit participem nullum collato foedere passus. 30 summa potestatum Pater est,¹ dominatio rerum, virtutum sublime caput, fons unicus orbis, naturalis apex, generisque et originis auctor;
 ex quo cuncta fluunt, et lux et tempora et anni et numerus, qui post aliquid dedit esse secundum; 35 unus enim princeps numeri est, nec dinumerari tantum unus potis est. sic, cum Pater ac Deus alter

non sit, item Christus non sit genitore secundus, anterior numero est, cui Filius unicus uni est.
 ille Deus, meritoque Deus, quia primus et unus, 40 in virtute sua primus, tum primus in illo quem genuit. quid enim differt generatio
 simplex?

unum semper erit gignens atque unus ab uno ante chaos genitus numeroque et tempore liber.
 quis dixisse duos rem maiestate sub una 45

¹ So A (def. B). Some MSS. of class A as well as class B have summa potestatum simplex dominatio.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

supremacy and abridges it by subjection to one or other of two sovereignties? Either there is one God to whom belongs supreme power over the world, or else the two powers that exist are each diminished because there is a different supremacy. There is indeed no supremacy but what is one and possessed of plenary power, for separate beings each claiming his own sovereignty and rejecting control have neither supreme nor complete power. Dispersed authority is not plenary, because the one does not have what the other has; the separation takes away from the full measure. But we bear witness to a God who is perfect, undivided, and one, in whom is Christ, He, too, perfect and one, who lives, and has lived beyond all things, and shall live, admitting no partner on terms agreed. The Father is sovereign, Lord of all things, the high source of powers, the one fountain-head of the world, the starting point of all being, author of all birth and beginning. From Him flow all things, both light and times and years and number; it is He who appointed that after one thing there should be a second; for the one is the beginning of number, and one by himself cannot be counted. In this way, since there is no second Father and God, and Christ also is not next after the Father, the one, to whom belongs the one and only Son, is anterior to number. He is God, and rightly God, because first and one, first in his own power, and then first in Him whom He has begotten. For what distinction does mere begetting make? The begetter and the one begotten of one before the primeval darkness, without number or time, will always be one being. Who would venture to say that that which reigns in one majesty and belongs to itself

PRUDENTIUS

regnantem propriamque sibi retroque perennem ausit, et unius naturae excindere vires?
 numquid adoptivum genitor sibi sumpsit, ut alter externi generis numerum praestare duorum debeat et geminum distans inducere numen? 50 forma Patris veri verus stat Filius ac se unum rite probat dum formam servat eandem.
 non amor adscitus sociat nec iungit utrumque coniurata fides, pietas sed certa genusque unum, quod Deus est, summam revocatur ad unam. 55
 haec tibi, Marcion, via displicet, hanc tua damnat secta fidem dominis caelum partita duobus.
 quae te confundunt nebulae? quis sompnus inerti incubat ingenio, cui per phantasmata duplex occurrit species bivio dispersa superno. 60 si vim mentis hebes stupor obsidet, aspice saltem obvia terrenis oculis elementa, quibus se res occulta Dei dignata est prodere signis.
 hanc heresin praesaga Patris praeviderat olim maiestas: fore qui rectorem lucis et orbis 65 scinderet in partes geminatum segrege regno.
 idcirco specimen posuit spectabile nostris exemplumque oculis, ne quis duo numina credat [imperitare vagis mundi per inania formis].¹ una per immensam caeli caveam revolutos 70 praebet flamma dies, textit sol unicus annum; triplex ille tamen nullo discrimine trina subnixus ratione viget, splendet, volat, ardet, motu agitur, fervore cremat, tum lumine fulget.

¹ This line (with vagas . . . formas) appears in the text of one 9th-century MS. (U),

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

alone and was for ever pre-existent is two Gods, and to break down the strength of a being that is single? Did the Father take to himself a Son by adoption, so that the second, being of external origin, must then make the number two and, being separate, bring in a dual Godhead? No, He is a real Son, the likeness of a real Father, and properly proves his unity by keeping the same likeness. It is no extraneous affection that allies them, no covenant that unites them, but the true love of father and son and singleness of nature, which is God, that make a single whole. This way finds no favour with thee, Marcion, this faith thy doctrine condemns, dividing heaven between two lords. What fogs confound thee, what sleep lies heavy on thy sluggish mind, that it sees an apparition of two forms standing apart in a divided heaven? If a dull insensibility shuts up the force of thy mind, look at least at the elements that meet earthly eyes, the signs by which the mystery of God has deigned to manifest itself. This heresy the Father's majesty, with his foreknowledge, had in time past foreseen—that there would arise one who would split the ruler of light and of the world into parts, making Him twofold with separate realms. For this reason He set a sign and a token that our eyes can see, lest any should believe that there are two Godheads [ruling in divergent forms over the spaces of the world]. It is one fire that furnishes the revolution of the days in the boundless vault of heaven, one only sun that weaves the fabric of the year; and yet the sun is threefold without distinction of parts, and its activity depends on three principles; for it shines, it speeds through the sky, and it burns; it is impelled by motion, it burns with heat, and it

PRUDENTIUS

sunt tria nempe simul, lux et calor et vegetamen, 75 una eademque tamen rota sideris indiscretis fungitur his, uno servat tot munera ductu et tribus una subest mixtim substantia rebus.
 non conferre Deo velut aequiperabile quidquam ausim, nec Domino famulum componere signum; 80 ex minimis sed grande suum voluit Pater ipse coniectare homines, quibus ardua visere non est.
 parvorum speculo non intellecta notamus, et datur occultum per proxima quaerere verum.
 nemo duos soles nisi sub glaucomate vidit 85
 aut, si fusca polum suffudit palla serenum, oppositus quotiens radiorum spicula nūnbus igne repercusso mentitos spargit in orbis.
 sunt animis etiam sua nubila, crassus et aër, est glaucoma, aciem quod tegmine velet aquoso, 90 libera ne tenerum penetret meditatio caelum neve Deum rapidis comprehendat sensibus unum; spargitur in bifidas male sana intentio luces, et duplices geminis auctoribus extruit aras.
 si duo sunt, igitur cur non sint multa Deorum 95
 milia? cur numero Deitas contenta gemello est?
 an non in populos dispersa examina Divum fundere erat melius mundumque inplere capacem semideis passim nullo discrimine monstris, quis fera barbaries perituros mactat honores? 100 dissona discretum retinent si numina caelum, convenit et nebulis et fontibus et reboanti oceano et silvis et collibus et speluncis,

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

gleams with light. There you have clearly three things together, light and warmth and movement, yet it is one and the same heavenly orb that performs them without separation, it is in one course that it discharges all these functions, and one common substance underlies all three. I would not venture to compare anything with God as though it were on a par with Him, nor to match with the Lord a star that is his servant; but the Father himself has willed that men infer his greatness from what is but small, since they cannot see the things on high. In the mirror of the small we mark things we do not understand, and we are permitted to seek the hidden truth by means of what is at hand. No man has seen two suns, unless his vision were obscured, or when a dusky mantle has overcast the clear sky and a cloud, blocking the path of the shafts of light and reflecting their fire, spreads them into the shape of false orbs. Minds, too, have their clouds and thick atmosphere; there is a cataract that veils the mind's eye with a watery film and prevents the thought from freely penetrating the translucent heavens and comprehending the one God with quick perception. The earnest gaze is unsound and spreads into double vision, and so builds two altars for two creators. If there are two Gods, why then not many thousands? Why is Deity content with the number two? Had it not been better to scatter abroad whole swarms of divinities over the nations and to fill the wide world everywhere indiscriminately with the monstrous demigods in whose worship wild savages waste their sacrifices? If different Gods hold a divided heaven, then it is natural to assign to clouds and springs and the sounding ocean, to woods and hills

PRUDENTIUS

fluminibus, ventis, fornacibus atque metallis assignare Deos proprios, sua cuique iura. 105 vel, si gentiles sordet venerarier umbras et placet esse duos sceptris socialibus aequos, dic, age, quis terras dicionis sorte retentet, quis regat aequoreas aeterna lege procellas, ede coheredum distinctum ius dominorum. 110
 " unus," ais, " tristi residet sublimis in arce, auctor nequitiae, scelerum Deus, asper, iniquus, qui quodcumque malum vitioso fervet in orbe sevit, et anguino medicans nova semina suco rerum principium mortis de fomite traxit. 115 ipse opifex mundi terram, mare, sidera fecit, condidit ipse hominem lutulenta et membra coëgit,
 effigians quod morbus edat, quod crimine multo sordeat, infirmi tumulus quod tabe resolvat.
 ast alii pietatis amor placidumque medendi 120
 ingenium, recreans homines, mortalia servans.
 Testamenta duo fluxerunt principe utroque :
 tradidit iste novum melior, vetus illud acerbus."
 haec tua, Marcion, gravis et dialectica vox est, immo haec attoniti phrenesis manifesta cerebri. 125 novimus esse patrem scelerum, sed novimus
 ipsum
 haudquaquam tamen esse Deum, quin immo gehennae
 mancipium, Stygio qui sit damnandus Averno, Marcionita Deus, tristis, ferus, insidiator, vertice sublimis, cinctum cui nubibus atris 130 anguiferum caput et fumo stipatur et igni, liventes oculos subfundit felle perusto invidia inpatiens iustorum gaudia ferre.
 hirsutos iuba densa umeros errantibus hydrys

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

and caves, to rivers and winds and furnaces and mines gods of their own, and to each his own authority. Or if thou dost scorn to worship the false gods of the heathen and yet wilt have it that there are two who share sovereignty on equal terms, tell me then to which of them it falls to hold the land in his sway, and which rules the stormy sea with eternal law. Show me how authority is divided between the joint lords. "One," sayest thou, "sits aloft on a grim throne, the author of evil, the God of sin, cruel, unjust; it is He that sowed all the ill that ferments in this corrupt world, and steeping his new seeds in snakes' venom derived the world's beginning from that which gives rise to death. He it is, the maker of the world, who created earth and sea and stars, who made man, assembling his frame of clay and moulding a thing for disease to consume, and many a sin defile, and the grave destroy with hideous corruption. But to the other belongs loving-kindness, the gentle will to heal, that restores man and saves mortality. Two Testaments flowed from these two Powers: the kindlier gave the New, the cruel the Old." Such, Marcion, is the utterance of thy pestilent sophistry, or rather the obvious raving of a mind confounded. We know there is a father of sin, but we know he is no God for all that, but rather the bond-slave of hell, who shall be condemned to Stygian Avernus—Marcion's God, harsh, cruel, treacherous, holding high his snake-wreathed head girt about with black clouds and encompassed with smoke and fire, while envy that cannot endure the joys of the righteous stains his spiteful eyes with burning gall. A thick, shaggy mane of writhing snakes covers his shoulders, and

PRUDENTIUS

obtegit et virides adlambunt ora cerastae. 135 ipse manu laqueos per lubrica fila reflexos in nodum revocat, faciliq̃ue ligamine tortas innectit pedicas nervosque in vincula tendit.
 ars olli captare feras, animalia bruta inretire plagis, retinacula denique caecis 140 indepressa locis erranti opponere praedae.
 hic ille est venator atrox, qui caede frequenti incautas animas non cessat plectere, Nebroth, qui mundum curvis anfractibus et silvosis horrentem scopulis versuto circuit astu, 145 fraude alios tectisque dolis innectere adortus, porro giganteis alios luctando lacertis frangere, funereos late exercere triumphos.
 improba mors, quid non mortalia pectora cogis?
 ipse suam (pudet heu!) contempto principe vitae 150 perniciem veneratur homo, colit ipse cruentum carnificem gladiique aciem iugulandus adorat.
 in tantum miseris peccati nectare captis dulce mori est, tanta in tenebris de peste voluptas!
 qui mala principio genuit Deus esse putatur, 155
 quique bona infecit vitiis et candida nigris!
 par furor illorum, quos tradit fama dicatis consecrasse deas Febrem Scabiemque sacellis.
 inventor vitii non est Deus: angelus illud degener infami conceptum mente creavit, 160 qui prius augustum radiabat sidus et ingens ex nihilo splendor nutrito ardebat honore.

^a Nimrod (Genesis x, 8-9).

^b Febris and Robigus were two of the many functional spirits recognised by the old Roman priests. The latter was the spirit which could cause "rust" (robigo) on crops. We do not hear elsewhere of Scabies as such a spirit, and Pruden-

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

green serpents lick his face. With his hand he pulls the running loops of his snares into a knot, contriving traps of cord doubled back and lightly tied, and drawing the string tight to make fast his victim. His is the skill to hunt game, to ensnare senseless creatures in his nets, to lay unnoticed traps in dark places to catch his wandering prey. He is the cruel hunter Nebroth,^a who is never weary of smiting incautious souls in constant slaughter, who with cunning craft goes about a world all rough with winding tortuous ways and wooded crags, seeking to entangle some by deceit and hidden wiles, to break others with the grip of his giant arms, and work his fatal triumphs everywhere. Ruthless death! To what dost thou not drive human hearts? Man himself (alas, the shame of it!), scorning the author of his life, does homage to his own destruction, worships the bloody assassin, pays reverence to the edge of the sword that is to murder him. So sweet is death to poor wretches caught by the charm of sin, such the pleasure they blindly draw from their bane! He who was the first begetter of evil, who stained goodness with sin, whiteness with black, is thought to be a God! No madder were they who, as tradition tells, consecrated Fever and Scurf as goddesses and dedicated shrines to them.^b

The contriver of evil is no God. It was a debased angel that conceived it in his foul mind and brought it into being, one that aforetime shone like a majestic star and blazed in great brightness with a glory created and maintained out of nothing. For from tius is probably using the word here as a synonym for Robigus; the noun scabies and the adjective scabra are found in association with robigo.

PRUDENTIUS

ex nihilo nam cuncta retro, factumque quod usquam est,
 at non ex nihilo Deus et Sapientia vera Spiritus et Sanctus, res semper viva nec umquam 165 coepta, sed aërios etiam molita ministros.
 horum de numero quidam pulcherrimus ore, maiestate ferox, nimiis dum viribus auctus inflatur, dum grande tumens sese altius effert ostentatque suos licito iactantius ignes, 170 persuasit propriis genitum se viribus ex se materiam sumpsisse sibi, qua primitus esse inciperet, nascique suum sine principe coeptum.
 hinc schola subtacitam meditatur gignere sectam, quae docet e tenebris subitum micuisse tyrannum, 175 qui velut aeterna latitans sub nocte retrorsum vixerit et tecto semper regnaverit aevo.
 aemulus, ut memorant, opera ad divina repente corrumpenda caput caligine protulit atra.
 hoc ratio sed nostra negat, cui non licet unam 180 infirmare fidem, sacro quae tradita libro est.
 “nil,” ait, “absque Deo factum, sed cuncta per
 ipsum,
 cuncta, nec est alius quisquam nisi factus ab ipso.”
 sed factus de stirpe bonus, bonitatis in usum proditus et primo generis de fonte serenus, 185 deterior mox sponte sua, dum decolor illum inficit invidia stimulisque instigat amaris.
 arsit enim scintilla odii de fomite zeli et dolor ingenium subitus conflavit iniquum.
 viderat argillam simulacrum et structile flatu 190

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

nothing were all things, back to the beginning, every created thing everywhere; but not from nothing is God and the true Wisdom and the Holy Spirit, an eternal Being that had no beginning but has also created spiritual ministers. One of their number, a being of most beauteous features, grew over-weening in his greatness; puffed up with the excessive strength to which he had grown, bearing himself too highly in his big-swelling pride, and displaying his fires more boastfully than was proper, he persuaded some that he was begotten of his own might and of himself assumed substance whereby he first began to be, and that his birth had its origin in no creator. Hence his followers design to bring into being a stealthy schoõl which teaches that Satan sprang on a sudden out of darkness, after having lived through all the past concealed in a kind of everlasting night, and having reigned through all time though undiscovered. In rivalry, as they tell, he thrust his head suddenly out of the black darkness to spoil the works of God. But this our way of thought denies; it is not permitted to annul the unity of the faith which is handed down to us by Scripture. "Nothing," it says, "was made without God, but all things by Him, all things; and there is no other person not made by Him." But one that from his origin was made good, created for the practice of goodness, and pure from the first source of his being, became afterwards corrupt of his own will because envy marked him with her stain and pricked him with her sore stings. For the spark of hate was fed into a flame by jealousy, and resentment suddenly kindled enmity in his heart. He had seen how a figure fashioned of clay grew warm under the breath of concaluisse Dei, dominum quoque conditioni ¹ inpositum, natura soli pelagique polique ut famulans homini locupletem fundere partum nosset et effusum terreno addicere regi.

PRUDENTIUS

 inflavit fermento animi stomachante tumorem 195 bestia deque acidis vim traxit acerba medullis; bestia sorde carens, cui tunc sapientia longi corporis enodem servabat recta iuventam, complicat ecce novos sinuoso pectore nexus, involvens nitidam spiris torquentibus alvum. 200 simplex lingua prius varia micat arte loquendi, et discissa dolis resonat sermone trisulco.
 hinc natale caput vitiorum, principe ab illo fluxit origo mali, qui se corrumpere primum, mox hominem didicit nullo informante magistro. 205 ultimus exitium subverso praeside mundus sortitur mundique omnis labefacta supellex.
 non aliter quam cum incautum spoliare viantem forte latro adgressus, praedae prius inmemor,
 ipsum
 ense ferit dominum, pugnae nodumque moramque, 210
 quo pereunte trahat captivos victor amictus iam non obstanti locuples de corpore praedo, sic homini subiecta domus, ditissimus orbis scilicet in facilem domino peccante ruinam lapsus erile malum iam tunc vitiabilis hausit. 215 tunc lolium lappasque leves per adultera culta ferre malignus ager glaebis male pinguibus ausus triticeam vacuis segetem violavit avenis;
 tunc etiam innocuo vitulorum sanguine pasci,

After 191 U (cf. note on 69) has the line qui cunctum regeret proprio moderamine mundum.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

God and was made lord of the creation, so that earth and sea and sky had learned to pour forth their rich produce in the service of man and yield it lavishly to an earthly ruler. The beast swelled up with the passion working in his heart, and in his bitter hate drew force from his soured marrows; a beast hitherto without spot, for upright wisdom then kept his long, young body straight, he suddenly begins with sinuous breast to gather himself in strange twinings, twisting his bright belly in intricate coils. His darting tongue, single before, has now the trick of diverse speech, and being divided in guile, utters three-forked words. From him is the original fountain-head of sin, from its beginning in him sprang the source of evil; for he learned to corrupt first himself and then man, with no teacher's instruction; and lastly destruction befalls the world by the ruin of its head, and all the world's store is subverted. Just as when it chances that a robber, setting about the despoiling of an unwary traveller, takes no thought at first of the plunder, but smites its owner with the sword, because it is he that is the obstacle and hindrance in the fight, that when he perishes the victorious brigand may take and carry off his clothes, enriching himself from the body that can no longer withstand him, so the house placed under man's control, the world with all its riches, fell an easy prey to destruction when its lord sinned, and already became corrupt by absorbing the evil from its master. Then it was that the niggard land from its infertile soil dared to bring forth darnel and light burs^a over polluted fields, and spoiled the wheat crop with ^a Cf. Genesis iii, 17-18.

PRUDENTIUS

iamque iugo edomitos rictu laniare iuencos 220 occiso pastore truces didicere leones.
 nec non et querulis balatibus inritatus plenas nocte lupus studuit perrumpere caulas.
 omne animal diri callens sollertia furti inbuit et tortos acuit fallacia sensus. 225 quamvis maceries florentes ambiat hortos, saepibus et densis vallentur vitea rura, aut populator edet gemmantia germina bruchus, aut avibus discerpta feris lacerabitur uva.
 quid loquar herbarum fibras medicante veneno 230 tinctas letiferi fudisse pericula suci?
 noxius in teneris sapor aestuat ecce frutectis, cum prius innocuas tulerit natura cicutas, roscidus et viridem qui vestit flos rhododaphnen pabula lascivis dederit sincera capellis. 235 ipsa quoque oppositum destructo foedere certo transcendunt elementa modum rapiuntque ruuntque
 omnia legirupis quassantia viribus orbem.
 frangunt umbriferos aquilonum proelia lucos, et cadit inmodicis silva exstirpata procellis. 240 parte alia violentus aquis torrentibus amnis transilit obiectas, praescripta repagula, ripas et vagus eversis late dominatur in agris.
 nec tamen his tantam rabiem nascentibus ipse conditor instituit, sed laxa licentia rerum 245 turbavit placidas rupto moderamine leges.
 nec mirum si membra orbis concussa rotantur, si vitiis agitata suis mundana laborat

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

grainless wild-oats. Then, too, fierce lions learned to kill the herdsman and feed on the blood of harmless cattle and tear with their jaws bullocks already broken in to the yoke; and the wolf by night, stirred up by the plaintive bleating, sought to burst into the full sheepfolds. Skill versed in cruel stratagem tainted every creature, and craft sharpened the senses it had perverted. Though a wall surround flourishing gardens and vine-covered lands be enclosed with thick-set hedges, yet either will the wasting locust devour the budding shoots, or the grape-clusters be torn and mangled by wild birds. Little need is there to tell how the tissues of plants were tintured with poisonous drugs so that there flowed from them a juice fraught with the risk of death, which all at once billowed up, noxious to taste, in tender bushes, though nature formerly bore hemlock that was harmless and the dewy flower that clothes the green rhododaphne offered honest feeding to the sportive kids. The very elements, too, breaking down established order, overpass the bounds set for them and ravage all things with their havoc, shaking the world with lawless strength. The warring winds shiver the shady groves; the forest falls, uprooted by unruly storms. Elsewhere a boisterous river with its rushing waters leaps over the banks appointed to hold it in check, and spreading abroad lords it far and wide over the ruined fields. Yet the creator ordained no such raging for the elements at their birth, but the loose indiscipline of the world, breaking through control, upset its peaceful laws. And no wonder if the world's parts are shaken and tossed, if the machinery of the universe fails to work smoothly because it is thrown out of order by faults in itself, machina, si terras luis incentiva fatigat :

PRUDENTIUS

exemplum dat vita hominum, quo cetera peccent, 250 vita hominum, cui quidquid agit vesania et error suppeditant, ut bella fremant, ut fluxa voluptas diffluat, impuro ferveat ut igne libido, sorbeat ut cumulos nummorum faucibus amplis gurges avaritiae, finis quam nullus habendi 255 temperat aggestis addentem vota talentis.
auri namque fames parto fit maior ab auro.
inde seges scelerum, radix et sola malorum, dum scatebras fluviorum omnes et operta metalla eliquat ornatus solvendi leno pudoris, 260 dum venas squalentis humi scrutatur inepta ambitio scalpens naturae occulta latentis, si quibus in foveis radiantes forte lapillos rimata inveniatur. nec enim contenta decore ingenito externam mentitur femina formam 265 ac, velut artificis Domini manus imperfectum os dederit, quod adhuc res exigit aut hyacinthis pingere sutilibus redimitae frontis in arce, colla vel ignitis sincera incingere sertis, auribus aut gravidis virides suspendere bacas, 270 nectitur et nitidis concharum calculus albens crinibus aureolisque riget coma texta catenis.
taedet sacrilegas matrum percurrere curas, muneribus dotata Dei quae plasmata fuco infiunt, ut pigmentis cutis inlita perdat 275 quod fuerat, falso non agnoscenda colore.
haec sexus male fortis agit, cui pectore in arto mens fragilis facili vitiorum fluctuat aestu.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

and the urge that plagues it gives the earth no rest ; for the life of man sets an example for all else to sin, the life of man, whose every act is prompted by folly and delusion, so that wars rage, loose pleasure wantons, lust grows hot with its unclean fire, and the maw of greed swallows piles of money down its wide throat, since no limit of possession controls it and it only puts new desires on top of the riches it has amassed. For the hunger for gold only grows keener from the gold it has got. Hence comes a crop of sins and the sole root of evil, for the love of finery, that like a pander unlooses the restraints of modesty, strains all the gushing waters of streams and the buried ores, and misplaced zeal, probing the dirty earth, scrapes out what nature has hidden away in secret, in hope to find some little glistening stones in some of its diggings to reward its rummaging. For woman, not content with her natural grace, puts on a false and adventitious beauty, and as if the hand of the Lord who made her had given her a face that was unfinished, so that she must needs further embellish it with sapphires mounted on a circlet round her brow to crown it, or surround her chaste neck with strings of glowing gems, or hang a weight of green jewels from her ears, she even fastens the little white stones from sea-shells in her hair to brighten it, and her braided tresses are held in place with bands of gold. It were wearisome to detail all the profane trouble matrons take, who colour the forms which God has dowered with his gifts, so that the painted skin loses its character and cannot be recognised under the false hue. Such are the doings of the feeble sex, in whose narrow mind a frail intelligence tosses lightly on a tide of sin. But even quid quod et ipse caput muliebris corporis et rex, qui regit invalidam propria de carne resectam 280 particulam, qui vas tenerum dicione gubernat, solvitur in luxum? cernas mollescere cultu heroas vetulos, opifex quibus aspera membra finxerat et rigidos duraverat ossibus artus, sed pudet esse viros, quaerunt vanissima quaeque 285 quis niteant, genuina leves ut robora solvant.

PRUDENTIUS

 vellere non ovium, sed Eoo ex orbe petitis ramorum spoliis fluitantes sumere amictus gaudent et durum scutulis perfundere corpus.
 additur ars, ut fila herbis saturata recoctis 290
 inludant varias distincto stamine formas.
 ut quaeque est lanugo ferae mollissima tactu, pectitur. hunc videas lascivas praepete cursu venantem tunicas, avium quoque versicolorum indumenta novis texentem plumea telis, 295 illum pigmentis redolentibus et peregrino pulvere femineas spargentem turpiter auras.
 omnia luxus habet nostrae vegetamina vitae, sensibus in quinque statuens quae condidit auctor.
 auribus atque oculis, tum naribus atque palato 300 quaeritur infectus vitiosis artibus usus;
 ipse etiam toto pollet qui corpore tactus palpamen tenerum blandis ex fotibus ambit.
 pro dolor! ingenuas naturae occumbere leges, captivasque trahi regnante libidine dotes! 305

^a I.e. silk. Virgil (Georgics, II, 121) speaks of the Seres "combing fine fleeces from the leaves."

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

he who is the head and ruler of the woman's person, who governs the weak portion cut from his own flesh and bears lordship over the delicate vessel, lets himself go in indulgence. One sees strong men, no longer young, turn effeminate in their self-refinement, though the creator made their bodies rude and their limbs hard with bones to stiffen them; but they are ashamed to be men. They seek after the greatest vanities to beautify them, so that in their light-mindedness they dissipate their native strength. They love to wear flowing robes not made from sheeps' fleeces but of the spoils taken from branches of trees ^a and fetched from the eastern world, and to overlay their hardy frames with lozenge broidery.^b Art is called in to make yarns soaked in decoctions of plants work diverse fancy patterns with threads of different colours. Beasts' coats are chosen for carding for their softness to the touch. One man is seen chasing hot-foot after luxuriant tunics, and weaving downy garments with strange threads from many-coloured birds, another shaming himself by spreading womanish scents with perfumed paints and foreign powder. Indulgence is master of all the active powers of our life, which the creator made and established in our five senses. For ears and eyes, and for nostrils and palate we seek out employment which is tainted with vicious arts; and even touch, which acts over our whole body, courts the tender caress of alluring comforts. What grief to think that nature's native laws should go down, and her gifts be carried away captive by a tyrant passion! Every ^b Illustrations of garments ornamented in this way may be seen in Daremberg et Saglio, Dictionnaire des antiquités grecques et romaines, s.v. segmentum.

PRUDENTIUS

perversum ius omne viget, dum quidquid habendum
 omnipotens dederat studia in contraria vertunt.
 idcircone, rogo, speculatrix pupula molli subdita palpebrae est, ut turpia semivirorum membra theatri spectet vertigine ferri, 310 incestans miseros foedo oblectamine visus?
 aut ideo spirant mediaque ex arce cerebri demittunt geminas sociata foramina nares, ut bibat inlecebras male conciliata voluptas quas pigmentato meretrix iacit improba crine? 315 num propter lyricae modulamina vana puellae nervorumque sonos et convivale calentis carmen nequitiae patulas Deus addidit aures perque cavernosos iussit penetrare meatus vocis iter? numquid madido sapor inditus ori 320 vivit ob hanc causam, medicata ut fercula pigram ingluviem vegetamque gulam ganeonis inescant, per varios gustus instructa ut prandia ducat in noctem lassetque gravem sua crapula ventrem?
 quid durum, quid molle foret, quid lene, quid horrens, 325
 quid calidum gelidumve, Deus cognoscere nosmet ad tactum voluit palpani interprete sensu.
 at nos delicias plumarum et linea texta sternimus atque cutem fulcro adtenuante polimus.
 felix qui indultis potuit mediocriter uti 330 muneribus parcumque modum servare fruendi, quem locuples mundi species et amoena venustas et nitidis fallens circumflua copia rebus non capit, ut puerum, nec inepto addicit amori, qui sub adumbrata dulcedine triste venenum 335
 deprendit latitare boni mendacis operto.
 sed fuit id quondam nobis sanctumque bonumque

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

power is perverted in its action, because men turn to opposite purposes all that the omnipotent gave them to possess. Has the seeing pupil, I ask, been set under the soft eyelid merely to watch the shameful figures of eunuchs whirling in the theatre, polluting its unhappy vision with a filthy amusement? Or do we have a pair of breathing passages that lead from the centre of the brain's seat to our two nostrils, merely that an ill-gotten sense of pleasure may drink in the allurements that a vile harlot throws out from her greased hair? Was it for the vain melodies of a girl playing on a lute, the sound of strings, the song inspired by inflamed wickedness at a banquet, that God gave us open ears and ordained a passage for the voice through vaulted ways? Does the power to savour, which is imparted to the moist mouth, exist only for spiced dishes to tempt the gourmand's sluggish appetite and give his palate zest, that he may prolong feasts of many courses into the night and load his belly till it is exhausted with its own excess? Hard and soft, smooth and rough, warm and cold, God willed that we should learn by contact through the medium of the sense of touch; but we spread voluptuous downs and fabrics of linen, and make our skin fine and delicate by lying on a couch. Happy the man who has been able to use with temperance the gifts granted him, and to keep frugal measure in his enjoyment of them, whom the world's rich display with its pleasant attraction and its flowing abundance of lying baubles does not charm like a child, nor enslave to a foolish love, who detects the deadly poison lurking under the feigned sweetness, in concealment under what falsely claims to be good! Yet once for us it was holy and good, in the principio rerum, Christus cum conderet orbem.

PRUDENTIUS

vidit enim Deus esse bonum velut ipse Moyses historicus mundi nascentis testificatus 340 “ vidit,” ait, “ Deus esse bonum quodcumque creavit.”

hoc sequar, hoc stabili conceptum mente tenebo, inspirante Deo quod sanctus vaticinator prodidit antiquae recolens primordia lucis, esse bonum quidquid Deus et Sapientia fecit. 345 conditor ergo boni Pater est et cum Patre Christus,

nam Deus, atque Deus Pater est et Filius unum;
quippe unum natura facit, quae constat utrique una voluntatis, iuris, virtutis, amoris. „ non tamen idcirco duo numina nec duo rerum 350 artifices, quoniam generis dissensio nulla est, atque ideo nulla est operis distantia, nulla ingenii, peperit bona omnia conditor unus.
nil luteum de fonte fluit nec turbidus umor nascitur aut primae violatur origine venae, 355 sed dum liventes liquor incorruptus harenas praelambit, putrefacta inter contagia sordet.
numquid equus, ferrum, taurus, leo, funis, olivum in se vim sceleris, cum formarentur, habebant?
quod iugulatur homo, non ferrum causa furoris 360 sed manus est; nec equum vesania fervida circi auctorem levitatis habet rabidive fragoris:
mens vulgi rationis inops, non cursus equorum perfurit: infami studio perit utile donum.
sic Lacedaemonias oleo maduisse palaestras 365 novimus et placidum servire ad crimina sucum, inde per aërium pendens audacia funem

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

beginning of things, when Christ created the world. For God saw that it was good, as Moses, the historian of the world's birth, bears witness: "God," he says, "saw that all his creation was good." This faith I shall follow and hold it firmly grasped in my mind, this that the holy prophet, surveying the beginnings of light in ancient times, has declared under God's inspiration, that all that God and Wisdom created was good. The creator of good, then, is the Father and, with the Father, Christ; for He is God, and God the Father and the Son are one being, in as much as they are made one by the one nature of will and authority and power and love which is common to both. Yet are there not therefore two Gods nor two creators, since there is no divergence of being and therefore no separation of work or of mind, but it is one creator who made all things good. There is no muddy flow from the fountain-head, the water is not turbid at its rise, nor made unclean as it springs from its source; but as the pure stream washes the dirty sand along its banks it is befouled by contact with decay. Did horse and iron and bull and lion and rope and oil have any wickedness in them when they were made? In the murder of a man it is not the iron that is the cause of violence, but the hand; and when the frenzy of the circus rages, it is not the horse that is responsible for the folly or the furious din: it is the unreasoning mob, not the running of horses, that goes mad, and so a useful gift is wasted through a base passion. Thus it is that, as we know, the wrestlers in the Spartan schools were drenched with oil, and that gentle liquor was put to the service of sin; hence it is that a man boldly mounts high up on the stage along a rope in ardua securis scandit proscaenia plantis, inde feras volucris temeraria corpora saltu transiliunt mortisque inter discrimina ludunt. 370 sanguinis humani spectacula publicis edit consensus legesque iubent venale parari supplicium, quo membra hominum discerpta cruentis

PRUDENTIUS

 morsibus oblectent hilarem de funere plebem.
 mille alia stolidi bacchantia gaudia mundi 375 percensere piget, quae veri oblita Tonantis humanum miseris volvunt erroribus aevum.
 nemo animum summi memorem genitoris in altum
 excitat, ad caelum mittit suspiria nemo, nec recolens apicem solii natalis ad ipsum 380 respicit auctorem, nec spem super aëra librat, sed mentem gravidis contentam stertere curis indigno subdit domino perituraque pronus diligit et curvo quaerit terrestria sensu.
 hoc pulchrum quod terra parit, quod gloria confert 385
 lubrica, commendat quod perniciose voluptas, quod velut excitus difflato pulvere ventus praeterit, exemplo tenuis quod transvolat umbrae.
 his aegras animas morborum pestibus urget praedo potens, tacitis quem viribus interfusum 390 corda bibunt hominum; serit ille medullitus omnes
 nequitiis spargitque suos per membra ministros.
 namque illic numerosa cohors sub principe tali

^a The rope-dancer had long been popular. In one kind of performance the rope was stretched obliquely from the level

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

mid air with confident steps ^a; hence that rash figures spring with flying leap over wild beasts and sport amid the risks of death. It is the general public taste that produces exhibitions of human blood, and law commands the provision of men who are paid to suffer torture,^b so that the tearing of human limbs asunder by blood-stained jaws may divert a populace that makes merry at the sight of death. I care not to review the thousand other wanton pleasures of the senseless world, which in forgetfulness of the true Thunderer enwrap men's life in pitiable delusions. None lifts on high a heart that remembers the supreme Father, none utters a sigh towards heaven, nor calls to mind the lofty throne of his origin and casts a thought upon his maker, nor launches his hopes beyond the skies. To an unworthy master men subject a spirit that is content to sleep heavily under the cares that weigh on it, with down-bent head they set their hearts on what is doomed to perish, and with eyes on the ground seek after earthly things. That they count lovely which is born of earth, or bestowed by shifting reputation, or set off by baneful pleasure, that which passes like a whiff of wind that has scattered the dust, or flits by like an unsubstantial shade. With these plagues of sin the powerful robber besets our sickened souls. With his stealthy forces he infiltrates into men's hearts and they draw him in. He sows all manner of wickedness in their inmost parts, and scatters his agents through their frames. For there a large force serves under

of the stage to a high platform, the performer going up on one side and down on the other.

^b Bestiarii, trained to fight wild beasts and paid for their performances in the arena.

PRUDENTIUS

militat horrendisque animas circumsidet armis, Ira, Superstitio, Maeror, Discordia, Luctus,¹ 395
 Sanguinis atra Sitis, Vini Sitis et Sitis Auri, Livor, Adulterium, Dolus, Obtrectatio, Furtum.
 informes horrent facies habituque minaces.
 Ambitio ventosa tumet, Doctrina superbit, personat Eloquentium, nodos Fraus abdita nectit. 400 inde canina foro latrat Facundia toto, hinc gerit Herculeam vilis Sapiencia clavam, ostentatque suos vicitim gymnosophistas, incerat lapides fumosos Idololatrix Religio et surdis pallens advolvitur aris. 405 heu quantis mortale genus premit improbus hostis armigeris, quanto ferrata satellite ductor bella gerit, quanta victos ditione triumphat!
 surgit in auxilium Chananeus atque agmina denset
 casside terribilis, saetarum pondera mento 410 concutiens dextramque gravi cum cuspide quassans.
 ast alia de parte furens exercitus ardet regis Amorraei, tum milia Gergeseorum effundunt aciem toto volitantia campo; eminus hi feriunt, configunt comminus illi. 415
 ecce Zebusiaceae fervent ad proelia turmae, aurea tela quibus de sanguine tincta draconis mortifero splendore micant radiantque necantque.
 nec non terrificas pilis armare catervas

¹ Some MSS. of both classes have luxus.

^a A stout staff is spoken of as a characteristic appanage of philosophers. Cf. Sidonius, Carm. 15, 197.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

this wicked commander and invests men's souls with dreadful weapons—Anger, Superstition, Sickness-of-Heart, Strife, Affliction, foul Thirst-for-Blood, Thirst-for-Wine, Thirst-for-Gold, Malice, Adultery, Craft. Slander, Theft. Hideous and frightful are their shapes, threatening their carriage. Vaunting Ambition is puffed up, Learning is proud, Eloquence thunders, Deceit contrives snares in secret. Here Abusive Speech snarls throughout the courts, there paltry Philosophy wields the club ^a of Hercules and displays her naked Sages ^b through the streets, while Idolatry coats smoke-grimed stones with wax ^c and in pale fear falls prostrate before altars that cannot hear. Alas, with what armed forces does the ruthless enemy press upon the race of men, with what attendant trains under his command does he wage his iron wars, with what dominion triumph over the conquered! The Canaanite rises up to his aid with close-set columns and daunting helm, shaking the weight of bristly beard on his chin and waving the hand that grasps his heavy spear. On another side in burning rage stands the army of the king of the Amorites, and the Gergashites in their thousands pour out in array and come flying over the field. Some smite from a distance, others join in close combat. See, the squadrons of the Jebusites are hot for battle; their golden weapons, dipped in serpent's blood, with death-dealing lustre glitter and gleam and slay. It is thy pleasure too, O Hittite, ^b "Gymnosophist" is properly a word used by the Greeks to describe certain Indian ascetics. Prudentius may be thinking of the Cynics, who are often satirised for their "nakedness" (cf. Juvenal, 13, 122; 14, 309).

^c See note on Apotheosis, 457.

PRUDENTIUS

te, Cittae, iuvat; sed gens Pherezaea sagittis insultat virtute pari, sed dispare ferro.	420
postremum cuneum rex promovet Euvaeorum squamosum thoraca gerens de pelle colubri. his subnixa viris scelerum perversa potestas edomat invalidas mentes, quae simplicitate	425
indociles bellicae rudes sub foedere falso tristis amicitiae primum socia agmina credunt, Mammoneamque fidem pacis sub amore sequuntur.
mox faciles ad vincla rapi iuga dura volentes addictis subeunt cervicibus, et nebulonum spirituum iussis servire ferocibus optant.	430
ille, supervacuis augens patrimonia fundis finitimisque inhians contempto limite agellis, ducitur innexus manicis et mille catenis ante triumphales currus post terga revinctus,	435
nec se barbaricis addictum sentit habenis. hic, qui ventosae scandit fastigia famae inflaturque cavo pompae popularis honore, qui summum solidumque bonum putat ambi- tionis crescere successu, praeconum voce trementes exanimare reos, miserorum in corpora fasces frangere, terribiles legum exercere secures, in laqueum iam colla dedit, iam compede dura	440
nectitur et pedibus servilia vincula limat. credite, captivi mortales, hostica quos iam damnatos cohibent ergastula, quos famulatu poenarum virtus non intellecta coercet,	445

^a Cf. Joshua xxiv, 11.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

to arm dread companies with javelins. But the tribe of the Perizzites come at us with arrows, their courage like thine, though their weapon is unlike. Last of all the king of the Hivites brings up his regiment, wearing a scaly breast-plate of snake-skin.^a With these warriors to support him the perverse prince of evil overcomes weak souls, which in artless ignorance, unused to warfare, trust in a false treaty of ill-starred friendship and at first take them for allies, and so become subjects of Mammon through their love of peace. Then they are carried away to bondage, easy victims, who willingly surrender their necks to the hard yoke and of their own choice obey the insolent commands of ne'er-do-well spirits. That man, who is enlarging his inheritance with properties he does not need, and, scorning the boundary between, casts longing eyes on his neighbour's bit of land, is being led in shackles before the triumphal cars, fettered with a thousand chains behind his back, and yet does not realise that he is made over to cruel bondage. This one, who climbs the heights of windy reputation and is puffed up with the unsubstantial fame of popular display, who thinks it the chief and only real good to succeed in pushing himself farther and farther forward, to terrify prisoners at the bar who tremble at the voice of the criers, to break the rods on poor wretches' bodies and wield the terror-striking axes of the law, has already put his head into the noose, already he is bound with the hard fetter and rubbing smooth with his feet the shackles of slavery. Believe, ye captive mortals, who are condemned to confinement in your enemy's prison-house, who are kept in durance under the bondage of punishment because you did not

PRUDENTIUS

haec illa est Babylon, haec transmigratio nostrae gentis et horribilis victoria principis Assur, carmine luctifico quam deflens Hieremias 450
 orbatam propriis ululavit civibus urbem.
 num latet aut dubium est animas de semine Iacob exilium gentile pati, quas Persica regna captivas retinent atque in sua foedera cogunt?
 illic natali desuescunt vivere ritu 455 moribus et patriis exutae in barbara iura degenerant linguamque novam vestemque sequuntur,
 deque profanato discunt sordescere cultu nutricemque abolent petulanti e pectore Sion.
 iam patriae meminisse piget, iam, mystica frangunt 460
 organa et externi laudant anathemata regni.
 nonne fuit melius saevum Memphitidis aulae imperium tolerasse patres penitusque sinistris adsedis focis, positos Pharaonis iniqui sub pedibus, limo et paleis servire paratos, 465 carnis et inmodicae spurco ructamine crudos?
 quo tantum auxilii per prodigialia signa effudit Dominus, populum dum forte rebellem servat ope inmerita, vinclis dum subdita colla solvit et Aegyptum virga serpente coercet? 470 quid iuvat aequoreum pelago cedente profundum pulverea calcasse via, cum conscia ponti saxa sub ignoto patuerunt prodita caelo aruit et medio sitiens in gurgite limus, si victor virtute Dei mediasque tenebras 475
 luce columnari scindens exercitus olim

^a Cf. 2 Kings xxiv, 10 ff.

^b Cf. Exodus xvi, 3.

^c Exodus vii, 10.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

understand goodness, this is the Babylon ye have heard of, this is the removal of our race ^a and the fearful conquest of the king of Assyria which Jeremiah bewailed in his song of lamentation, weeping for a city bereft of her people. Is it not known beyond doubt that the souls of the seed of Jacob suffer exile among the Gentiles, held in captivity by the realms of Persia and compelled to join with them? There they forget the way of life to which they were born, and shedding their native manners, debase themselves to obey heathen laws, adopt new speech and dress, learn to befoul themselves with unhallowed worship, and efface from their froward heart all thought of Zion, their nurse. They care not any longer to remember their own country, they break their holy instruments of music, and speak well of the sacrifices of a foreign kingdom. Had it not been better that their fathers should have borne with the cruel government of the court of Memphis and sat well in by hearths unfriendly, under the oppressor Pharaoh's feet ready to be the slaves of clay and straw, and eating their fill of flesh till they belched disgustfully from the surfeit? ^b To what end did the Lord lavish all that help by miraculous signs, saving a rebellious people with succour they did not deserve, freeing their necks from the bonds laid on them and constraining Egypt with the rod that crawled? ^c What profits it to have trodden the deep waters by a sandy path while the sea made way, when rocks that had felt the main lay exposed under a sky they knew not, and the slime grew dry and parched in the midst of the flood, if the host that once conquered by the power of God and cut through the darkness with a pillared light has lost the rich valley where it perdidit inventi vallem botryonis opimam, si nescit versare solum, cui melle perenni glaeba fluens niveos permiscet lactea rivos, si domitam Ierichon lituis atque aere canoro 480 rursus in antiquos patitur consurgere muros, si ripis reflui Iordanis pellitur et iam deserit adscriptam dimensa in iugera sortem, denique si structam tantis sudoribus urbem et quae nubigenas transcendunt culmina nimbos 485 defensare nequit, si nescit quis lapis ille est hostibus obsistens et inexpugnabile turris praesidium, quem non aerato machina rostro arietat insiliens, nec ferrea verbera quassant?

PRUDENTIUS

 angulus hic portae in capite est, hic, continet
 omnem 490
 saxorum seriem constructaque limina firmat.
 quem qui rite suis per propugnacula muris noverit insertum, seque ac sua moenia vallo praecingat triplici celsa stans eminus arce, fretus amore petrae castis et pervigil armis, 495 non illum regina Tyri, non accola magni Euphratis Parthus rapiet, non decolor Indus tempora pinnatis redimitus nigra sagittis.
 quin si fulmineos cogens ad bella gigantas allophilus tua castra velit delere tyrannus, 500 tutus eris, nec te firma statione movebit ipse Charon mundi, numen Marcionis, ipse, qui regit aërio vanas sub sole tenebras.
 nam vanum quidquid sol aspicit, ex elementis

^a Numbers xiii, 23-27.

^b Cf. Joshua iii, 16.

^c Joshua xiii-xix.

^d The word ἀλλόφυλος = "alien," but is used particularly of the Philistines. Cf. the heading of Psalm 56 in the Septuagint

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

found the bunch of grapes,^a if it cannot work the soil where the land flows with honey unceasing and colours the streams snow-white with its milk, if it suffers Jericho, after being subdued by the loud brazen trumpet, once more to rise to the height of her ancient walls, if it is driven from the banks of Jordan, which stayed its waters,^b and abandons the lands that were allotted in apportioned measures,^c if it cannot defend the city that was built with such labour, and the high tops that rise beyond the cloud-born storms, if it knows not which is that stone that withstands the foe like an impregnable tower of defence, which no engine of war leaping upon it can batter down with its brazen snout, nor blows of iron shake? This is the keystone at the head of the gateway; this it is that holds together the whole course of blocks and makes the structure of the entrance firm. If a man knows that this stone is duly set in the defences of his walls and girds himself and his stronghold with a threefold rampart, while he stands at a distance on his lofty citadel in reliance on the love of the stone, watching and keeping his armour clean, such a man neither queen of Tyre nor Parthian that dwells by great Euphrates shall ravish, nor swarthy Indian whose black brows are wreathed with feathered arrows. Even should the prince of the Philistines^d gather his fiery giants for war and seek to destroy thy camp, thou wilt be safe, nor will the very Charon of the world, Marcion's deity, he who rules over the unsubstantial realm of darkness below the sun in the sky, dislodge thee from thy strong post. For all that the sun looks and Vulgate. Prudentius uses it again in Tit. Hist. xviii, 3 (cf. Judges xv, 5).

PRUDENTIUS

cuncta solubilibus fluxoque creamine constant. 505 fallo, creaturam nisi doctor apostolus omnem subiectam vanis non sponte laboribus orsus periuro ingemuit miserans servire latroni:
 "errat" ait, "qui luctamen cum sanguine nobis et carne et venis ferventibus et vitioso 510 felle putat calidisque animam peccare medullis.
 non mentem sua membra premunt, nec terrea virtus
 oppugnat sensus liquidos bellove lacescit, sed cum spiritibus tenebrosis nocte dieque congregimur, quorum dominatibus umidus iste 515 et pigris densus nebulis obtemperat aër." scilicet hoc medium, caelum inter et infima terrae quod patet et vacuo nubes suspendit hiatu, frena potestatum variarum sustinet ac sub principe Belia rectoribus horret iniquis. 520 his conluctamur praedonibus, ut sacra nobis oris apostolici testis sententia prodit.
 nemo habitum naturae, aut inritamina peccans corporis accuset; facile est frenare rebelles affectus carnis nimiosque retundere pulsus 525 materiae fragilis et viscera victa domare.
 quippe animus longe praestantior, utpote summo aethere demissus, subiectos si velit artus imperio quassare gravi iussisque severis dedere, regnanti domino vis nulla resistet. 530 maior inest vis illa homini, quae flatile virus ingerit et tenuem tenui ferit aëre mentem.
 Parthica non aequè ventos transcurrit harundo,

^a Cf. Romans viii, 20-22.

^b Cf. Ephesians vi, 12; ii, 2.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

upon is unsubstantial; all things consist of mortal elements and transient matter of creation. I plead guilty to deceiving, if the apostle who instructs us has not said that all creation is subject, not willingly, to vain struggles,^a and lamented in pity that it is in bondage to the false robber. "He errs," says he, "who supposes that our contest is with blood and flesh, with burning passions of the body and corrupted gall, and that the soul sins because the marrow is hot. It is not its body that bears down upon the soul, nor earthly power that attacks the pure spirit and makes war upon it, but it is with spirits of darkness that we contend night and day, which bear rule over the damp and heavy-clouded air."^b All this middle region, you must know, which stretches between the heavens and the earth beneath and suspends the clouds in its great empty space, upholds the government of diverse powers and is the gruesome seat of wicked rulers under the command of Belial. It is with these robbers that we wrestle, as the holy words of the apostle's mouth testify to us. Let no man blame the cast of his nature or the provocation of his body for his sin. It is easy to curb the rebellious passions of the flesh, to beat down the inordinate impulses of frail matter and conquer and subdue the body. For the spirit by far excels it, since it came down from heaven on high, and if it cares to break with stern rule the members that are put under it and subject them to strict command, no force can withstand its royal mastery. But there is a stronger force in man, one that attacks him with a breath of poison and strikes the subtle soul with a subtle air. Not so quickly through the breezes flies the Parthian arrow, whose path no eye can cuius iter nullus potis est comprehendere visus; praepes enim volucres dum pennis transvolat auras, 535

PRUDENTIUS

 inprovisa venit, nec stridor nuntiat ante adventum leti quam pectoris abdita rumpat, securam penetrans medicato vulnere vitam;
 sed magis aligera est magis et medicata sagitta, quam iacit umbrosi dominatio lubrica mundi, 540 eludens excussa oculos calamique volantis praepete transcurso cordis penetralia figens.
 nec segnis natura animae est aut tarda cavendi vulneris, ignitum quoniam Deus indidit olli ingenium, purum, sapiens, subtile, serenum, 545 mobile, sollicitum, velox, agitabile, acutum, factorem modo casta suum veneretur et ipsi militet ac victum proculcet sobria mundum, nil de pestiferis opibus aut falsificatis terrarum spoliis stulto oblectamine libans, 550 ne sub fasce iacens alieno et dedita regno non queat argutas hostis vitare sagittas.
 sed quid ego omne malum mundique hominumque maligni
 hostis ad invidiam detorqueo, cum mala nostra ex nostris concreta animis genus et caput et vim, 555 quid sint, quid valeant, sumant de corde parente?
 ille quidem fomes nostrorum et causa malorum est, sed tantum turbare potest aut fallere quantum nos volumus, qui decrepito suggesta leoni armamenta damus: friget fera futtile frendens, 560 humani generis ni per suffragia gliscat.
 gignimus omne malum proprio de corpore nostrum,
 ut genuit David, alias pater optimus, unum crimen Abessalon; taetrum pater ille, sed unum,

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

perceive ; for flitting swiftly with its feathers through the winged airs it comes unforeseen, and no hissing proclaims the approach of death before it bursts its way into the recesses of the breast, piercing the unconcerned life with a poisoned wound ; but it is a swifter arrow with a deadlier poison that the deceitful lord of the darksome world shoots, one that baffles the eye when it is launched, and with the quick passage of its flying shaft pierces the inmost heart. Yet the soul is not naturally sluggish or slow to avoid the wound, since God has given it a lively nature that is pure, wise, delicate, tranquil, active, careful, quick, light-moving, keen-edged : if it but piously reverence its maker and fight in his service, and in soberness overcome the world and trample it under foot, tasting not in foolish enjoyment any of the deadly riches or fraudulent spoils of the earth, lest, being weighed down under its burden and given over to another's rule, it be unable to avoid the enemy's whizzing arrows. But why shift all the evil of the world and of men on to the spite of a malign enemy, when our sins grow out of our own minds and take their birth and source and power, their being and their strength from the heart which begets them ? The enemy indeed is the tinder that sets our sins alight, but he can only trouble or deceive us to the extent that we are willing. It is we who furnish weapons as a gift to the enfeebled lion ; the wild beast flags and gnashes his teeth to no purpose unless he gain strength from the favour of mankind. We beget all our sin from our own body, just as David, who was otherwise blessed as a father, begot the one guilty Absalom. In that instance a father begot,

PRUDENTIUS

innocuas inter suboles genuit patricidam, 565 ausus in auctorem generis qui stringere ferrum (a pietas!) signis contraria signa paternis egit et unius commisit sanguinis arma.
 nostra itidem diros urente propagine natos pectora parturiunt, versis qui protinus in nos 570 morsibus insuescunt gignentum vivere poenis;
 depopulantur enim nimium fecunda parentum viscera et interitu genitalis stirpis aluntur.
 progeniem verum ille suam, rex utpote summus atque Dei vates pariturae et virginis auctor, 575 tristibus atque piis variaverat, ut Solomonis frater Abessalon sereret sua crimina iustis pigneribus dulcemque domum turbaret amaris.
 nos dignum Solomone nihil, nos degener inplet solus Abessalon lacerans pia viscera ferro. 580 si licet ex ethicis¹ quidquam praesumere vel si de physicis exempli aliquid, sic vipera, ut aiunt, dentibus emoritur fusae per viscera prolis, mater morte sua, non sexu fertilis aut de concubitu distenta uterum, sed cum calet igni 585 percita femineo, moriturum obscena maritum ore sitit patulo; caput inserit ille trilingue coniugis in fauces atque oscula fervidus intrat, insinuans oris coitu genitale venenum.
 nupta voluptatis vi saucia mordicus haustum 590 frangit amatoris blanda inter foedera guttur, infusasque bibit caro pereunte salivas.

¹ Some MSS. have ethnicis (the heathen), which Bergman adopts as being the reading of A.

^a The statement about the viper is in part as old as Herodotus (iii, 109).

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

among his innocent children, a horrid patricide, but only one, who dared to draw the sword against the author of his being (alas, for filial duty!), set forces in motion against his father's, and fought against his own flesh and blood. So do our hearts give birth to a galling breed of accursed children who straightway turn their teeth upon us and learn to live by the sufferings of their begetters; for they waste the all too fruitful flesh of their parents and feed on the death of the stock from which they sprang. But David, being a great king and a prophet of God also, and ancestor of the virgin who was to bear a child, had dutiful as well as unhappy children, so that Solomon's brother Absalom brought his crimes into a family that was virtuous and troubled a pleasant household with his sorrowful deeds, whereas there is nothing in us to be compared with Solomon, but only the debased Absalom who tears the flesh of his kin with the sword. If we may draw on the moralists for anything or take an instance from natural history,^a it is thus, they say, that the viper perishes by the teeth of the progeny that is brought forth through her flesh. She becomes a mother by her own death; she does not bear her young by an organ of sex, nor does her womb swell from intercourse, but when she burns with the excitement of the female's heat the lewd beast opens her mouth wide in thirst for a mate that is doomed. He puts his three-tongued head into his spouse's jaws, eagerly entering her alluring mouth and inserting his baneful seed by an oral union. The bride, smitten with the strong pleasure, takes her lover's head between her teeth and breaks his neck with a bite in the midst of their fond compact, drinking in the injected slaver while her dear one

PRUDENTIUS

his pater inlecebris consumitur, at genitricem clausa necat subolis; nam postquam semine adulto

incipiunt calidis corpuscula parva latebris 595

serpere motatumque uterum vibrata ferire, aestuatur interno pietatis crimine mater carnificemque gemit damnati conscia sexus progeniem, saepti rumpentem obstacula partus.

nam quia nascendi nullus patet exitus, alvus 600

fetibus in lucem nitentibus excruciat carpitur atque viam lacerata per ilia pandit.

tandem obitu altricis prodit grex ille dolorum ingressum vitae vix eluctatus et ortum per scelus exculpens; lambunt natale cadaver 605

reptantes catuli, prolis dum nascitur orba, haud experta diem miserae nisi postuma matris.

non dispar nostrae conceptus mentis: ab ore vipereo infusum sic conbibit illa venenum coniuge Beliade, sic oscula devorat haustu 610

interiusque rapit, sic felle libidinis ardens inpletur vitiis perituro mixta marito.

tunc praegnans letale genus concepta maligni fert opera ingenii de semine complicitis hydri;

quem poenis pensare prius sua facta necesse est 615

corruptae pro stupro animae proque orbe perempto.

ipsam porro animam crudelia vulnera carpunt

mille puerperiis, suboles dum parturit ex se contra naturam genitas, peccamina crebra

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

dies. With these allurements the sire is destroyed ; but the young shut up within her kill their dam. For when the seed develops and the tiny bodies begin to creep about in their warm hiding-place and to shake the womb with their waving and lashing, the mother is tormented by the outrage against filial duty within her, and, conscious of her guilty sex, bemoans the fate that makes her progeny her executioners as they break through the barriers that stop their bringing forth. For because there is no passage to give them birth, the belly is tortured and gnawed by the young as they struggle into the light, till a way is opened through the torn sides. At last the grievous brood come forth by the death of her that has nurtured them, scarce forcing an entrance into life and carving out their way to birth by a crime, and the young creep about licking the corpse that bore them, a family of orphans at their very birth, that have only seen the light of day as the posthumous children of their poor mother. Just so does our soul conceive. In the same way it imbibes the baneful fluid poured into it from the serpent's mouth, mating with the son of Belial ; in the same way it gulps down the allurements of his lips, greedily drawing them in ; in the same way it burns with the gall of desire and is filled with sins by its union with a spouse that is doomed to perish. Then being pregnant it brings forth its deadly brood in works of an evil nature, conceived from the seed of its partner the serpent, which must first pay the penalty for its deeds, for corrupting and debauching the soul and ruining the world. Again, cruel wounds tear the soul too in a thousand labour-pains, as she gives birth to her unnatural progeny, to wit a multitude

PRUDENTIUS

scilicet et pastos materno funere natos. 620 hinc illa est Domini iusta obiurgatio Christi : “ nonne pater daemon, vos increpo, peccatores, concubitu carnis semen sitientis iniquum vos genuit? ” sanctum, lector, percense volumen :
 quod loquor, invenies Dominum dixisse profanis 625 vera obiectantem mortalibus : “ ex Patre nam vos esse meo genitos pietas, ” ait, “ ipsa probaret ac pietatis opus. ” pro caeca libido ! quid hoc est, quod cum se thalamis desponsam mens bona iustis noverit, inque torum regis nuptura vocetur, 630 et regis semper iuvenis senioque repulso divinum decus aeterno servantis in ore, malit adulterium fulvo et se munere vilem vendat nocticolae spurcis complexibus Indi, aspernata Dei fusam per virginis artus 635 progeniem dulcesque vocans in fornice natos ?
 sentio quam contra moveat pellacia litem, quo dente obnitens spinosa calumnia pugnet nosque lacessito vocet ad luctamina vero.
 “ si non vult Deus esse malum, cur non vetat ? ”
 inquit. 640
 “ nil refert auctor fuerit factorque malorum, anne opera in vitium sceleris pulcherrima verti, cum possit prohibere, sinat ; qui si velit omnes innocuos agere omnipotens, nec sancta voluntas degeneret, facto nec se manus inquinet ullo. 645 condidit ergo malum Dominus quod spectat ab alto
 et patitur fierique probat, tamquam ipse crearit ;
 ipse creavit enim quod, cum discludere possit,

^a Cf. John viii, 44.

^b Cf. John viii, 41-42.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

of sins, children that have fed on their mother's corpse. Hence the just reproach of the Lord Christ: "Is not the devil—I accuse you, ye sinners—the father that begot you, by union with the flesh that thirsted for the seed of iniquity?"^a Examine the holy book, O reader: you will find that the Lord spoke as I say, bringing true charges against unholy men. "For love," He says, "and the work of love would prove you begotten of my Father."^b "O blind lust! What means it that the good soul, knowing herself plighted for a true marriage, and called to the king's chamber to be his bride, bride of a king ever young, who keeps the divine beauty for ever on his countenance and admits not the approach of age, would rather choose adultery and sell herself cheap for a gift of gold to the foul embraces of a blackamoor that loves the darkness, while she rejects the Son of God brought forth by a virgin's body, and calls children born in a brothel sweet?"

I know the seductive argument that is brought forward on the other side, the sharp tooth with which stinging malice presses the fight, challenging us to the contest by attacking the truth. "If God does not will the existence of evil," it says, "why does He not forbid it? It matters not whether He was the author and creator of evil, or only suffers his fairest works to be misapplied to sin when He could prevent it. If He, being omnipotent, willed that all men live innocent lives, neither would the pure will be debased nor the hand pollute itself with any act. Therefore the Lord established the evil which He looks on from on high and permits and sanctions, as much as if He himself created it; for He has himself created that which, though He could shut it out, He does not non abolet longoque sinit grassarier usu."

PRUDENTIUS

 damna aures, Pater alme, meas, et claude meatus 650 obbrutescentis capitis, ne pervia tales concipiat flexura sonos; est perdere tanti extinctum vitae officium de parte cerebri, immunem modo sese anima expertemque nefandi auditus felix stolidam conservet ab aure. 655 quis ferat haec iniecta Deo convicia, qui se divinis meminit praecellere nobilitatum muneribus? multa ut taceam, vel sola be-nignum
 res probat esse Deum, vetiti quod amore peremptos
 excitat e tumulis homines regnique per aevum 660 participes iubet esse sui. qui si foret auctor servatorque mali, nunquam post damna salutis peccantumque obitus redivivam ferre medellam vellet et amissos ope restaurare secunda.
 labi hominis, servare Dei est: meritis perit iste, 665
 ille abolet pereuntis opus meritumque resolvit, argumentum ingens Dominum, qui talia praestet, nolle malum nec, quod post abluit, ante probare.
 " invitone aliquis potis est peccare Tonante, cui facile est in corde hominis componere sensus 670 quos libeat, fibrasque omnes animare pudicis pulsibus et totum venis infundere honestum? " nescis, stulte, tuae vim libertatis ab ipso formatore datam? nescis ab origine quanta sit concessa tibi famulo super orbe potestas, 675 et super ingenio proprio laxaeque soluto

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

abolish, but allows to riot unchecked." Destroy my ears, bountiful Father, stop up the passages of my head and let it lose its sense, ere their windings take up such sounds and give them access; to annihilate the function of life in a part of my brain and lose it utterly is not too high a price, if only my soul, thanks to a dulled ear, has the blessedness to keep itself immune and free from hearing impiety. What man, remembering that it is the divine grace that has given him the rank in which he surpasses all other creatures, would bear to have such insults hurled against God? To pass over many things, God is proved good even by the mere fact that though men were cut off by their love of what was forbidden He raises them from the grave and bids them be partakers of his kingdom for ever. If He were the author and maintainer of evil, He would never, after the loss of salvation and the death of sinners, have willed to bring healing and restoration and by his gracious help to reinstate the lost. To fall is of man, to save is of God. Man dies according to his desert; God wipes out the work of dying man and annuls his desert, a strong proof that the Lord who bestows such blessings does not will evil nor sanction beforehand that which He afterwards washes away. "Can one sin without the consent of the Thunderer, for whom it were easy to dispose whatsoever feelings He pleased in the heart of man, to endow all his tissues with pure impulses and pour nought but goodness into his veins?" Knowest thou not, thou fool, the strength of thine own liberty, given thee by the creator himself? Knowest thou not the greatness of the power that was granted to thee from the beginning over a world at thy service, and over thine own purpose and the

PRUDENTIUS

iure voluntatis, liceat cui velle sequique quod placitum, nullique animum subiungere vincolo?

an cum te dominum cunctis, quaecumque crearat,

praeficeret mundumque tuis servire iuberet 680 imperiis, cumque arva, polum, mare, flumina, ventos

dederet, arbitrium de te tibi credere avarus nollet ut indigno libertatemque negaret?
quale erat electus magni rex orbis ut esset non rex ipse sui, curto foedatus honore? 685 nam quis honos domini est, cuius mens libera non
est,

una sed inpositae servit sententia legi?
quae laus porro hominis vel quod meritum, sine certo

inter utramque viam discrimine vivere iuste?
non fit sponte bonus, cui non est prompta potestas 690
velle aliud flexosque animi convertere sensus.

atqui nec bonus est nec conlaudabilis ille qui non sponte bonus, quoniam probitate coacta gloria nulla venit sordetque ingloria virtus; nec tamen est virtus, ni deteriora refutans 695
emictet et meliore viam petat indole rectam.

“vade,” ait ipse parens opifexque et conditor Adae,

“vade, homo, adflatu nostri praenobilis oris, insubiecte, potens, rerum arbiter, arbiter idem et iudex mentis propriae, mihi subdere soli 700 sponte tua, quo sit subiectio et ipsa soluto libera iudicio. non cogo nec exigo per vim, sed moneo iniustum fugias iustumque sequaris.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

uncontrolled discretion of a free will, so that it may will and follow out its own determination, subjecting the spirit to no bondage? When God made thee lord over all his creation and bade the world be the servant of thy commands, when He gave up to thee land and sky and sea and streams and winds, would He grudge and refuse to entrust thee with control over thyself because He deemed thee unworthy of it, and deny thee freedom? What sort of honour had it been to have been chosen ruler of the great world but not ruler of oneself, bearing the slur of a privilege that was abridged? For what is the honour of a lord whose mind is not free, but whose will obeys a law imposed on it, and cannot vary? And what credit or merit belongs to man in living righteously if he has not to make a definite choice between two paths? A man does not become good of his own will if he has not the power in his discretion to will something else and to divert his sentiments into an opposite course. But he who is not good of his own will is not good nor praiseworthy, since no honour comes of uprightness that is forced, and virtue without honour has no worth; and after all it is not virtue unless it spring forth in the act of rejecting the worse and seek the right path because its nature is better. "Go," says Adam's very father and maker and creator, "go, O man, who art raised in rank above all by the breath of my mouth, not made subject but possessed of power, ruler of the world, ruler also and judge of thine own purpose, to me only be thou subject of thine own will, so that thy very subjection may be freely made with unfettered judgment. I force thee not nor constrain thee, but I counsel thee to shun unrighteousness and follow after righteous-lux comes est iusti, comes est mors horrida iniqui.

PRUDENTIUS

 elige rem vitae; tua virtus temet in aevum 705
 provehat, aeternum damnet tua culpa vicissim, praestet et alterutram permissa licentia sortem.”
 hac pietate vagus et tanto munere abundans, transit propositum fas et letalia prudens eligit atque volens, magis utile dum sibi credit 710 quod prohibente Deo persuasit callidus anguis.
 persuasit certe hortatu, non inpulit acri imperio; hoc mulier rea criminis exprobranti respondit Domino, suadelis se malefabris inlectam suasisse viro; vir et ipse libenter 715 consensit. licuitne hortantem spernere recti libertate animi? licuit; namque et Deus ante suaserat ut meliora volens sequeretur; at ille spernens consilium saevo plus credidit hosti.
 nunc inter vitae Dominum mortisque magistrum 720 consistit medius; vocat hinc Deus, inde tyrannus ambiguum atque suis se motibus alternantem.
 accipe gestarum monumenta insignia rerum, praelusit quibus historia spectabile signum.
 Loth fugiens Sodomis ardentibus omnia secum 725 pignera cara domus properabat sede relicta nubibus urbicremis subducere, sulphure cum iam nimboso ignitus coelum subtexeret aër flagrantemque diem crepitans incenderet imber.
 angelus hanc hospes legem praescripserat ollis 730 emissus virtute Dei sub imagine dupla,

^a Cf. Genesis xix, 1.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

ness. Light is the companion of righteousness, death the dread companion of wrong-doing. Choose the way of life; thy goodness must promote thee to eternity, thy sin, again, for ever condemn thee; liberty is in thy hands to assure either fate." Thus allowed by God's goodness to go his own way, and amply enriched with this great gift, he transgresses the right that is set before him and knowingly, of his own will, chooses the things of death, believing that to be more profitable to him which the cunning serpent has persuaded him to do against the will of God. The serpent did indeed persuade by urging, not drive with sharp behest; the woman's answer to God's reproach, when she stood accused of the sin, was that she was won over by crafty persuasions and then urged the man; and the man also readily agreed. Might he not have rejected her urging, in the freedom of an upright soul? He might, for God too had before urged him to follow after the better of his own will; but he, rejecting the counsel, trusted more in his cruel enemy. Now he stands between the Lord of life and the teacher of death. On the one hand God calls him, on the other the devil, the while he wavers and goes from side to side.

Listen now to a famous record of events whereby history has given beforehand a notable sign. Lot was seeking in hurried flight from blazing Sodom, where he had abandoned his home, to save himself and all the dear ones of his house from the storm that was consuming the city with fire. Already the air was glowing red and veiling the sky with sulphurous clouds, and a rattling rain was kindling the day into flames. An angel visitor sent forth by the power of God in twofold shape ^a had laid down for them this

PRUDENTIUS

omnis ut e portis iret domus atque in apertum dirigeret constans oculos, nec pone reflexo lumine regnantes per moenia cerneret ignes :
 " nemo, memor Sodomae, quae mundi forma cremandi est, 735
 ut semel e muris gressum promoverit, ore post tergum verso respectet funera rerum."

Loth monitis sapiens obtemperat, at levis uxor mobilitate animi torsit muliebre retrorsus ingenium Sodomisque suis revocabilis haesit. 740 traxerat Eva virum dirae ad consortia culpae :
 haec peccans sibi sola perit ; solidata metallo dirigit fragili saxumque liquabile facta stat mulier, sicut steterat prius, omnia servans caute sigillati longum salis effigiata, 745 et decus et cultum frontemque oculosque co-mamque
 et flexam in tergum faciem paulumque relata menta retro, antiquae monumenta rigentia noxae.
 liquitur illa quidem salsis sudoribus uda,
 sed nulla ex fluido plenae dispendia formae 750 sentit deliquio, quantumque armenta saporum attenuant saxum, tantum lambentibus umor sufficit attritamque cutem per damna reformat.
 hoc meruit titulo peccatrix femina sisti, infirmum fluidumque animum per lubrica solvens 755
 consilia et fragilis iussa ad caelestia. voti

* On Jebel Usdum (" the mountain of Sodom "), a range of rock-salt cliffs at the S.W. end of the Dead Sea, large fragments sometimes detach themselves and appear as " pillars of salt " (S. R. Driver in Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible). Josephus (Jewish Antiquities, I, 204) says that the pillar into which Lot's wife was turned still existed in his day and that he had seen it. According to C. Geikie (The rule, that all the household go forth from the gates and keep their eyes unswervingly on the open country, nor turn their gaze back to see the fires that were lording it over the city: "Let no one think of Sodom, which is the prefiguration of the burning of the world, and, when once he has stepped from the walls, turn his face back to look upon the death of all things." Lot, being wise, obeyed the warning, but his light-minded wife with unsteady purpose, like a woman, turned her thoughts backwards, and hearing the call of her dear Sodom, cleaved to it. Eve had drawn her husband into partnership in an accursed fault, but this woman by her sin brought death on herself alone. She stiffened in a solid mass of wasting stone; turned into soluble rock she stands there a woman still, as she had stood before, preserving every detail modelled in a pillar of salt that has long borne her image, her graceful form, her dress, brow and eyes and hair, her face turned to look behind, the chin carried slightly backwards, a stiff memorial of an ancient sin.^a Her wet figure dissolves, indeed, in salt sweats, but she suffers no loss to her full form from the waste that drips away; and however much the cattle wear away the savoury rock, there is always as much moisture for them to lick, and she grows again the skin that is rubbed off and lost. Such is the memorial statue earned by a woman who sinned, for she let her weak, unstable resolution melt away in slippery courses and had no firm constancy to keep heaven's commands. Lot on the Holy Land and the Bible) one pillar still bears among the Arabs the name of "Lot's Wife." Prudentius may have derived details of his description from a picture which he had seen in some church.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

PRUDENTIUS

propositum contra non conmutabile servat Loth ingressus iter, nec moenia respicit alto in cinerem conlapsa rogo, populumque perustum et mores populi, tabularia, iura forumque, 760 balnea, propolas, meritoria, templa, theatra, et circum cum plebe sua, madidasque popinas.
 quidquid agunt homines Sodomorum incendia iustis ignibus involvunt et Christo iudice damnant.
 haec fugisse semel satis est; non respicit ultra 765 Loth noster, fragilis sed coniunx respicit, et quae fugerat inverso mutabilis ore revisit, atque inter patrias perstat durata favillas.
 en tibi signatum libertatis documentum, quo voluit nos scire Deus, quodcumque sequen-dum est, 770
 sub nostra dicione situm, passimque remissum alterutram calcare viam. duo cedere iussi de Sodomis; alter se proripit, altera mussat, ille gradum celerat fugiens, contra illa renutat.
 liber utrique animus, sed dispar utrique voluntas. 775 dividit huc illuc rapiens sua quemque libido.
 talem multa sacris speciem notat orbita libris.
 aspice Ruth gentis Moabitidis et simul Orphan.
 illa socrum Noomin¹ fido comitatur amore, deserit haec. atquin thalamis et lege iugali 780 exutae Hebraeisque toris sacrisque vacantes iure fruebantur proprio. sed pristinus Orphae fanorum ritus praeputia barbara suasit malle et semiferi stirpem nutrire Goliae;
 Ruth dum per stipulas agresti amburitur aestu, 785

¹ The spelling -oo- is found as a variant in the Septuagint.

^a In Jewish legend Orpah appears as the mother of Goliath (Ginzberg, Legends of the Jews, IV, 31).

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

other hand kept his purpose unchanged once he started on his way, and cast no thought back to the city which had fallen in a heap of ashes like a lofty funeral-pyre, or to its consumed people and its people's life, its archives, courts and market-place, its baths, its hucksters' stalls, its brothels and temples and theatres, its circus and the masses that thronged it, and its drunken cookshops. The flames of Sodom enwrap all the concerns of men in righteous fire and condemn them under the judgment of Christ. To have escaped all this once is enough; our good Lot casts no glance back again; but his frail wife does glance back; in her inconstancy she turns her face and looks again on what she had fled from, and now she stands petrified amid the embers of her homeland. In that figure you have a proof of freedom, whereby God willed that we should know that the course we are to take lies in our own discretion and we are everywhere free to tread either path. Two were bidden to leave Sodom; one hastens away, the other falters; one quickens his step in flight, the other refuses. Each has freedom of will, but each wills differently. Men are carried separate ways each by his own free choice. Many a line in the Scriptures records examples of this. Consider Ruth, of the race of Moab, together with Orpah. The one accompanies Naomi her mother-in-law with faithful affection, the other leaves her. Now they were no longer bound by their marriages and the law of wedlock, they were rid of Hebrew bridal and rite, and independent; but the old religion of her temples urged Orpah to prefer an uncircumcised barbarian and to raise a monstrous scion in Goliath,^a while Ruth, burning under the heat in the field as she went

PRUDENTIUS

fulcra Boos ¹ meruit, castoque adscita cubili Christigenam fecunda domum, Davitica regna, edidit atque Deo mortales miscuit ortus.
 saepe egomet memini fratres geminos ad hiulcum pervenisse simul bivium nutante iuventa 790 et dubitasse diu bifido sub tramite, quodnam esset iter melius; cum dextrum spinea silva sentibus artaret scopulosaque semita longe duceret aërium clivoso margine callem, at laevum nemus umbriferum per amoena virecta 795 ditibus ornaret pomis et lene iacentem planities daret ampla viam: squalentibus unum contentum spinis reptasse per ardua saxa, porro alium campo sese indulsisse sinistro;
 illum sideribus caput inmiscere propinquis, 800
 hunc in caenosas subito cecidisse paludes.
 omnibus una subest natura, sed exitus omnes non unus peragit placitorum segrege forma.
 haud secus ac si olim per sudum lactea forte lapsa columbarum nubes descendat in arvum 805 ruris frugiferi, laqueos ubi callidus auceps praetendit lentoque inlevit vimina visco, sparsit et insidias siliquis vel farre doloso, inliciunt alias fallentia grana, gulamque innectunt avidam tortae retinacula saetae, 810 molle vel implicitas gluten circumligat alas, ast aliae, quas nullus amor prolectat edendi, gressibus innocuis sterili spatiantur in herba suspectamque cavent oculos convertere ad escam; mox ubi iam caelo revolandum, pars petit aethram 815

¹ -oo- in the Septuagint and Vulgate. Cf. Matthew i, 5.

^a Ruth iv, 17; Matthew i, 5-16.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

over the stubble, proved herself worthy of the hand of Boaz, and being taken in pure wedlock she conceived and gave birth to the family of Christ, David's royal line, and numbered God along with her mortal descendants.^a I myself remember when often two brothers together in youthful indecision have come where the road split in two and hesitated long at the forks, wondering which path was the better; for on the right a prickly forest of briars narrowed the track and the rocky footpath traced its mounting course far up along a precipitous ridge, while on the left shady trees along fair greensward beautified the scene with rich fruits and a wide plain offered a gently descending highway. One was content with the rough thorns and crept along the lofty rocks; the other, again, gave his heart to the plain on the left. The one set his head in close proximity to the stars, but the other fell suddenly into miry bogs. There is in all the same nature, but the same end does not complete the course of all, because their decisions take different shapes. Just as at times it chances that a milk-white cloud of doves floats down to the ground through the clear air in a rich countryside, where a cunning fowler has laid snares and smeared twigs with clinging bird-lime and sprinkled peas or treacherous meal to bait his traps, and some are tempted by the deceptive grains and their greedy throats are caught and held by the twisted hair-cord, or the soft glue grips their wings and binds them fast about them, but others, not enticed by love of eating, strut about unharmed on the bare grass and take care not to turn their eyes towards the suspicious food; and then, when it is time to fly back into the sky, some make for the starry heavens libera sideream plaudens super aëra pinnis, pars captiva iacet laceris et saucia plumis pugnat humi et volucres nequiquam suspicit

PRUDENTIUS

 auras;

sic animas caeli de fontibus unicoloras infundit natura solo, sed suavis istic 820

devinctae inlecebris retinentur, et aethera paucae conscendunt reduces, multas viscosus inescat pastus et ad superas percurrere non sinit auras.

praescius inde Pater liventia Tartara plumbo incendit liquido piceasque bitumine fossas 825

infernalis aquae furvo subfodit Averno, et Phlegethonteo sub gurgite sanxit edaces perpetuis scelerum poenis inolescere vermes.

norat enim flatu ex proprio vegetamen inesse corporibus nostris animamque ex ore perenni 830

formatam non posse mori, non posse vicissim pollutam vitiis rursum ad convexa reverti mersandam penitus puteo ferventis abyssi.

vermibus et flammis et discruciatibus aevum inmortale dedit, senio ne poena periret 835

non pereunte anima. carpunt tormenta foventque

materiam sine fine datam, mors deserit ipsa aeternos gemitus et flentes vivere cogit.

at diversa procul regionibus in paradisi praemia constituit maiestas gnara futuri 840

spiritibus puris et ab omni labe remotis, quique Gomorraeas non respexere ruinas, aversis sed rite oculis post terga tenebras liquerunt miseri properanda pericula mundi.

ac primum facili referuntur ad astra volatu, 845

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

at liberty, clapping their wings far up in the air, while others lie prisoners, hurt and struggling on the ground with their feathers torn, and looking up in vain towards the flying breezes: so nature from their source in heaven pours on earth souls of one complexion, but they are caught and held there by agreeable temptations and few ascend again to heaven, while many are entrapped by clinging food which does not let them fly to the breezes above. Therefore the Father, having foreknowledge, lit the fires of Tartarus dark-hued with molten lead, and in gloomy Avernus dug channels for the pitchy bituminous streams of hell, and down in Phlegethon's gulf ordained that gnawing worms indwell for the everlasting punishment of sin. For He knew that the life in our bodies came from his breath, and that the soul that had its being from the everlasting lips could not die, nor again could it return once more to heaven when it was polluted with sin, but must be plunged in the depths of the burning pit. To worms and flames and tortures He gave deathless endurance, so that the punishment should not die away through length of years while the soul never died. The torments keep alive, while they consume it, the stuff that is given them without limit of time. Death itself turns its back on the everlasting lamentations and compels the weeping victims to live. But far away in the regions of paradise God's provident majesty has set rewards for spirits that are pure and free from every stain, that have not looked back on the ruins of Gomorrah, but with eyes faithfully turned away have left behind them the darkness that portends the wretched world's peril soon to come. And first they pass again with easy flight to the unde fluens anima structum vegetaverat Adam.

PRUDENTIUS

 nam quia naturam tenuem declivia vitae pondera non reprimunt nec tardat ferrea conpes, concretum celeri relegens secat aëra lapsu exsuperatque polum fervens scintilla remensum, 850 carcereos exosa situs, quibus haeserat exul.
 tunc postliminio redeuntem suscipit alto cana Fides gremio tenerisque oblectat alumnam deliciis, multos post divorsoria carnis ore renarrantem querulo, quos passa, labores. 855 illic purpureo latus exporrecta cubili floribus aeternis spirantes libat odores ambrosiumque bibit roseo de stramine rorem, ditibus et longo fumantibus intervallo fluminaque et totos caeli sitientibus imbres 860 inplorata negat digitum insertare palato, flammarumque apices umentis extingueret tactu.
 nec mirere locis longe distantibus inter damnatas iustasque animas concurrere visus conspicuos meritasque vices per magna notari 865 intervalla, polus medio quae dividit orbe.
 errat, quisque animas nostrorum fine oculorum aestimat, involvit vitreo quos lucida palla obice, quis speculum concreta coagula texunt inpediuntque vagas obducto umore fenestras. 870 numne animarum oculis denso vegetamine guttae volvuntur teretes aut palpebralibus extra horrescunt saetis, ciliove umbrante teguntur?
 illis viva acies, nec pupula parva, sed ignis

^a Cf. Luke xvi, 19-26.

^b I.e. the site of hell.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

heavens from whence flowed the soul that quickened Adam when he was created; for because the down-bearing weights of life do not check its subtle nature, nor iron fetter impede it, the glowing spark cuts its way again through the thick air with rapid course and leaves the skies behind it in its return, hating the place of its imprisonment, where it had been confined far from its home. Then as the exiled soul returns to be reinstated in her heavenly country, hoary Faith receives her in her bosom and comforts her nursling with tender fondness while with plaintive voice she tells over the many toils she has endured since she took up her lodging in the flesh. There, stretched on a shining couch, she enjoys the scents that breathe from unfading flowers and drinks the ambrosial dew from her bed of roses, and refuses the prayer of the rich men burning afar off and thirsting for rivers of water and all the rain of heaven, to put her finger in their mouths and quench the tips of the flames with its moist touch.^a Nor should you wonder that, although the damned souls and the just are far separated, they can see each other clearly and observe the fate that each has earned, across the great spaces that lie between heaven and the centre of the earth.^b He errs who judges souls by the limit of our eyes, which are wrapped in a transparent tunic that makes a glassy barrier, and in which a thickened humour forms a mirror and with its coating of fluid impedes the freedom of their outlook. From souls' eyes do round drops roll in gushing showers? Do they have rough, bristly eyelashes outside them, or are they shaded with a covering lid? Theirs is a lively vision; they have not a small pupil but a fire that can pierce the mists and

PRUDENTIUS

traiector nebulae vasti et penetrator operti est.	875
nil ferrugineum solidumve tuentibus obstat, nocturnae cedunt nebulae, nigrantia cedunt nubila, praetenti cedit teres area mundi. nec tantum aërios visu transmittit hiatus spiritus, oppositos sed transit lumine montes,	880
oceani fines atque ultima littora Thylae transadigit volucresque oculos in Tartara mittit. nostris nempe omnes pereunt sub nocte colores visibus et caeco delentur tempore formae. numquid et exuti membris ac viscere perdunt	885
agnitione notas rerum, vel gressibus errant? una animas semper facies habet et color unus aëris, ut cuique est meritorum summa, sinistri seu dextri: alternas nec commutabile tempus convertit variatque vices; longum atque perenne est	890
quidquid id est, unus volvit sua saecula cursus. expertus dubitas animas percurrere visu abditā corporeis oculis, cum saepe quietis rore soporatis cernat mens viva remotos distantesque locos, aciem per rura, per astra,	895
per maria intendens? nec enim se segregat ipsa ante obitum vivis ex artubus aut fugit exul sanguinis et carnis penetralia seque medullis exuit abductamve abigit de pectore vitam, viscerea sed sede manens speculatur acutis	900
omnia luminibus et, qua circumtulit acrem naturae levis intuitum nullo obice rerum disclusa, ante oculos subiectum prospicit orbem

^a Cf. Matthew xxv, 31-41.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

penetrate the waste of darkness. Nothing obscure or material blocks their gaze; the mists of night give way to them, as do black clouds and the whole round extent of the universe that spreads before them. And not only does the spirit with its vision cross the open spaces of the air; its sight passes through mountains that stand in its way, it pierces to the limits of ocean and the shores of Thule at the end of the earth, and sends its quick glance into hell. For our sight, to be sure, all colours are lost in the night and all shapes destroyed in the hours of darkness. But do those too, who have put off the body and the flesh, lose any of their power to recognise the features of things, or go astray in their steps? Ever the same in look, the same in hue, is the atmosphere about souls, on the right or on the left^a according to the sum of each one's deserts; no change of time brings alternation or variance in their lot; whatever it is, it lasts for long, it lasts for ever; the same course runs through ages all its own. Do you doubt that souls traverse with their vision things hidden from bodily eyes, when you know by experience how many a time, when we are sunk in unconsciousness by the dew of sleep, the lively mind sees places far away and far sundered, directing its eyes over fields and stars and seas? For it does not separate itself before death from the living members, nor banish itself from its home within the flesh and blood, withdrawing from our inmost parts and reaving the life from our breast; but while remaining in its fleshly abode it explores all things with its keen sight, and turning hither and thither the sharp gaze of its subtle nature, not shut off by any barrier of material things, it views the world that lies before its eyes, and atque orbis sub mole situm sordens elementum.

PRUDENTIUS

 obiacet interea tellus nec visibus obstat. 905
 quin si stelligerum vultus convertat ad axem, nil intercurrentis obtutibus inpedit ignem pervigilis animae, quamvis denseta graventur nubila et opposito nigrescat vellere caelum.
 sic arcana videt tacitis cooperta futuris 910 corporeus Iohannis adhuc nec carne solutus, munere sed somni paulisper carne sequestra liber ad intuitum sensuque oculisque peragrans ordine dispositos venturis solibus annos.
 procinctum videt angelicum iam iamque crem-andi 915
 orbis in excidium, tristes ¹ et percipit aëre mugitus gravium mundi sub fine tubarum.
 hæc ille ante obitum membrorum carcere saeptus,
 secedente anima, non discedente videbat.
 nonne magis flatus sine corpore cuncta notabit 920 corporis involucris tumulto frigente repostis?
 certa fides rapidos subterna nocte caminos, qui pollutam animam per saecula longa perenni igne coquunt, oculis longum per inane remoti pauperis expositos; nec setius aurea dona 925 iustorum dirimente chao rutilasque coronas eminus ostendi poenarum carcere mersis.
 hinc paradisi colae post ulcera dira beato proditur infelix ululans in peste reatus spiritus inque vicem meritorum mutua cernunt. 930

¹ So both the oldest MSS. Others have raucos.

^a Cf. Luke xvi, 19-26.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

even the dirty earth down in the world's great mass. And all the while the earth stands in its way, yet does not impede its vision. Indeed should it turn its face towards the starry heavens, nothing coming in the way of its eyes checks the flame of the sleepless soul, even though thick-gathered clouds lower and the sky wear a blanket of darkness before it. It is thus that John sees mysteries hidden in the silence of the future while he is yet in the body and not delivered from the flesh but, by the grace of sleep through the medium of the flesh, free for a while to observe, and with discerning eyes travels through time in the settled order of years to come. He sees the angels arrayed in readiness for the destruction of a world doomed presently to be consumed with fire, and hears the dread bray of the stern trumpets at the last day. These things he saw before his death, when still shut up in the prison-house of the body, while his soul separated itself but did not depart. Shall not the spirit all the more without the body observe all things, when its bodily wrappings are laid in the cold grave? It is a sure belief that the consuming furnaces in the nether darkness, that torment the defiled soul through long ages with unending fire, are before the poor man's eyes though he is far off over the length of space, and in the same way the flashing crowns that are the golden prizes of the righteous, though the gulf separate them, are displayed from afar to the souls that are plunged in the prison-house of punishment. So it is that to the dweller in paradise, blessed now, his fearful sores all ended, is revealed the unhappy spirit wailing under the bane of guilt, and they each see the reward of the other's deserts.^a

PRUDENTIUS

o Dee cunctiparens, animae dator, o Dee Christe,

cuius ab ore Deus subsistit Spiritus unus, te moderante regor, te vitam principe duco, iudice te pallens trepido, te iudice eodem spem capio fore quidquid ago veniabile apud te, 935 quamlibet indignum venia faciamque loquarque.
confiteor; dimitte libens et parce fatenti.
omne malum merui, sed tu bonus arbiter aufer quod merui; meliora favens largire precanti dona animae quandoque meae, cum corporis huius 940

liquerit hospitium nervis, cute, sanguine, felle, ossibus exstructum, corrupta quod incola luxu heu nimium complexa fovet, cum flebilis hora clauserit hos orbes, et conclamata iacebit materies oculisque suis mens nuda fruetur, 945 ne cernat truculentum aliquem de gente latronum inmitem, rabidum, vultuque et voce minaci terribilem, qui me maculosum aspergine morum in praeceps, ut praedo, trahat nigrisque ruentem inmergat specubus, cuncta exacturus ad usque 950 quadrantem minimum damnosae debita vitae.
multa in thensauris Patris est habitatio, Christe, disparibus discreta locis. non posco beata in regione domum; sint illic casta virorum agmina, pulvereum quae dedignantia censum 955 divitias petiere tuas, sit flore perenni candida virginitas animum castrata recisum.
at mihi Tartarei satis est si nulla ministri occurrat facies, avidae nec flamma gehennae

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

O God, the Father of all and giver of the soul, O God Christ, from whose mouth proceeds the Spirit, God in unity, by thy governance I am directed, under thy leadership do I live my life, under thy judgment I pale and tremble, under thy judgment too I take hope that what I do will find pardon with Thee, however unworthy of pardon be my act or speech. I confess my sin; be Thou ready to forgive me and spare the confessor. I have deserved all ill, but do Thou, who art a kindly judge, take away my desert and in gracious answer to my soul's prayer bestow better gifts one day upon it, when it shall have left behind this bodily lodging built up of sinews, skin, blood, gall, bones, to which its indweller, corrupted with indulgence, clings, alas! too fondly, and when the doleful hour shall have closed these eyes and the material body shall lie dead and the bared soul have the use of its natural vision, that what it sees be not one of the race of robbers, fierce, ruthless, raging, with frightful, threatening look and voice, that shall drag me down headlong, as a brigand his captive, spotted as I am with the stains of my conduct, and send me plunging into black caverns, there to exact from me to the last farthing all that is due for my wasteful life. Many dwellings are there in the Father's treasure-city, O Christ, and set apart on sites that differ. I do not ask for a home in the region of the blessed. There let the companies of pure men dwell who have disdained earthly possessions and sought after thy riches, and the unspotted virgins whose flower has never faded and who have cut off the appetites of the heart. Enough for me if the features of no minister of hell meet me, and this soul of mine be not plunged in the depths of

PRUDENTIUS

devoret hanc animam mersam fornacibus imis. 960 esto, cavernoso, quia sic pro labe necesse est corporea, tristis me sorbeat ignis Averno :
saltem mitificos incendia lenta vapores exhalent aestuque calor languente tepescat ;
lux immensa alios et tempora vincta coronis 965 glorificent : me poena levis clementer adurat.

THE ORIGIN OF SIN

the furnaces and devoured by the flames of greedy Gehenna. And let it be that the grim fire swallow me in the chasm of Avernus because for my bodily stain it must needs be so ; yet at least may the flames be gentle and the heat of their breath be mild, may their fury die down and their burning moderate. Let others enjoy the glory of infinite light and crown-encircled brows : as for me, may my punishment be light, my torment merciful.

PSYCHOMACHIA

PRAEFATIO

SENEX fidelis prima credendi via Abram, beati seminis serus pater, adiecta cuius nomen auxit syllaba, Abram parenti dictus, Abraham Deo, senile pignus qui dicavit victimae, 5 docens ad aram cum litare quis velit, quod dulce cordi, quod pium, quod únicum Deo libenter offerendum credito, pugnare nosmet cum profanis gentibus suasit, suumque suasor exemplum dedit, 10 nec ante prolem coniugalem gignere Deo placentem, matre Virtute editam, quam strage multa bellicosus spiritus portenta cordis servientis vicerit.
victum feroces forte reges ceperant 15
Loth inmorantem criminosi urbibus Sodomae et Gomorrae, quas fovebat advena pollens honore patruelis gloriae.
Abram sinistris excitatus nuntiis audit propinquum sorte captum bellica 20 servire duris barbarorum vinculis :
armat trecentos terque senos vernulas,
pergant ut hostis terga euntis caedere,

^a Genesis xvii, 5.

^b Genesis xiv.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

PREFACE

THE faithful patriarch who first showed the way of believing, Abram, late in life the father of a blessed progeny, whose name was lengthened by a syllable (for he was called Abram by his father, but Abraham ^a by God), he who offered in sacrifice the child of his old age, teaching us thereby that when a man would make an acceptable offering at the altar he must willingly and with faith in God offer to Him that which is dear to his heart and the object of his love, that of which he has but one, has counselled us to war against the ungodly tribes, himself giving us an example of his own counsel, and shown that we beget no child of wedlock pleasing to God, and whose mother is Virtue, till the spirit, battling valorously, has overcome with great slaughter the monsters in the enslaved heart. It chanced that insolent kings overcame Lot and took him captive ^b when he was dwelling in the wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, to which he clung and where, though but an immigrant, he was a great man because of the honour paid to his uncle's fame. Called by a bearer of the evil tidings, Abram learns that his kinsman, by the fortune of war, has been taken and put into subjection to hard bondage under the barbarians. He arms three hundred and eighteen servants born in his house, to pursue the enemy and slay them on their

PRUDENTIUS

quem gaza dives ac triumphus nobilis captis tenebant ineditum copiis.	25
quin ipse ferrum stringit et plenus Deo reges superbos mole praedarum graves pellit fugatos, sauciatos proterit, frangit catenas et rapinam liberat :
aurum, puellas, parvulos, monilia, greges ¹ equarum, vasa, vestem, buculas.	30
Loth ipse ruptis expeditus nexibus attrita bacis colla liber erigit. Abram triumphi dissipator hostici redit recepta prole fratris inclytus	35
ne quam fidelis sanguinis prosapiam vis pessimorum possideret principum. adhuc recentem caede de tanta virum donat sacerdos ferculis caelestibus, Dei sacerdos, rex et idem praepotens, origo cuius fonte inenarrabili secreta nullum prodit auctorem sui, ² Melchisedech, qua stirpe, quis maioribus ignotus, uni cognitus tantum Deo.	40
mox et triformis angelorum trinitas senis revisit hospitis mapalia, et iam vietam Sarra in alvum fertilis munus iuventae mater exsanguis stupet, herede gaudens, et cachinni paenitens.
haec ad figuram praenotata est linea, quam nostra recto vita resculpat pede :	50
vigilandum in armis pectorum fidelium,

¹ Bergman, following the 6th-century MS., prints oves, equarum vasa, interpreting vasa as = ornaments. Bardy conjectures aquarum vasa.

² Lines 41 and 42 are not found in A (6th century), though they are in B (7th century), and Bergman brackets them as

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

march, encumbered as they are and slowed down by the rich treasure of the great spoils their glorious victory has won. He himself, too, draws the sword and, being filled with the spirit of God, drives off in flight those proud kings, weighed down with their booty, or cuts them down and tramples them under foot. He breaks the bonds and looses the plunder—gold, maidens, little children, strings of jewels, herds of mares, vessels, raiment, cattle. Lot himself, set at liberty by the bursting of his chains, straightens his neck in freedom, where the links had chafed. Abram, having scattered his enemies' triumph, returns in the glory of recovering his brother's son so that wicked kings should not keep a descendant of the faithful stock under their violent power. To the warrior fresh from this great slaughter the priest presents heavenly food, the priest of God, himself also a mighty king, whose mysterious birth from a source that cannot be named has no ostensible author—Melchisedec, whose line and forefathers no man knows, for they are known to God alone.^a Then also a triad of angels in the form of three persons visits the old man's cabin, and he entertains them; and Sara, conceiving, is amazed to find the function of youth come to her aged womb, becoming a mother when she has passed her time, and she rejoices in an heir, and repents of her laughter.^b This picture has been drawn beforehand to be a model for our life to trace out again with true measure, showing that we must watch in the armour of faithful hearts, and interpolated. They correspond to line 60 in the parallel between Melchisedec and Christ.

^a Genesis xiv, 18; Hebrews vii, 1-3.

^b Genesis xviii, 1-15.

PRUDENTIUS

omnemque nostri portionem corporis, quae capta foedae serviat libidini, domi coactis liberandam viribus ; 55 nos esse large vernularum divites, si quid trecenti bis novenis additis possint figura noverimus mystica.
 mox ipse Christus, qui sacerdos verus est, parente inenarrabili atque uno satus,¹ 60 cibum beatis offerens victoribus parvam pudici cordis intrabit casam, monstrans honorem Trinitatis hospitae.
 animam deinde Spiritus complexibus pie maritam, prolis expertem diu, 65 faciet perenni fertilem de semine, tunc sera dotem possidens puerpera herede digno Patris implebit domum.

CHRISTE, graves hominum semper miserate labores, qui patria virtute cluis propriaque, sed una, (unum namque Deum colimus de nomine utroque, non tamen et solum, quia tu Deus ex Patre, Christe,)

dissere, rex noster, quo milite pellere culpas 5 mens armata queat nostri de pectoris antro, exoritur quotiens turbatis sensibus intus seditio atque animam morborum rixa fatigat, quod tunc praesidium pro libertate tuenda quaeve acies furiis inter praecordia mixtis 10 obsistat meliore manu. nec enim, bone ductor,

¹ A and B have parente natus alto et ineffabili, which is metrically faulty. The line in the text too is abnormal.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

that every part of our body which is in captivity and enslaved to foul desire must be set free by gathering our forces at home; that we are abundantly rich in servants born in the house if we know through the mystic symbol what is the power of three hundred with eighteen more.^a Then Christ himself, who is the true priest,^b born of a Father unutterable and one, bringing food for the blessed victors, will enter the humble abode of the pure heart and give it the privilege of entertaining the Trinity; and then the Spirit, embracing in holy marriage the soul that has long been childless, will make her fertile by the seed eternal, and the dowered bride will become a mother late in life and give the Father's household a worthy heir.

Christ, who hast ever had compassion on the heavy distresses of men, who art glorious in renown for thy Father's power and thine own—but one power, for it is one God that we worship under the two names; yet not merely one, since Thou, O Christ, art God born of the Father—say, our King, with what fighting force the soul is furnished and enabled to expel the sins from within our breast; when there is disorder among our thoughts and rebellion arises within us, when the strife of our evil passions vexes the spirit, say what help there is then to guard her liberty, what array with superior force withstands the fiendish raging in our heart. For, O kind leader, Thou

^a The Greek letters TIH represent 318; but they are also a symbol of Christ crucified, T representing the cross, while IH are the first two letters of the name Jesus (ΙΗΣΟΥΣ).

^b Cf. Psalm 110, 4.

PRUDENTIUS

magnarum Virtutum inopes nervisque carentes Christicolas Vitiis populantibus exposuisti.
ipse salutiferas obsesso in corpore turmas depugnare iubes, ipse excellentibus armas 15 artibus ingenium, quibus ad ludibria cordis oppugnanda potens tibi dimicet et tibi vincat.
vincendi praesens ratio est, si comminus ipsas Virtutum facies et conluctantia contra viribus infestis liceat portenta notare. 20

prima petit campum dubia sub sorte duelli pugnatura Fides, agresti turbida cultu, nuda umeros, intonsa comas, exerta lacertos;
namque repentinus laudis calor ad nova fervens proelia nec telis meminit nec tegmine cingi, 25 pectore sed fidens valido membrisque relectis provocat insani frangenda pericula belli.
ecce lacescentem conlatis viribus audet prima ferire Fidem Veterum Cultura Deorum.
illa hostile caput phalerataque tempora vittis 30 altior insurgens labefactat, et ora cruore de pecudum satiata solo adplicat et pede calcat elisos in morte oculos, animamque malignam fracta intercepti commercia gutturis artant, difficilemque obitum suspiria longa fatigant. 35 exultat victrix legio, quam mille coactam martyribus regina Fides animarat in hostem.
nunc fortes socios parta pro laude coronat floribus ardentique iubet vestirier ostro.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

hast not exposed the followers of Christ to the ravages of the Sins without the help of great Virtues or devoid of strength. Thou thyself dost command relieving squadrons to fight the battle in the body close beset, Thou thyself dost arm the spirit with pre-eminent kinds of skill whereby it can be strong to attack the wantonness in the heart and fight for Thee, conquer for Thee. The way of victory is before our eyes if we may mark at close quarters the very features of the Virtues, and the monsters that close with them in deadly struggle.

Faith first takes the field to face the doubtful chances of battle, her rough dress disordered, her shoulders bare, her hair untrimmed, her arms exposed; for the sudden glow of ambition, burning to enter fresh contests, takes no thought to gird on arms or armour, but trusting in a stout heart and unprotected limbs challenges the hazards of furious warfare, meaning to break them down. Lo, first Worship-of-the-Old-Gods ventures to match her strength against Faith's challenge and strike at her. But she, rising higher, smites her foe's head down, with its fillet-decked brows, lays in the dust that mouth that was sated with the blood of beasts, and tramples the eyes under foot, squeezing them out in death. The throat is choked and the scant breath confined by the stopping of its passage, and long gasps make a hard and agonising death. Leaps for joy the conquering host which Faith, their queen, had assembled from a thousand martyrs and emboldened to face the foe; and now she crowns her brave comrades with flowers proportioned to the glory they have won, and bids them clothe themselves in flaming purple.

PRUDENTIUS

exim gramineo in campo concurrere prompta 40
 virgo Pudicitia speciosis fulget in armis, quam patrias succincta faces Sodomita Libido adgreditur piceamque ardenti sulphure pinum ingerit in faciem pudibundaque lumina flammis adpetit, et taetro temptat subfundere fumo. 45 sed dextram furiae flagrantis et ignea dirae tela lupae saxo ferit inperterrita virgo, excussasque sacro taedas depellit ab ore.
 tunc exarmatae iugulum meretricis adacto transfigit gladio; calidos vomit illa vapores 50 sanguine concretos caenoso; spiritus inde sordidus exhalans vicinas polluit auras.
 "hoc habet," exclamat victrix regina, "supremus hic tibi finis erit, semper prostrata iacebis, nec iam mortiferas audebis spargere flammis 55
 in famulos famulasve Dei, quibus intima casti vena animi sola fervet de lampade Christi.
 tene, o vexatrix hominum, potuisse resumptis viribus extincti capitis recalescere flatu, Assyrium postquam thalamum cervix Olofernis 60
 caesa cupidineo madefactum sanguine lavit, gemmantemque torum moechi ducis aspera Judith
 sprexit et incestos conpescuit ense furores, famosum mulier referens ex hoste tropaeum non trepidante manu vindex mea caelitus audax! 65
 at fortasse parum fortis matrona sub umbra legis adhuc pugnans, dum tempora nostra figurat, vera quibus virtus terrena in corpora fluxit grande per infirmos caput excisura ministros.
 numquid et intactae post partum virginis ullum 70

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

Next to step forth ready to engage on the grassy field is the maiden Chastity, shining in beauteous armour. On her falls Lust the Sodomite, girt with the fire-brands of her country, and thrusts into her face a torch of pinewood blazing murkily with pitch and burning sulphur, attacking her modest eyes with the flames and seeking to cover them with the foul smoke. But the maiden undismayed smites with a stone the inflamed fiend's hand and the cursed whore's burning weapon, striking the brand away from her holy face. Then with a sword-thrust she pierces the disarmed harlot's throat, and she spews out hot fumes with clots of foul blood, and the unclean breath defiles the air near by. "A hit!" cries the triumphant princess. "This shall be thy last end; for ever shalt thou lie prostrate; no longer shalt thou dare to cast thy deadly flames against God's man-servants or his maid-servants; the inmost fibre of their pure heart is kindled only from the torch of Christ. Shalt thou, O troubler of mankind, have been able to resume thy strength and grow warm again with the breath of life that was extinguished in thee, after the severed head of Holofernes soaked his Assyrian chamber with his lustful blood, and the unbending Judith, spurning the lecherous captain's jewelled couch, checked his unclean passion with the sword, and woman as she was, won a famous victory over the foe with no trembling hand, maintaining my cause with boldness heaven-inspired?" But perhaps a woman still fighting under the shade of the law had not force enough, though in so doing she prefigured our times, in which the real power has passed into earthly bodies to sever the fas tibi iam superest? post partum virginis, ex quo

PRUDENTIUS

corporis humani naturam pristina origo deseruit carnemque novam vis ardua sevit, atque innupta Deum concepit femina Christum, mortali de matre hominem, sed cum Patre numen. 75 inde omnis iam diva caro est quae concipit illum naturamque Dei consortis foedere sumit.

Verbum quippe caro factum non destitit esse quod fuerat, Verbum, dum carnis glutinat usum, maiestate quidem non degenerante per usum 80
carnis, sed miseros ad nobiliora trahente.

ille manet quod semper erat, quod non erat esse incipiens: nos quod fuimus iam non sumus, aucti nascendo in melius: mihi contulit et sibi mansit.
nec Deus ex nostris minuit sua, sed sua nostris 85
dum tribuit nosmet dona ad caelestia vexit.

dona haec sunt, quod victa iaces, lutulenta Libido, nec mea post Mariam potis es perfringere iura.
tu princeps ad mortis iter, tu ianua leti, corpora conmaculans animas in Tartara mergis. 90
abde caput tristi, iam frigida pestis, abyssu;
occide, prostibulum; manes pete, claudere

Averno,

inque tenebrosum noctis detrudere fundum.
te volvant subter vada flammea, te vada nigra sulpureusque rotet per stagna sonantia vertex, 95 nec iam Christicolas, furiarum maxima, temptes,

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

great head by the hands of feeble agents? Well, since a virgin immaculate has borne a child, hast thou any claim remaining—since a virgin bore a child, since the day when man's body lost its primeval nature, and power from on high created a new flesh, and a woman unwedded conceived the God Christ, who is man in virtue of his mortal mother but God along with the Father? From that day all flesh is divine, since it conceives Him and takes on the nature of God by a covenant of partnership. For the Word made flesh has not ceased to be what it was before, that is, the Word, by attaching to itself the experience of the flesh; its majesty is not lowered by the experience of the flesh, but raises wretched men to nobler things. He remains what He ever was, though beginning to be what He was not; but we are no longer what we were, now that we are raised at our birth into a better condition. He has given to me, yet still remained for Himself; neither has God lessened what is his by taking on what is ours, but by giving his nature to ours He has lifted us to the height of his heavenly gifts. It is his gift that thou liest conquered, filthy Lust, and canst not, since Mary, violate my authority. It is thou that ledest to the way of death, that art the gate of destruction, that dost stain our bodies and plunge our souls in hell. Bury thy head in the grim pit, thou bane now powerless. Death to thee, harlot, down with thee to the dead; be thou shut up in hell and thrust into the dark depths of night! May the rivers below roll thee on their waves of fire, the black rivers and the eddying sulphur whirl thee along their roaring streams. No more, thou chief of fiends, tempt thou the worshippers of Christ; let their cleansed bodies ut purgata suo serventur corpora regi."

PRUDENTIUS

 dixerat haec et laeta Libidinis interfectae morte Pudicitia gladium Iordanis in undis abluit infectum, sanies cui rore rubenti 100 haeserat et nitidum macularat vulnere ferrum.
 expiat ergo aciem fluviali docta lavacro victricem victrix, abolens baptisinate labem hostilis iuguli; nec iam contenta piatum condere vaginae gladium, ne tecta rubigo 105 occupet ablutum scabrosa sorde nitorem, catholico in templo divini fontis ad aram consecrat, aeterna splendens ubi luce coruscet.
 ecce modesta gravi stabat Patientia vultu per medias inmota acies variosque tumultus, 110 vulneraque et rigidis vitalia pervia pilis spectabat defixa oculos et lenta manebat.
 hanc procul Ira tumens, spumanti fervida rictu, sanguinea intorquens subfuso lumina felle, ut belli exsortem teloque et voce lacessit, 115 inpatiensque morae conto petit, increpat ore, hirsutas quatiens galeato in vertice cristas.
 "en tibi Martis," ait, "spectatrix libera nostri, excipe mortiferum securo pectore ferrum, nec doleas, quia turpe tibi gemuisse dolorem." 120 sic ait, et stridens sequitur convicia pinus per teneros crispata notos, et certa sub ipsum defertur stomachum rectoque inliditur ictu, sed resilit duro loricae excussa repulsu.
 provida nam Virtus conserto adamante trilicem 125

* Throughout these lines Prudentius has been playing on the idea of baptism as a purification. God is the "spring" whose water washes away sin.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

be kept pure for their own king." So spake Chastity, and rejoicing in the death of Lust, whom she had slain, washed her stained sword in the waters of Jordan; for a red dew of gore had clung to it and befouled the bright steel from the wound. So the conqueress deftly cleanses the conquering blade by bathing it in the stream, dipping it in to wash away the stain of blood that came from her foe's throat; and, no longer content to sheathe the purified sword, lest rust unseen engross the clean, bright surface with its dirty scurf, she dedicates it by the altar of the divine spring^a in a Catholic temple, there to shine and flash with unfading light.

Lo, mild Long-Suffering was standing with staid countenance, unmoved amid the battle and its confused uproar, with fixed gaze watching the wounds inflicted as the stiff javelins pierced the vital parts while she waited inactive. On her from a distance swelling Wrath, showing her teeth with rage and foaming at the mouth, darts her eyes, all shot with blood and gall, and challenges her with weapon and with speech for taking no part in the fight; irked by her hanging back, she hurls a pike at her and assails her with abuse, tossing the shaggy crests on her helmeted head. "Here's for thee," she cries, "that lookest on at our warfare and takest no side. Receive the death-stroke in thy calm breast, and betray no pain, since it is dishonour in thine eyes to utter a cry of pain." So speaks she, and the pine-shaft, launched through the yielding airs, goes hissing after her angry words. Sure-aimed, it hits the very stomach and smites hard with full force, but is struck off by the resistance of a hard cuirass, and rebounds; for the Virtue had prudently put on her shoulders a

PRUDENTIUS

induerat thoraca umeris squamosaque ferri texta per intortos conmiserat undique nervos.
 inde qujeta manet Patientia, fortis ad omnes telorum nimbos et non penetrabile durans. nec mota est iaculo monstri sine more furentis, 130
 opperiens propriis perituram viribus Iram.
 scilicet indomitos postquam stomachando lacertos barbara bellatrix inpenderat et iaculorum nube supervacuam lassaverat inrita dextram, cum ventosa levi cecidissent tela volatu, 135 iactibus et vacuis hastilia fracta iacerent, vertitur ad capulum manus inproba, et ense corusco
 conisa in plagam dextra sublimis ab aure erigitur mediumque ferit librata cerebrum.
 aerea sed cocto cassis formata metallo 140 tinnitum percussa refert aciemque retundit dura resultantem, frangit quoque vena rebellis inlisum chalybem, dum cedere nescia cassos excipit adsultus ferienti et tuta resistit.
 Ira, ubi truncati mucronis fragmina vidit 145 et procul in partes ensem crepuisse minutas, iam capulum retinente manu sine pondere ferri, mentis inops ebur infelix decorisque pudendi perfida signa abicit monumentaque tristia longe spernit, et ad proprium succenditur effera letum. 150 missile de multis, quae frustra sparserat, unum pulvere de campi perversos sumit in usus:
 rasile figit humi lignum ac se cuspide versa

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

three-ply corselet of mail impenetrable, the fabric of iron scales joined every way with leathers interlaced. So Long-Suffering abides undisturbed, bravely facing all the hail of weapons and keeping a front that none can pierce. Standing unmoved by the javelin while the monster that shot it rages in ungoverned frenzy, she waits for Wrath to perish by reason of her own violence. And when the barbarous warrior had spent with fuming the strength of her unconquerable arms and by showering javelins tired out her right hand with no success till it was useless, since her missiles, having no force in their flight, fell ineffectual, and the shafts, all idly cast, lay broken on the ground, her ruthless hand turned to her sword-hilt. Putting all its strength into a blow with the flashing blade, it rises high above her right ear and then, launching its stroke, smites her foe's head in the very middle. But the helmet of forged bronze only resounds under the blow; the blade rebounds with blunted edge, so hard it is; the unyielding metal breaks the steel that smites it, unflinchingly receives the vain attack, and stands up to the striker without hurt. Seeing her blade shivered in pieces and how the sword has scattered away in rattling fragments while her hand still grasps the hilt after it has lost its weight of steel, Wrath is beside herself and casts away the luckless ivory that has been false to her, the token of honour turned to shame. Afar she flings that unwelcome reminder, and wild passion fires her to slay herself. One of the many missiles that she had scattered without effect she picks up from the dust of the field, for an unnatural use. The smooth shaft she fixes in the ground and with the upturned point stabs herself, perfodit et calido pulmonem vulnere transit.

PRUDENTIUS

 quam super adsistens Patientia "vicimus," inquit, 155
 "exultans Vitium solita virtute, sine ullo sanguinis ac vitae discrimine; lex habet istud nostra genus belli, furias omnemque malorum militiam et rabidas tolerando extinguere vires.
 ipsa sibi est hostis vesania seque furendo 160 interimit moriturque suis Ira ignea telis."
 haec effata secat medias inpune cohortes egregio comitata viro; nam proximus Iob haeserat invictae dura inter bella magistrae, fronte severus adhuc et multo funere anhelus, 165 sed iam clausa truci subridens ulcera vultu, perque cicatricum numerum sudata recensens millia pugnarum, sua praemia, dedecus hostis.
 illum diva iubet tandem requiescere ab omni armorum strepitu, captis et perdita quaeque 170 multiplicare opibus, nec iam peritura referre.
 ipsa globos legionum et concurrentia rumpit agmina, vulniferos gradiens intacta per imbres.
 omnibus una comes Virtutibus adsociatur, auxiliumque suum fortis Patientia miscet. 175
 nulla anceps luctamen init Virtute sine ista Virtus, nam vidua est quam non Patientia firmat.
 forte per effusas inflata Superbia turmas effreni volitabat equo, quem pelle leonis texerat et validos villis oneraverat armos, 180 quo se fulta iubis iactantius illa ferinis

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

piercing her breast with a burning wound. Standing over her, Long-Suffering cries: "We have overcome a proud Vice with our wonted virtue, with no danger to blood or life. This is the kind of warfare that is our rule, to wipe out the fiends of passion and all their army of evils and their savage strength by bearing their attack. Fury is its own enemy; fiery Wrath in her frenzy slays herself and dies by her own weapons." So saying, she makes her way unharmed through the midst of the battalions, escorted by a noble man; for Job had clung close to the side of his invincible mistress throughout the hard battle, hitherto grave of look and panting from the slaughter of many a foe, but now with a smile on his stern face as he thought of his healed sores and, by the number of his scars, recounted his thousands of hard-won fights, his own glory and his foes' dishonour. Him the heavenly one bids rest at last from all the din of arms and with the riches of his spoils make manifold restitution for all his losses, carrying home things that shall no more be lost. She herself presses through the massed legions and clashing columns, stepping unhurt amid the deadly showers. To all the Virtues Long-Suffering alone joins herself in company and bravely adds her help; no Virtue enters on the hazard of the struggle without this Virtue's aid, for she has nought to lean upon, whose strength Long-Suffering does not uphold.

It chanced that Pride was galloping about, all puffed up, through the widespread squadrons, on a mettled steed which she had covered with a lion's skin, laying the weight of shaggy hair over its strong shoulders, so that being seated on the wild beast's mane she might make a more imposing figure as she inferret tumido despectans agmina fastu.

PRUDENTIUS

 turritum tortis caput adcumularat in altum crinibus, extractos augeret ut addita cirros congeries celsumque apicem frons ardua ferret. 185 carbasea ex umeris summo collecta coibat palla sinu teretem nectens a pectore nodum.
 a cervice fluens tenui velamine limbus concipit infestas textis turgentibus auras.
 nec minus instabili sonipes feritate superbit, 190 inpatiens madidis frenarier ora lupatis.
 huc illuc frendens obvertit terga, negata libertate fugae, pressisque tumescit habenis.
 hoc sese ostentans habitu ventosa virago inter utramque aciem supereminet et phaleratum 195 circumflectit equum, vultuque et voce minatur adversum spectans cuneum, quem milite raro et paupertinis ad bella coegerat armis Mens Humilis, regina quidem, sed egens alieni auxilii proprio nec sat confisa paratu. 200 Spem sibi collegam coniunxerat, edita cuius et suspensa ab humo est opulentia divite regno.
 ergo Humilem postquam male sana Superbia Mentem
 vilibus instructam nullo ostentamine telis aspicit, in vocem dictis se effundit amaris : 205
 " non pudet, o miseri, plebeio milite claros adtemptare duces ferroque lacescere gentem insignem titulis, veteres cui bellica virtus divitias peperit, laetos et gramine colles imperio calcare dedit? nunc advena nudus 210 nititur antiquos, si fas est, pellere reges!
 en qui nostra suis in praedam cedere dextris

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

looked down on the columns with swelling disdain. High on her head she had piled a tower of braided hair, laying on a mass to heighten her locks and make a lofty peak over her haughty brows. A cambric mantle hanging from her shoulders was gathered high on her breast and made a rounded knot on her bosom, and from her neck there flowed a filmy streamer that billowed as it caught the opposing breeze. Her charger also, too spirited to stand still, carries itself proudly, ill brooking to have its mouth curbed with the bit it is champing. This way and that it backs in its rage, since it is denied freedom to run off and is angered at the pressure of the reins. In such style does this boastful she-warrior display herself, towering over both armies as she circles round on her bedecked steed and with menacing look and speech eyes the force that confronts her; a force but small in number and scantily armed, that Lowliness had gathered for the war—a princess she, indeed, but standing in need of others' help and wanting trust in her own provision. She had made Hope her fellow, whose rich estate is on high and lifted up from the earth in a wealthy realm. Therefore Pride in her madness, after looking on Lowliness and her poor equipment of paltry arms that made no display, broke forth in speech with bitter words: "Are ye not ashamed, ye poor creatures, to challenge famous captains with troops of low degree, to take the sword against a race of proud distinction, whose valour in war has long won wealth for it, and given it power to impose its rule on hills where rich grass grows? And now—can it be?—a newcomer with nothing is trying to drive out the ancient princes! Behold the warriors who will have our

PRUDENTIUS

sceptrā volunt! en qui nostras sulcare novales arvaque capta manu popularier hospite aratro contendunt, duros et pellere Marte colonos! 215 nempe, o ridiculum vulgus, natalibus horis totum hominem et calidos a matre amplectimur artus,
 vimque potestatum per membra recentis alumni spargimus, et rudibus dominamur in ossibus omnes.
 quis locus in nostra tunc vobis sede dabatur, 220 congenitis cum regna simul dicionibus aequo robore crescebant? nati nam luce sub una et domus et domini paribus adolevimus annis, ex quo plasma novum de consaepto paradisi limite progrediens amplum transfugit in orbem, 225 pellitosque habitus sumpsit venerabilis Adam, nudus adhuc, ni nostra foret praecepta secutus.
 quisnam iste ignotis hostis nunc surgit ab oris inportunus, iners, infelix, degener, amens, qui sibi tam serum ius vindicat, hactenus exul? 230 nimirum vacuae credentur frivola famae, quae miseros optare iubet quandoque futuri spem fortasse boni, lenta ut solacia mollem desidiā pigro rerum meditamine palpent.
 quidni illos spes palpet iners, quos pulvere in isto 235 tirones Bellona truci non excitat aere, inbellesque animos virtus tepefacta resolvit?
 anne Pudicitiae gelidum iecur utile bello est?
 an tenerum Pietatis opus sudatur in armis?
 quam pudet, o Mavors et virtus conscia, talem 240

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

sceptres become the spoil of their right hands, who seek to drive the furrow over lands that we have broken up, to ravage with a strangers' plough the soil our hands have taken, and with war expel its hardy cultivators! Absurd mob! Why, in the hour of birth we embrace the whole man, his frame still warm from his mother, and extend the strength of our power through the body of the new-born child, we are lords and masters all within the tender bones. What place in our abode was granted to you when the growing strength of our realm was matched by that of the sovereignty that was born with it? For both the house and its masters were born on the same day and we grew side by side as the years passed, since the time when the first man, going forth from the hedged bounds of Eden, went over into the wide world, and the venerable Adam clothed himself with skins, whereas he had been naked still, had he not followed our instruction. What foe is this that from shores unknown arises now to trouble us, a spiritless, luckless, base, insensate foe, who claims his rights so late, after banishment till now? Doubtless there will be trust in the silly dreams of the vain talk which bids poor wretches choose the hope of a good that may some day come to pass, so that its feckless consolations flatter their unmanly sloth with idle expectation! Ay, a nerveless hope it must be that flatters these raw troops, for in the dust of battle here the bray of the War-Queen's trumpet does not rouse them, and their courage is not hot enough to brace their unwarlike spirit. Is Chastity's cold stomach of any use in war, or Brotherly Love's soft work done by stress of battle? What shame it is, O god of war, O valorous heart of contra stare aciem ferroque lacescere nugas, et cum virgineis dextram conferre choreis, Iustitia est ubi semper egens et pauper Honestas, arida Sobrietas, albo Ieiunia vultu, sanguine vix tenui Pudor interfusus, aperta 245 Simplicitas et ad omne patens sine tegmine vulnus, et prostrata in humum nec libera iudice sese Mens Humilis, quam degenerem trepidatio prodit!

PRUDENTIUS

faxo ego, sub pedibus stipularum more teratur invalida ista manus; neque enim perfringere duris 250

dignamur gladiis, argenti et sanguine ferrum inbuere fragilique viros foedare triumpho.” talia vociferans rapidum calcaribus urget cornipedem laxisque volat temeraria frenis, hostem humilem cupiens impulsu umbonis equini 255
 sternere deiectamque supercalcere ruinam.

sed cadit in foveam praeceps, quam callida forte Fraus interciso subfoderat aequore furtim, Fraus detestandis Vitiorum e pestibus una, fallendi versuta opifex, quae praescia belli 260

planitiem scrobibus vitiaverat insidiosus hostili de parte latens, ut fossa ruentes exciperet cuneos atque agmina mersa voraret;
 ac ne fallacem puteum deprendere posset cauta acies, virgis adopertas texerat oras, 265

et superinposito simularat caespite campum.
 at regina humilis, quamvis ignara, manebat ulteriore loco nec adhuc ad Fraudis opertum venerat aut foveae calcarat furta malignae.
 hunc eques illa dolum, dum fertur praepete cursu, 270 incidit, et caecum subito patefecit hiatum.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

mine, to face such an army as this, to take the sword against such trumpery, and engage with troupes of girls, among them beggarly Righteousness and poverty-stricken Honesty, dried-up Soberness and white-faced Fasting, Purity with scarce a tinge of blood to colour her cheeks, unarmed Simplicity exposed with no protection to every wound, and Lowliness humbling herself to the ground, with no freedom even in her own eyes, and whose agitation betrays her ignoble spirit! I shall have this feeble band trodden down like stubble; for we disdain to shatter them with our stark swords, to dip our blades in their frigid blood, and disgrace our warriors with a triumph that needs no manhood." Thus exclaiming she spurs on her swift charger and flies wildly along with loose rein, eager to upset her lowly enemy with the shock of her horse-hide shield and trample on her fallen body. But she falls headlong into a pit which as it chanced cunning Deceit had privily dug across the field—Deceit, one of those cursed plagues, the Vices, a crafty worker of trickery, who foreseeing the war had secretly broken the level earth with treacherous trenches on the enemy's side, that the ditch might catch their regiments in their onrush and the columns plunge into it and be swallowed up; and lest the army should be watchful and discover the pit that was set to deceive it, she had concealed the edges by covering them with branches and laying turf over them to simulate ground. But the lowly princess, though knowing nought of this, was still on the further side, and had not yet come up to Deceit's trap nor set foot on the craftily hidden pit that meant her ill. Into the snare has fallen that rider as she galloped in swift career, and suddenly revealed the

PRUDENTIUS

prona ruentis equi cervice involvitur, ac sub pectoris inpressu fracta inter crura rotatur.
 at Virtus placidi moderaminis, ut levitatem prospicit obtritam monstri sub morte iacentis, 275 intendit gressum mediocriter, os quoque parce erigit et comi moderatur gaudia vultu.
 cunctanti Spes fida comes succurrit et offert ultorem gladium laudisque inspirat amorem.
 illa cruentatam correptis crinibus hostem 280 protrahit et faciem laeva revocante supinat, tunc caput orantis flexa cervice resectum eripit ac madido suspendit colla capillo.
 extinctum Vitium sancto Spes increpat ore :
 " Desine grande loqui; frangit Deus omne superbum, 285
 magna cadunt, inflata crepant, tumefacta pre-muntur.
 disce supercilium deponere, disce cavere ante pedes foveam, quisquis sublime minaris.
 pervulgata viget nostri sententia Christi scandere celsa humiles et ad ima redire feroces. 290 vidimus horrendum membris animisque Goliam invalida cecidisse manu : puerilis in illum dextera fundali torsit stridore lapillum traiectamque cavo penetravit vulnere frontem.
 ille minax, rigidus, iactans, truculentus, amarus, 295 dum tumet indomitum, dum formidabile fervet, dum sese ostentat, clipeo dum territatur auras, expertus pueri quid possint ludicra parvi subcubuit teneris bellator turbidus annis.
 me tunc ille puer virtutis pube secutus 300

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

secret gulf. Thrown forward, she clings around the horse's neck in its tumble; the weight of its breast comes down on her and she is tossed about among its broken legs. But the quiet, self-controlled Virtue, seeing the vain monster crushed and lying at the point of death, bends her steps calmly towards her, raising her face a little and tempering her joy with a look of kindness. As she hesitates, her faithful comrade Hope comes to her side, holds out to her the sword of vengeance, and breathes into her the love of glory. Grasping her blood-stained enemy by the hair, she drags her out and with her left hand turns her face upwards; then, though she begs for mercy, bends the neck, severs the head, lifts it and holds it up by the dripping locks. Hope with her pure lips upbraids the dead Vice: "An end to thy big talk! God breaks down all arrogance. Greatness falls; the bubble bursts; swollen pride is flattened. Learn to put away disdain, learn to beware of the pit before your feet, all ye that are overweening. Well known and true is the saying of our Christ that the lowly ascend to high places and the proud are reduced to low degree. We have seen how Goliath, terrible as he was in body and in valour, fell by a weak hand; it was but a boy's right hand that shot at him a little stone whizzing from his sling, and pierced a hole deep in his forehead. He, for all his stark menace, his boasting and his fierce and bitter speech, in the midst of his ungoverned pride and fearful raging, as he vaunted himself, affrighting the heavens with his shield, found what a little child's toy can do, and wild man of war as he was, fell to a lad of tender years. That day the lad, in the ripening of his valour, followed me; as his spirit came to its bloom florentes animos sursum in mea regna tetendit, servatur quia certa mihi domus omnipotentis sub pedibus Domini, meque ad sublime vocantem victores caesa culparum labe capessunt." dixit, et auratis praestringens aëra pinnis 305 in caelum se virgo rapit. mirantur euntem Virtutes tolluntque animos in vota volentes ire simul, ni bella duces terrena retardent.

PRUDENTIUS

 configunt Vitiis seque ad sua praemia servant.
 venerat occiduis mundi de finibus hostis 310 Luxuria, extinctae iamdudum prodiga famae, delibuta comas, oculis vaga, languida voce, perdita deliciis, vitae cui causa voluptas, elumbem mollire animum, petulanter amoenas haurire inlecebras et fractos solvere sensus. 315 ac tunc pervigilem ructabat marcida cenam, sub lucem quia forte iacens ad fercula raucos audierat lituos, atque inde tepentia linquens pocula lapsanti per vina et balsama gressu ebria calcatis ad bellum floribus ibat. 320 non tamen illa pedes, sed curru invecta venusto saucia mirantum capiebat corda virorum.
 o nova pugnandi species! non ales harundo nervum pulsa fugit, nec stridula lancea torto emicat amento, frameam nec dextra minatur; 325 sed violas lasciva iacit foliisque rosarum dimicat et calathos inimica per agmina fundit.
 inde eblanditis Virtutibus halitus inlex

^a Why western? Luxury is usually spoken of as coming from the east. Many tentative explanations have been offered, one of them (with which Mr. T. R. Glover agrees) that Rome is meant.

^b Wine was often mixed with warm water.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

he lifted it up towards my kingdom ; because for me is kept a sure home at the feet of the all-powerful Lord, and when I call men on high the victors who have cut down the sins that stain them reach after me." With these words, striking the air with her gilded wings, the maid flies off to heaven. The Virtues marvel at her as she goes and lift up their hearts in longing, desiring to go with her, did not earthly warfare detain them in command. They join in conflict with the Vices and reserve themselves for their own due reward.

From the western ^a bounds of the world had come their foe Indulgence, one that had long lost her repute and so cared not to save it ; her locks perfumed, her eyes shifting, her voice listless, abandoned in voluptuousness she lived only for pleasure, to make her spirit soft and nerveless, in wantonness to drain alluring delights, to enfeeble and undo her understanding. Even then she was languidly belching after a night-long feast ; for as it chanced dawn was coming in and she was still reclining by the table when she heard the hoarse trumpets, and she left the lukewarm ^b cups, her foot slipping as she stepped through pools of wine and perfumes, and trampling on the flowers, and was making her drunken way to the war. Yet it was not on foot, but riding in a beauteous chariot that she struck and won the hearts of the admiring fighters. Strange warfare ! No swift arrow is sped in flight from her bowstring, no lash-thrown lance shoots forth hissing, her hand wields no menacing sword ; but as if in sport she throws violets and fights with rose-leaves, scattering baskets of flowers over her adversaries. So the Virtues are won over by her charms ; the alluring inspirat tenerum labefacta per ossa venenum, et male dulcis odor domat ora et pectora et arma 330 ferratosque toros obliso robore mulcet.

PRUDENTIUS

 deiciunt animos ceu victi et spicula ponunt, turpiter, heu, dextris languentibus obstupefacti dum currum varia gemmarum luce micantem mirantur, dum bratteolis crepitantia lora 335 et solido ex auro pretiosi ponderis axem defixis inhiant obtutibus et radiorum argento albentem seriem, quam summa rotarum flexura electri pallentis continet orbe.
 et iam cuncta acies in deditiois amorem 340 sponte sua versis transibat perfida signis Luxuriae servire volens dominaeque fluentis iura pati et laxa ganeorum lege teneri.
 ingemuit tam triste nefas fortissima Virtus Sobrietas, dextro socios decedere cornu 345 invictamque manum quondam sine caede perire.
 vexillum sublime crucis, quod in agmine primo dux bona praetulerat, defixa cuspidē sistit, instauratque levem dictis mordacibus alam exstimulans animos nunc probris, nunc prece mixta : 350
 “ quis furor insanas agitat caligine mentes ?
 quo ruitis ? cui colla datis ? quae vincula tandem,
 pro pudor, armigeris amor est perferre lacertis, lilia luteolis interlucentia sertis et ferrugineo vernantes flore coronas ? 355 his placet adsueta bello iam tradere palmas nexibus, his rigidas nodis innectier ulnas,

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

breath blows a subtle poison on them that unmans their frames, the fatally sweet scent subduing their lips and hearts and weapons, softening their iron-clad muscles and crushing their strength. Their courage drops as in defeat; they lay down their javelins, their hands, alas! enfeebled, all to their shame struck dumb in their wonder at the chariot gleaming with flashing gems of varied hue, as with fixed gaze they look longingly at the reins with their tinkling gold-foil, the heavy axle of solid gold, so costly, the spokes, one after another, of white silver, the rim of the wheel holding them in place with a circle of pale electrum. And by this time the whole array, its standards turned about, was treacherously submitting of its own will to a desire to surrender, wishing to be the slaves of Indulgence, to bear the yoke of a debauched mistress, and be governed by the loose law of the pot-house. The stout-hearted Virtue Soberness mourned to see a crime so sore, her allies deserting the right wing, a band once invincible being lost without shedding of blood. Like the good leader she is, she had carried the standard of the cross at the head of her troops, and now she plants the spike in the ground and sets it up, and with biting words restores her unsteady regiment, mingling appeals with her reproaches to awake their courage: "What blinding madness is vexing your disordered minds? To what fate are you rushing? To whom are you bowing the neck? What bonds are these (for shame!) you long to bear on arms that were meant for weapons, these yellow garlands interspersed with bright lilies, these wreaths blooming with red-hued flowers? Is it to chains like these you will give up hands trained to war, with these bind your stout

PRUDENTIUS

ut mitra caesariem cohibens aurata virilem conbibat infusum croceo religamine nardum, post inscripta oleo frontis signacula, per quae 360 unguentum regale datum est et chrisma perenne, ut tener incessus vestigia syrmate verrat sericaque infractis fluitent ut pallia membris, post immortalem tunicam quam pollice docto texuit alma Fides, dans impenetrabile tegmen 365 pectoribus lotis, dederat quibus ipsa renasci, inde ad nocturnas epulas, ubi cantharus ingens despuuit effusi spumantia damna Falerni in mensam cyathis stillantibus, uda ubi multo fulcra mero veterique toreumata rore rigantur? 370 excidit ergo animis eremi sitis, excidit ille fons patribus de rupe datus, quem mystica virga elicuit scissi salientem vertice saxi? angelicusne cibus prima in tentoria vestris fluxit avis, quem nunc sero felicior aevo 375 vespertinus edit populus de corpore Christi?
 his vos inbutos dapibus iam crapula turpis Luxuriae ad madidum rapit inportuna lupanar, quosque viros non Ira fremens, non idola bello cedere compulerant, saltatrix ebria flexit! 380 state, precor, vestri memores, memores quoque Christi.

quae sit vestra tribus, quae gloria, quis Deus et rex,
 quis Dominus meminisse decet. vos nobile Iudae germen ad usque Dei genetricem, qua Deus ipse

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

arms, to have your manly hair confined by a gilded turban with its yellow band to soak up the spikenard you pour on, and this after you have had inscribed with oil on your brows the signs whereby was given to you the king's anointing, his everlasting unction? To walk softly with a train sweeping the path you have trod? To wear flowing robes of silk on your enfeebled frames, after the immortal tunic that bountiful Faith wove with deft fingers, giving an impenetrable covering to cleansed hearts to which she had already given rebirth? And so to feasts that last into the night, where the great tankard spills out wasted floods of foaming wine, while the ladles drip on to the table, the couches are soaked with neat liquor, and their embossed ornaments still wet with the dew of yesterday? Have you forgotten, then, the thirst in the desert, the spring that was given to your fathers from the rock, when the mystic wand split the stone and brought water leaping from its top? Did not food that angels brought flow into your fathers' tents in early days, that food which now with better fortune, in the lateness of time, near the end of the world's day, the people eats from the body of Christ? And it is after tasting of this banquet that you let shameful debauchery carry you relentlessly to the drunken den of Indulgence, and soldiers whom no raging Wrath nor idols could force by war to yield have been prevailed on by a tipsy dancer! Stand, I pray you. Remember who ye are, remember Christ too. Ye should bethink yourselves of your nation and your fame, your God and King, your Lord. Ye are the high-born children of Judah and have come of a long line of noble ancestors that stretches down to the mother of God, by whom God

PRUDENTIUS

esset homo, procerum venistis sanguine longo. 385 excitet egregias mentes celeberrima David gloria continuis bellorum exercita curis, excitet et Samuel, spolium qui divite ab hoste adtrectare vetat nec victum vivere regem incircumcisum patitur, ne praeda superstes 390 victorem placidum recidiva in proelia poscat.
 parcere iam capto crimen putat ille tyranno,
 at vobis contra vinci et subcumbere votum est.
 paeniteat, per si qua movet reverentia summi numinis, hoc tam dulce malum voluisse nefanda 395 proditione sequi; si paenitet, haud nocet error.
 paenituit Ionatham ieiunia sobria dulci conviolasse favo sceptri mellisque sapore heu male gustato, regni dum blanda voluptas oblectat iuvenem iurataque sacra resolvit. 400 sed quia paenituit, nec sors lacrimabilis illa est, nec tinguunt patrias sententia saeva secures.
 en ego Sobrietas, si conspirare paratis, pando viam cunctis Virtutibus, ut malesuada Luxuries, multo stipata satellite, poenas 405 cum legione sua Christo sub iudice pendat." sic effata crucem Domini ferventibus offert obvia quadriugis, lignum venerabile in ipsos intentans frenos. quod ut expavere feroces cornibus obpansis et summa fronte coruscum, 410 vertunt praecipitem caeca formidine fusi per praerupta fugam. fertur resupina reductis nequiquam loris auriga comamque madentem

^a Cf. 1 Samuel xv.

^b Cf. 1 Samuel xiv, 24 ff. It has been suggested that Prudentius in lines 399 and 400 confuses the story of Jonathan with that of Absalom; but perhaps he is only reading too much into the words of Jonathan in verses 29 and 30.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

himself was to become man. Let the renowned David, who never rested from the troubles of war, awake your noble spirits; and Samuel too, who forbids touching the spoil taken from a rich foe, nor suffers the uncircumcised king to live after his defeat, lest the captive, were he allowed to survive, summon the victor from his life of peace to a renewal of war.^a He counts it sin to spare the monarch even as a prisoner; but your desire, on the contrary, is to be conquered and submit. Repent, I beseech you by the fear of the high God, if at all it moves you, that you have desired to follow after this pleasant sin, committing a heinous betrayal. If ye repent, your sin is not deadly. Jonathan repented that he had broken the sober fast with the sweet honeycomb, tasting, alas! in an evil hour the savour of honey on his rod, when the tempting desire to be king charmed his young mind and broke the holy vow.^b Yet because he repented we do not have to lament the fate that was decreed, and the cruel sentence did not stain his father's axe. Lo, I, Soberness, if ye make ready to concert with me, open up a way for all the Virtues whereby the temptress Indulgence, for all her great train, shall pay the penalty, she and her regiment, under the judgment of Christ." So speaking, she holds up the cross of the Lord in face of the raging chariot-horses, thrusting the holy wood against their very bridles; and for all their boldness they have taken fright at its outspread arms and flashing top,^c and in the rout of blind panic career down a steep place. Their driver, leaning far back and pulling on the reins, is carried helplessly along,

^c The top of the cross being decorated with precious metal or jewels.

PRUDENTIUS

pulvere foedatur. tunc et vertigo rotarum implicat excussam dominam; nam prona sub axem 415 labitur et lacero tardat sufflamine currum.
 addit Sobrietas vulnus letale iacenti, coniciens silicem rupis de parte molarem.
 hunc vexilliferae quoniam fors obtulit ictum spicula nulla manu sed belli insigne gerenti, 420 casus agit saxum, medii spiramen ut oris frangeret, et recavo misceret labra palato.
 dentibus introrsum resolutis lingua resectam dilaniata gulam frustis cum sanguinis inplet.
 insolitis dapibus crudescit guttur, et ossa 425 conliquefacta vorans revomit quas hauserat offas.
 " ebibe iam proprium post pocula multa cruorem," virgo ait increpitans, " sint haec tibi fercula tandem
 tristia praeteriti nimiis pro dulcibus aevi.
 lascivas vitae inlecebras gustatus amarae 430 mortis et horrifico sapor ultimus asperat haustu." ¹ caede ducis dispersa fugit trepidante pavore nugatrix acies. locus et Petulantia primi cymbala proiciunt; bellum nam talibus armis ludebant resono meditantes vulnera sistro. 435 dat tergum fugitivus Amor, lita tela veneno et lapsum ex umeris arcum pharetramque cadentem
 pallidus ipse metu sua post vestigia linquit.
 Pompa, ostentatrix vani splendoris, inani exuitur nudata peplo; discissa trahuntur 440 serta Venustatis collique ac verticis aurum

¹ The 6th-century MS. originally had horrifico . . . asperat haustus, which was altered to horrificos . . . asperet haustus. Bergman adopts the latter reading.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

her dripping locks befouled with dust; then she is thrown out and the whirling wheels entangle her who was their mistress, for she falls forward under the axle and her mangled body is the brake that slows the chariot down. Soberness gives her the death-blow as she lies, hurling at her a great stone from the rock. As chance has put this weapon in the standard-bearer's way (for she carries no javelins in her hand, but only the emblem of her warfare), chance drives the stone to smash the breath-passage in the midst of the face and beat the lips into the arched mouth. The teeth within are loosened, the gullet cut, and the mangled tongue fills it with bloody fragments. Her gorge rises at the strange meal; gulping down the pulped bones she spews up again the lumps she swallowed. "Drink up now thine own blood, after thy many cups," says the maiden, upbraiding her. "Be these thy grim dainties, in place of the too much sweetness thou hast enjoyed in time past. The taste of bitter death in thy mouth, the savouring of this final, ghastly draught, turns to gall the wanton delights that allured thee in thy life." At the slaughter of its leader her company of triflers scatters and runs in a flutter of fear. Jest and Sauciness first cast away their cymbals; for it was with such weapons that they played at war, thinking to wound with the noise of a rattle! Desire turns his back in flight. Pale himself with fear, he leaves behind his poisoned darts, abandoning his bow where it has slipped from his shoulder, his quiver where it falls. Ostentation, that parader of empty grandeur, is stripped bare of her vain flowing robe. Allurement's garlands are torn and trail behind her, the gold on her neck and head solvitur, et gemmas Discordia dissona turbat.

PRUDENTIUS

 non piget adtritis pedibus per acuta frutecta ire Voluptatem, quoniam vis maior acerbam compellit tolerare fugam; formido pericli 445 praedurat teneras iter ad cruciabile plantas.
 qua se cumque fugax trepidis fert cursibus agmen, damna iacent, crinalis acus, redimicula, vittae, fibula, flammeolum, strophium, diadema, monile.
 his se Sobrietas et totus Sobrietatis 450 abstinet exuviis miles damnataque castis scandala proculcat pedibus, nec fronte severos conivente oculos praedarum ad gaudia flectit.
 fertur Avaritia gremio praecincta capaci, quidquid Luxus edax pretiosum liquerat, unca 455 corripuisse manu, pulchra in ludibria vasto ore inhians auri que legens fragmenta caduci inter harenarum cumulos. nec sufficit amplos inplevisse sinus; iuvat infercire cruminis turpe lucrum et gravidos furtis distendere fiscos, 460 quos laeva celante tegit laterisque sinistri velat opermento; velox nam dextra rapinas abradit spoliisque unguis exercet aënos.
 Cura, Famis, Metus, Anxietas, Periuria, Pallor, Corruptela, Dolus, Commenta, Insomnia, Sordes, 465
 Eumenides variae monstri comitatus aguntur.
 nec minus interea rabidorum more luporum Crimina persultant toto grassantia campo, matris Avaritiae nigro de lacte creata.
 si fratris galeam fulvis radiare ceraunis 470 germanus vidit connilito, non timet ensem

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

unfastened, and jarring Strife disorders her jewels. Pleasure is content to go with injured feet through thorny brakes, for superior force makes her endure the painful flight, and the dread of danger hardens her tender soles to bear the torture of the way. Wherever the column turns, as it rushes this way and that in its agitated flight, lie things lost, a hairpin, ribbands, fillets, a brooch, a veil, a breast-band, a coronet, a necklace. These spoils Soberness and all the soldiers of Soberness refrain from handling; they trample under their chaste feet the cursed causes of offence, nor let their austere gaze turn a blind eye towards the joys of plunder.

'Tis said that Greed, her robe arranged to make a capacious fold in front, crooked her hand and seized on every thing of price that gluttonous Indulgence left behind, gaping with mouth wide open on the pretty baubles as she picked up the broken bits of gold that had fallen amid the heaps of sand. Nor is she content to fill her roomy pockets, but delights to stuff her base gain in money-bags and cram swollen purses to bursting with her pelf, keeping them in hiding behind her left hand under cover of her robe on the left side, for her quick right hand is busy scraping up the plunder and plies nails hard as brass in gathering the booty. Care, Hunger, Fear, Anguish, Perjuries, Pallor, Corruption, Treachery, Falsehood, Sleeplessness, Meanness, diverse fiends, go in attendance on the monster; and all the while Crimes, the brood of their mother Greed's black milk, like ravening wolves go prowling and leaping over the field. If a soldier sees his own brother and fellow-soldier with a helmet that glances with precious stones of tawny hue, he fears not to exerere atque caput socio mucrone ferire, de consanguineo rapturus vertice gemmas.

PRUDENTIUS

 filius extinctum belli sub sorte cadaver aspexit si forte patris, fulgentia bullis 475 cingula et exuvias gaudet rapuisse cruentas :
 cognatam Civilis agit Discordia praedam, nec parcit propriis Amor insatiatus Habendi pigneribus spoliisque suos Famis inopia natos.
 talia per populos edebat funera victrix 480 orbis Avaritia, sternens centena virorum millia vulneribus variis : hunc lumine adempto effossisque oculis velut in caligine noctis caecum errare sinit perque offensacula multa ire, nec oppositum baculo temptare periculum. 485 porro alium capit intuitu fallitque videntem, insigne ostentans aliquid, quod dum petit ille, excipitur telo incautus cordisque sub ipso saucius occulto ferrum suspirat adactum.
 multos praecipitans in aperta incendia cogit 490 nec patitur vitare focos, quibus aestuat aurum, quod petit arsurus pariter speculator ¹ avarus.
 omne hominum rapit illa genus, mortalia cuncta occupat interitu, neque est violentius ullum terrarum Vitium, quod tantis cladibus aevum 495 mundani involvat populi damnetque gehennae.
 quin ipsos temptare manu, si credere dignum est, ausa sacerdotes Domini, qui proelia forte ductores primam ante aciem pro laude gerebant Virtutum, magnoque inplebant classica flatu. 500 et fors innocuo tinxisset sanguine ferrum,

¹ peculator, adopted by Bergman, is the reading of the 6th-century MS. That of the 7th and some others show speculator only after alteration.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

unsheath his sword and smite the skull with a comrade's blade, purposing to snatch the gems from a kinsman's head. If a son chanced to look on his father's body lying lifeless by the luck of war, he joyfully seizes the belt with its shining studs and strips off the blood-stained armour. Civil War makes plunder of his kin, the insatiable Love of Possession spares not his own dear ones, unnatural Hunger robs his own children. Such the slaughter that Greed, the conqueress of the world, was dealing among the nations, laying low myriads of men with diverse wounds. One, made sightless, his eyes prised out, she leaves to wander blindly as in the darkness of night over many a stumbling-block, nor lets him test with a staff the danger in his way. Another, again, she captures by means of his sight and cheats him with his eyes open by displaying to him some splendid thing, and in the act of reaching for it, all unheeding, he is caught by her stroke and utters a sigh at the sword-thrust that wounds him in the very depths of his heart. Many she drives headlong on to open fires, not suffering them to avoid the flames, in which gold is burning, and a man eyeing it greedily reaches for it though he is doomed to burn with it. The whole race of men she seizes upon, all mortality she destroys before it can help itself. There is no more furious Vice in the world to envelop the life of the people of the world in such disaster, condemning them to hell-fire. Nay, she even dared—can we believe it?—to raise her hand against the very priests of the Lord, the leaders posted before the front line, who were doing battle for the credit of the Virtues and filling their war-trumpets with a great blast. And perchance she would have dipped ni Ratio armipotens, gentis Levitidis una semper fida comes, clipeum obiectasset et atrae hostis ab incursu claros texisset alumnos.

PRUDENTIUS

 stant tuti Rationis ope, stant turbine ab omni 505 immunes fortesque animi; vix in cute summa praestringens paucos tenui de vulnere laedit cuspis Avaritae. stupuit luis inproba castis heroum iugulis longe sua tela repelli; ingemit et dictis ardens furialibus infit: 510
 "vincimur, heu, segnes nec nostra potentia perfert
 vim solitam, languet violentia saeva nocendi, sueverat invictis quae viribus omnia ubique rumpere corda hominum; nec enim tam ferrea quemquam
 duravit natura virum, cuius rigor aera 515 sperneret aut nostro foret impenetrabilis auro.
 ingenium omne neci dedimus; tenera, aspera, dura,
 docta, indocta simul, bruta et sapientia, nec non casta, incesta meae patuerunt pectora dextrae.
 sola igitur rapui quidquid Styx abdit avaris 520 gurgitibus. nobis ditissima Tartara debent quos retinent populos. quod volvunt saecula nostrum est,
 quod miscet mundus, vesana negotia, nostrum.
 qui fit praevalidas quod pollens gloria vires deserit et cassos ludit fortuna lacertos? 525 sordet Christicolis rutilantis fulva monetae effigies, sordent argenti emblemata, et omnis thesaurus nigrante oculis vilescit honore.
 quid sibi docta volunt fastidia? nonne triumphum

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

her steel in their innocent blood, had not the mighty warrior Reason, ever before all the true comrade of Levi's race, put her shield in the way and covered her famed foster-children from their deadly foe's onslaught. They stand in safety by Reason's aid, taking no hurt from all the tempest, and stout of heart; only a few did Greed's javelin touch, grazing them with a slight wound not skin-deep. Outrageous plague that she was, she stood amazed to see her weapons turned from the heroes' pure throats, and with a groan she broke into raging words of passion: "We are losing the fight, alas! for want of vigour, our power has lost its wonted drive, our fell strength to hurt is grown feeble, though it used to break through every heart of man everywhere with force unconquerable; for no man ever had such an iron nature to harden him that he could inflexibly scorn money or be proof against our gold. Every temper we have given over to death; hearts tender, rough and hard, minds learned and unlearned alike, stupid and wise, pure and impure too, have been open to my hand. It is I alone who have carried off all that Styx now hides away with his greedy floods; it is to us the hell we have enriched owes the peoples it keeps in durance; the thoughts of all generations are of what belongs to us, all the world's busy stirring and mad trafficking is of us. How comes it that the glorious might deserts our prevailing strength and fortune makes a mock of our feckless arms? Worthless to the followers of Christ is the yellow image on the shining coin, worthless is embossed silver, no treasure has any value to their eyes, for its glory is clouded. What means this new-learned daintiness? Did not we triumph over egimus e Scarioth, magnus qui discipulorum 530 et conviva Dei, dum fallit foedere mensae haudquaquam ignarum dextramque parabside iungit,

PRUDENTIUS

 incidit in nostrum flammante cupidine telum, infamem mercatus agrum de sanguine amici numinis, obliso luiturus iugera collo? 535 viderat et Iericho propria inter funera quantum posset nostra manus, cum victor concidit Achar.
 caedibus insignis murali et strage superbus subcubuit capto victis ex hostibus auro, dum vetitis insigne legens anathema favillis 540 maesta ruinarum spolia insatiabilis haurit.
 non illum generosa tribus, non plebis avitae iuvit Iuda parens, Christo quandoque propinquo nobilis et tali felix patriarcha nepote.
 quis placet exemplum generis, placeat quoque forma 545
 exitii: sit poena eadem, quibus et genus unum
 est.
 quid moror aut Iudae populares aut populares sacricolae summi (summus nam fertur Aaron) fallere fraude aliqua Martis congressibus inpar?
 nil refert armis contingat palma dolisve." 550 dixerat et torvam faciem furialiaque arma exuit inque habitum sese transformat honestum; fit Virtus specie vultuque et veste severa quam memorant Frugi, parce cui vivere cordi est et servare suum; tamquam nil raptet avare, 555

^a Joshua vii. Achar is the form of the name in the Septuagint version. Achan represents the Hebrew here, though Achar at 1 Chronicles ii, 7.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

Iscariot, a great one among the disciples of God, and one that sat at meat with Him? Being false to Him (though He knew all) as he sat at his table and put his hand into the dish with Him, he fell upon our weapon in the heat of his desire, for he bought a piece of land of ill fame with the price of the blood of God, who was his friend, and was doomed to atone for his acres with a strangled neck. Jericho too in the destruction of its people saw the strength of our hand, when Achar^a fell in the midst of victory. For though he won glory by the slaughter and was exalted by the overthrowing of the walls, he fell a victim to the gold that was taken from the beaten foe, picking up from the forbidden ashes a thing that caught his eye (but it was the accursed thing) and grasping covetously the sorrowful spoils from the ruins of the city. Neither did the nobility of his tribe avail him, nor his ancestry deriving from Judah, a patriarch of high rank in that Christ should one day be his kinsman, and blessed in his great descendant. Those that choose to take his race as their pattern, let them choose also the form of his destruction; let those who own the same race suffer the same pains. Why not trick with some device the countrymen of Judah or of the chief priest (for they call Aaron chief), since I cannot match them in the clash of battle? It matters not whether the prize of victory comes by arms or by guile." With these words she puts off her grim look and her fiendish weapons, and changes to a noble bearing. In appearance, with austere mien and dress, she becomes the Virtue men call Thrifty, whose pleasure it is to live sparingly and save what she has; she looks as if she never snatched aught with greedy hands, and with her air of careful-artis adumbratae meruit ceu sedula laudem.

PRUDENTIUS

 huius se specie mendax Bellona coaptat, non ut avara lues, sed Virtus parca putetur;
 nec non et tenero pietatis tegmine crines obtegit anguinos, ut candida palla latentem 560 dissimulet rabiem, diroque obtenta furori, quod rapere et clepere est avideque abscondere parta,
 natorum curam dulci sub nomine iactet.
 talibus inludens male credula corda virorum fallit imaginibus, monstrumque feralis sequuntur 565 dum credunt Virtutis opus; capit inopia Erinys consensu faciles manicisque tenacibus artat.
 attonitis ducibus perturbatisque manipulis nutabat Virtutum acies errore biformis portenti, ignorans quid amicum credat in illo 570 quidve hostile notet: letum versatile et anceps lubricat incertos dubia sub imagine visus, cum subito in medium frendens Operatio campum prosilit auxilio sociis, pugnamque capessit militiae postrema gradu, sed sola duello 575 inpositura manum, ne quid iam triste supersit.
 omne onus ex umeris reiecerat, omnibus ibat nudata induviis multo et se fasce levarat, olim divitiis gravibusque oppressa talentis, libera nunc miserando inopum, quos larga benigne 580 foverat effundens patrium bene prodiga censum.

* The goddess Mâ, introduced to Rome from Cappadocia, was identified with the Roman Bellona. Her worship, which resembled that of the Magna Mater, was of a wild, orgiastic character.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

ness she has gained repute for the quality she counterfeits. With this Virtue's likeness the false Bellona^a equips herself, so as to be thought not a greedy pest but a thrifty Virtue. With a delicate covering of motherly devotion she hides her snaky tresses so that the white mantle shall disguise the raging that lurks beneath and screen the fearful fury, and so display her plundering and thieving and greedy storing of her gains under the pleasing name of care for her children. With such semblances she befools men and cheats their too credulous hearts. They follow the deadly monster, believing hers to be a Virtue's work, and the wicked fiend takes them, easy, willing victims, and binds them with gripping shackles. Their leaders bewildered, their companies confounded, the Virtues' line is faltering; for they are misled by the monster's twofold figure and know not where to see a friend in her and where to mark a foe. The deadly creature's changing, double form makes their sight unsteady and dubious, not knowing what to make of her appearance. But now of a sudden Good Works dashes in anger on to the midst of the battle-ground to help her comrades, and takes up the fight; posted last on the field is she, but destined singly so to put her hand to the war that nought shall remain to be feared.^b Every load she had cast off from her shoulders, and she moved along stripped of all coverings; of many a burden had she lightened herself, for once she had been borne down by riches and the weight of money, but now had freed herself by taking pity on the needy, whom she had cared for with kindly generosity, lavishing her patrimony with a wise

^b Cf. Matthew xix, 20-21.

PRUDENTIUS

iam loculos ditata fidem ¹ spectabat inanes, aeternam numerans redituro faenore summam.
 horruit invictae Virtutis fulmen et inpos mentis Avaritia stupefactis sensibus haesit 585 certa mori: nam quae fraudis via restet, ut ipsa calcatrix mundi mundanis victa fatiscat inlecebris spretoque iterum sese implicet auro?
 invadit trepidam Virtus fortissima duris ulnarum nodis, obliso et gutture frangit 590 exsanguem siccamque gulam; compressa ligantur
 vincla lacertorum sub mentum et faucibus artis extorquent animam, nullo quae vulnere rapta palpitat atque aditu spiraminis intercepto inclusam patitur venarum carcere mortem. 595 illa reluctanti genibusque et calcibus instans perfodit et costas atque ilia rumpit anghela, mox spolia exstincto de corpore diripit; auri sordida frusta rudis nec adhuc fornace recoctam materiam, tineis etiam marsupia crebris 600 exesa et virides obducta aerugine nummos dispergit servata diu victrix et egenis dissipat ac tenues captivo munere donat.
 tunc circumfusam vultu exultante coronam respiciens alacris media inter milia clamat: 605
 " solvite procinctum, iusti, et discedite ab armis!
 causa mali tanti iacet interfecta; lucrandi ingluvie pereunte licet requiescere sanctis.
 summa quies nil velle super quam postulet usus debitus, ut simplex alimonia, vestis et una 610

¹ The 7th-century MS. and others have fide.

^a Cf. Revelation iii, 18.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

prodigality. And now, enriched in faith, she was looking at her empty purse and reckoning the sum of her eternal wealth with the interest that would accrue. Like a thunderbolt to Avarice was the sight of the invincible Virtue. Cold with terror, no longer mistress of herself, her senses benumbed, she could not move, and knew her doom had come. For what method of trickery would be left, whereby she who had already trampled on the world should faint under worldly temptations and once again entangle herself with the gold she had scorned? As she stands thus in consternation the brave Virtue sets upon her with the iron grip of her arms and strangles her, crushing the blood out of her throat till it is dry. Her arms, pressed tight like bands beneath the chin, squeeze the gorge and wrest the life away; no wound ravishes it in the agony of death; the breath-passage stopped, it suffers its end shut up in the prison of the body. As she struggles, the victor presses hard on her with knee and foot, stabs her through the ribs and pierces the heaving flanks. Then from the dead body she takes the spoils. Dirty bits of unwrought gold, stuff not yet purified in the furnace,^a worm-eaten money-bags, coins green with rust, things long hoarded, the conqueress scatters, distributing them to the needy, giving gifts to the poor of what she has taken. Then with a look of exultation she turns her eyes on the ring around her and eagerly calls out amid the thousands: "Doff your armour, ye upright, and lay your weapons aside. The cause of all our ill lies slain. Now that the lust of gain is dead, the pure may rest. 'Tis the deepest rest to wish for nought beyond what due need calls for, simple fare and one garment to cover

PRUDENTIUS

infirmos tegat ac recreet mediocriter artus expletumque modum naturae non trahat extra.
 ingressurus iter peram ne tollito, neve de tunicae alterius gestamine providus ito, nec te sollicitet res crastina, ne cibus alvo 615 defuerit: redeunt escae cum sole diurnae.
 nonne vides ut nulla avium cras cogitet ac se pascendam, praestante Deo, non anxia credat?
 confidunt volucres victum non defore viles, passeribusque subest modico venalibus asse 620 indubitata fides Dominum curare potentem ne pereant. tu, cura Dei, facies quoque Christi, addubitas ne te tuus umquam deserat auctor?
 ne trepidate, homines; vitae dator et dator escae
 est.
 quaerite luciferum caelesti dogmate pastum, 625
 qui spem multiplicans alat invitiabilis aevi, corporis inmemores: memor est qui condidit illud subpeditare cibos atque indiga membra fovere." his dictis curae emotae, Metus et Labor et Vis et Scelus et placitae fidei Fraus infitrix 630 depulsae vertere solum. Pax inde fugatis hostibus alma abigit bellum, discingitur omnis terror et avulsis exfibulat ilia zonis.
 vestis ad usque pedes descendens defluit imos, temperat et rapidum privata modestia gressum. 635 cornicinum curva aera silent, placabilis inplet vaginam gladius, sedato et pulvere campi suda redit facies liquidae sine nube diei, purpuream videas caeli clarescere lucem.

" Cf. Matthew vi, 26-34; x, 9-10, 29.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

and refresh our weak bodies in moderation, and when nature's measure is satisfied, draw us on no farther. When thou art going on a journey, carry no wallet, nor take thought, when thou goest, for another tunic to wear. And be not anxious about the morrow, lest thy belly lack food; bread for the day comes duly with the sun. Seest thou not how no bird thinks of tomorrow, but rests untroubled in the faith that it will be fed by God's provision? The fowls of the air, which are so cheap, trust that food will not fail; the sparrows which are sold for a humble farthing have a sure and certain faith that the mighty Lord cares for them, that they perish not. And thou, who art God's care and the image of Christ, dost thou fear thy creator will ever desert thee? Be not anxious, O men! He who gives life gives food also. Seek ye in heavenly teaching the food that brings light and that shall nourish and enlarge the hope of a life incorruptible, forgetting the body. He who made it is mindful to furnish it with food and to care for the needs of its members." ^a

At these words their troubles departed. Fear and Suffering and Violence, Crime and Fraud that denies accepted faith, were driven away and fled from the land. Then kindly Peace, her enemies now routed, banishes war. All the dread-inspiring gear is doffed; they unclasp their sides, pulling off their belts; their robes fall flowing down to their feet and a civilian sobriety moderates their quick step. The trumpeters' curved brasses are silent, the sword returns in peace to its scabbard, the dust settles down on the field, the bright face of clear cloudless day comes back, and light from heaven begins to shine resplendent to the view. The squadrons,

PRUDENTIUS

agmina casta super vultum sensere Tonantis 640 adridere hilares pulso certamine turmae, et Christum gaudere suis victoribus arce aetheris ac patrium famulis aperire profundum.
 dat signum felix Concordia reddere castris victrices aquilas atque in tentoria cogi. 645 numquam tanta fuit species nec par decus ulli militiae, cum dispositis bifida agmina longe duceret ordinibus peditum psallente caterva, ast alia de parte equitum resonantibus hymnis.
 non aliter cecinit respectans victor hiantem 650 Istrahel rabiem ponti post terga minacis, cum iam progrediens calcaret litora sicco ulteriora pede, stridensque per extima calcis mons rueret pendentis aquae nigrosque relapso gurgite Nilicolas fundo deprenderet imo, 655 ac refluxente sinu iam redderet unda natatum piscibus et nudas praeceps operiret harenas.
 pulsavit resono modulantia tympana plectro turba Dei celebrans mirum ac memorabile saeculis omnipotentis opus, liquidas inter freta ripas 660 fluctibus incisis et subsistente procella crescere suspensosque globos potuisse teneri.
 sic expugnata Vitiorum gente resultant mystica dulcimodis Virtutum carmina psalmis.
 ventum erat ad fauces portae castrens, ubi artum 665
 liminis introitum bifori dant cardine claustra.
 nascitur hic inopina Mali lacrimabilis astu tempestas, placidae turbatrix invida Pacis,

^a Cf. Revelation iii, 21.

^b Cf. Exodus xv, 1-21.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

gladdened by the ending of contention, see the face of the Thunderer smiling on their unstained forces from above, and Christ in the height rejoicing in the victory of his followers and opening for his servants his Father's home in the deep of heaven.^a In happiness Concord gives the signal to take the victorious standards back to camp and return to their tents. Never did army look so fine, so glorious, as she led her troops in double column with ranks in long array, the regiment of foot singing as they marched, while on the other side rang out the horse-men's hymns. Just so sang victorious Israel, looking back on the yawning gulf of the sea that raged menacingly behind them, when now in their onward march they were treading the further shore dry-foot, as the hanging mountain of water crashed down hissing at their very heels and the flood falling back caught in the depths the dark-skinned people of the Nile, letting the fish swim again in the hollow as it filled, and with a rush covered the sand that had been bared. God's company beat loud the rhythmic timbrels to celebrate the marvellous work of the Almighty, a work to be told to all generations, how banks of water were able to rise up with sea on either hand, cutting a path through the waves while the wind stayed, and the masses to be held poised on either side.^b So when the race of Vices was subdued the Virtues' holy songs rang out in sweet, melodious psalms.

They had reached the pass of the camp-gate, where the double-doored barrier swings open to afford a narrow way of entrance; and here arises a storm unlooked for, through the cunning of a woeful Evil, to spite and trouble calm Peace and disturb quae tantum subita vexaret clade triumphum.

PRUDENTIUS

 inter confertos cuneos Concordia forte 670 dum stipata pedem iam tutis moenibus infert, excipit occultum Vitii latitantis ab ictu mucronem laevo in latere, squalentia quamvis texta catenato ferri subtegmine corpus ambirent sutis et acumen vulneris hamis 675 respuerent, rigidis nec fila tenacia nodis inpactum sinerent penetrare in viscera telum.
 rara tamen chalybem tenui transmittere puncto commissura dedit, qua sese extrema politae squama ligat tunicae sinus et sibi conserit oras. 680 intulit hoc vulnus pugnatrix subdola victae partis et incautis victoribus insidiata est.
 nam pulsa Culparum acie Discordia nostros intrarat cuneos sociam mentita figuram.
 scissa procul palla structum et serpente flagellum 685 multiplici media camporum in strage iacebant.
 ipsa redimitos olea frondente capillos ostentans festis respondet laeta choreis.
 sed sicam sub veste tegit, te, maxima Virtus, te solam tanto e numero, Concordia, tristi 690 fraude petens. sed non vitalia rumpere sacri corporis est licitum, summo tenus extima tactu laesa cutis tenuem signavit sanguine rivum.
 exclamat Virtus subito turbata: "quid hoc est?
 quae manus hic inimica latet, quae prospera nostra 695
 vulnerat et ferrum tanta inter gaudia vibrat?
 quid iuvat indomitos bello sedasse Furores et sanctum Vitiis pereuntibus omne receptum,

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

the great triumph with a sudden disaster. Concord, thronged in the press of close-packed companies, just as she is setting foot within the safety of the ramparts, receives a treacherous thrust in her left side from the stroke of a lurking Vice, albeit the stiff fabric of iron chain-mail covered her body and with its links repelled the deadly point, and the firm, hard-knotted strands did not suffer the weight of the blow to reach the flesh; yet an open joint let the steel pass through with a slight prick, just where the last scale is fastened to the bright cuirass and the breast-piece connected with the skirt. Such the wound that the crafty defender of the beaten side inflicted, lying in wait to take the victors off their guard. For, when the Vices' army was driven off, Discord had entered our ranks wearing the counterfeited shape of a friend. Her torn mantle and her whip of many snakes were left lying far behind amid the heaps of dead on the field of battle, while she herself, displaying her hair wreathed with leafy olive, answered cheerfully the joyous revellers. But she has a dagger hidden under her raiment, seeking to attack thee, thou greatest of Virtues, thee alone, Concord, of all this number, with bitter treachery. Yet was she not permitted to pierce the vital parts of thy sacred body; only the skin was hurt with a mere touch on the surface, and showed the mark of but a slight stream of blood. "What means this?" cries the Virtue, thus unexpectedly disturbed. "What enemy's hand is hidden here, that stabs our victory and launches its weapon amid our great rejoicing? What boots it by war to have reduced the ungovernable Passions and brought the good back without loss, while the Vices perished, if a Virtue

PRUDENTIUS

si Virtus sub pace cadit? "trepida agmina maestos
 convertere oculos: stillabat vulneris index 700 ferrata de veste cruor, mox et pavor hostem comminus adstantem prodit; nam pallor in ore conscius audacis facti dat signa reatus et deprensa tremunt languens manus et color albens.
 circumstat propere strictis mucronibus omnis 705 Virtutum legio exquirens fervente tumultu et genus et nomen, patriam sectamque, Deumque quem colat et missu cuiatis venerit. illa exsanguis turbante metu: "Discordia dicor, cognomento Heresis; Deus est mihi discolor," inquit, 710
 "nunc minor, aut maior, modo duplex et modo
 simplex,
 cum placet, aërius et de phantasmate visus, aut innata anima est quoties volo ludere numen;
 praeceptor Belia mihi, domus et plaga mundus."
 non tulit ulterius capti blasphemia monstri 715 Virtutum regina Fides, sed verba loquentis inpedit et vocis claudit spiramina pilo, pollutam rigida transfigens cuspidem linguam.
 carpitur innumeris feralis bestia dextris;
 frustatim sibi quisque rapit quod spargat in
 auras, 720
 quod canibus donet, corvis quod edacibus ultro offerat, immundis caeno exhalante cloacis quod trumat, monstribus quod mandat habere marinis.
 discissum foedis animalibus omne cadaver dividitur, ruptis Heresis perit horrida membris. 725

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

falls in time of peace? ” The ranks in alarm turned sorrowing eyes upon her, and there was the tell-tale blood dripping from the armoured coat! Then fear betrays the foe as she stands close by, for the pallid cheek shows consciousness of the outrage and gives proof of guilt, and the limp hand and white face tremble at discovery. Quickly with drawn swords the whole army of the Virtues surrounds her, asking in an uproar of excitement her race and name, her country and her faith, what God she worships, of what nation he that sent her. And she, all pale with upsetting fear, says: “ I am called Discord, and my other name is Heresy. The God I have is variable, now lesser, now greater, now double, now single; when I please, he is unsubstantial, a mere apparition, or again the soul within us, when I choose to make a mock of his divinity.^a My teacher is Belial, my home and country the world.” No further did Faith, the Virtues’ queen, bear with the outrageous prisoner’s blasphemies, but stopped her speech and blocked the passage of her voice with a javelin, driving its hard point through the foul tongue. Countless hands tear the deadly beast in pieces, each seizing bits to scatter to the breezes, or throw to the dogs, or proffer to the devouring carrion crows, or thrust into the foul, stinking sewers, or give to the sea-monsters for their own. The whole corpse is torn asunder and parcelled out to unclean creatures; so perishes frightful Heresy, rent limb from limb.

^a These expressions indicate heretical beliefs with which Prudentius deals in the Apotheosis and Hamartigenia. Cf. Apoth. 255 ff. (minor, maior), Ham. 1-16, etc. (duplex), Apoth. 178 ff. (simplex), 952 ff. (phantasma). Innata anima seems to refer to the doctrine treated at Apoth. 820 ff., that the soul is a very part of God.

PRUDENTIUS

compositis igitur rerum morumque secundis in commune bonis, postquam ¹ intra tuta morari contigit ac statione frui valloque foveri pacificos Sensus, et in otia solvere curas,¹ exstruitur media castrorum sede tribunal 730 editiore loco, tumulus quem vertice acuto excitat in speculam, subiecta unde omnia late liber inoffenso circum inspicit aëre visus.
 hunc sincera Fides simul et Concordia, sacro foedere iuratae Christi sub amore sorores, 735 conscendunt apicem; mox et sublime tribunal par sanctum carumque sibi supereminet aequo iure potestatis, consistunt aggere summo conspicuae populosque iubent adstare frequentes.
 concurrunt alacres castris ex omnibus omnes, 740 nulla latet pars Mentis iners, quae corporis ullo intercepta sinu per conceptacula sese degeneri languore tegat, tentoria apertis cuncta patent velis, reserantur carbasa, ne quis marceat obscuro stertens habitator operto. 745 auribus intentis expectant contio, quidnam victores post bella vocet Concordia princeps, quam velit atque Fides Virtutibus addere legem.
 erumpit prima in vocem Concordia tali adloquio: "cumulata quidem iam gloria vobis, 750 o Patris, o Domini fidissima pignera Christi, contigit: extincta est multo certamine saeva barbaries, sanctae quae circumsaepserat urbis indigenas, ferroque viros flammaque premebat.

¹ The 6th-century MS. A and some others have in commune bonis, tranquillae plebis ad unum sensibus in tuta valli statione locatis exstruitur, etc.

The 7th-century MS. is not available for lines 668–892.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

So now that a fair and happy state of circumstance and life has been established over all, now ^a that the peaceable Sentiments can dwell in security under the protection of guard-post and rampart, and find relief in relaxation of their cares,^a a platform is set up at the midmost point of the camp on an elevated ground, a peak-topped hillock rising to make a look-out whence the eye can freely range afar on every side without obstruction. To this projection mounts honest Faith and, with her, Concord, sisters sworn in holy alliance in the love of Christ. Then the sacred pair, dear to each other, take their stand together towering above the lofty platform, for their authority is equal; and from their prominent place on the summit of the rising ground they bid the people attend them in their numbers. All assemble briskly from the whole camp. No member of Soul lurks in idleness, shut off in a pocket of the body and lying close in some retreat in ignoble sloth. All tents stand exposed, their curtains drawn back, the canvas open, so that no dweller therein shall lie lazily asleep in undiscovered secrecy. With ears alert the assemblage waits to hear for what cause its leader Concord summons the victors now that war is over, or what new rule Faith will lay on the Virtues. Concord first breaks into speech with these words: "Abundant glory has come to you, ye faithful children of the Father and of Christ our Lord. With a great struggle have you wiped out the cruel savages that had beset the dwellers in the holy city round about with hard pressure of fire and sword.

^a With the text of A etc. "now that the folk is at peace and every Sentiment, down to the last, settled safely behind the protection of the rampart."

PRUDENTIUS

publica sed requies privatis rure foroque 755 constat amicitii: scissura domestica turbat rem populi, titubaturque foris quod dissidet intus.
 ergo cavete, viri, ne sit sententia discors Sensibus in nostris, ne secta exotica tectis nascatur conflata odiis, quia fissa voluntas 760 confundit variis arcana biformia fibris.
 quod sapimus coniungat amor; quod vivimus uno conspiret studio: nil dissociabile firmum est.
 utque homini atque Deo medius intervenit Iesus, qui sociat mortale Patri, ne carnea distent 765 Spiritui aeterno sitque ut Deus unus utrumque, sic, quidquid gerimus mentisque et corporis actu, spiritus unimodis texat compagibus unus.
 pax plenum Virtutis opus, pax summa laborum, pax belli exacti pretium est pretiumque periculi. 770 sidera pace vigent, consistunt terrea pace.
 nil placitum sine pace Deo: non munus ad aram cum cupias offerre probat, si turbida fratrem mens inpacati sub pectoris oderit antro, nec, si flammicomis Christi pro nomine martyr 775 ignibus insilias servans inamabile votum bile sub obliqua, pretiosam proderit Iesu inpendisse animam, meriti quia clausula pax est.
 non inflata tumet, non invidet aemula fratri, omnia perpetitur patiens atque omnia credit, 780 nunquam laesa dolet, cuncta offensacula donat,

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

But the nation's peace depends on good will between its citizens in field and town. Division at home upsets the common weal and difference within means faltering abroad. Therefore be on the watch, my soldiers, that there be no discordant thought among our Sentiments, that no foreign faction arise in us from the occasion of hidden quarrels; for a divided will creates disorder in our inmost nature, making two parties in a heart at variance. Let our understanding be united by love, our life be in accord in a single aim; where there is separation there is no strength. And just as Jesus mediates between man and God, uniting mortality with the Father so that the fleshly shall not be separated from the eternal Spirit and that one God shall be both, so let one spirit shape in single structure all that we do by action of soul and body. Peace is the fulfilment of a Virtue's work, peace the sum and substance of her toils, peace the reward for war now ended and for peril faced. It is by peace that the stars live and move, by peace that earthly things stand firm. Without peace nothing is pleasing to God. When thou desirest to offer a gift at the altar, it is not acceptable to Him if thy soul is angry and hates thy brother in the depths of a heart unreconciled; and if in martyrdom for the name of Christ thou shouldst leap into the fire with its tresses of flame, while from spiteful wrath thou dost still keep some uncharitable desire, it will not profit thee to have sacrificed thy precious life to Jesus, for it is peace that is the perfection of merit. It is not puffed up with pride, it feels no jealous envy of a brother; it endures all things with long-suffering, believes all things. It bears wrong without resentment, it forgives all occasum lucis venia praecurrere gestit, anxia ne stabilem linquat sol conscius iram.

PRUDENTIUS

 quisque litare Deo mactatis vult holocaustis, offerat in primis pacem: nulla hostia Christo 785 dulcior: hoc solo sancta ad donaria vultum munere convertens liquido ¹ oblectatur odore.
 sed tamen et niveis tradit Deus ipse columbis pinnatum tenera plumarum veste colubrum rimante ingenio docte internoscere mixtum 790 innocuis avibus; latet et lupus ore cruento lacteolam mentitus ovem sub vellere molli, cruda per agninos exercens funera rictus.
 hac sese occultat Photinus et Arrius arte, inmanes feritate lupi. discrimina produnt 795 nostra recensque cruor, quamvis de corpore summo, quid possit furtiva manus." gemitum dedit omnis
 Virtutum populus casu concussus acerbo.
 tum generosa Fides haec subdidit: "immo secundis
 in rebus cesset gemitus. Concordia laesa est, 800 sed defensa Fides: quin et Concordia sospes, germanam comitata Fidem, sua vulnera ridet.
 haec mea sola salus, nihil hac mihi triste recepta.
 unum opus egregio restat post bella labori,
 o proceres, regni quod tandem pacifer heres 805 belligeri, armatae successor inermus et aulae, instituit Solomon, quoniam genitoris anhel fumarat calido regum de sanguine dextra.

¹ puro in the 6th-century MS.

^a Both taught heretical doctrines with regard to the Trinity.
 The name of the latter is more familiar as Arius.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

offences; it is eager to pardon before daylight sinks, uneasy lest the conscious sun leave behind it an enduring anger. Whosoever would worship God acceptably with whole burnt offerings, let him above all offer peace. No sacrifice is sweeter to Christ; it is this gift alone that pleases Him with a pure aroma when He turns his face towards the holy altar. Yet God himself gives the snow-white doves the skill to know, with sense that looks beneath the surface, the winged snake in its dress of soft, downy feathers, when it mingles with the harmless birds. The wolf, too, with his gory jaws, conceals himself in a soft fleece, counterfeiting a milk-white sheep, while he carries on his bloody murders by devouring the lambs. It is by this device that Photinus and Arrius^a disguise themselves, those wolves so wild and savage. This danger to me, and this fresh bleeding, superficial though it be, show what a stealthy hand can do." A cry of sorrow arose from all the nation of the Virtues in their agitation at the grievous mischance. Then noble Faith added these words: "Nay, let there be no cry of sorrow in our hour of victory. Concord has been hurt, but Faith defended. Indeed Concord has been saved, and standing by her sister Faith, laughs at her wounds. She is my sole salvation; with her rescue there is nought to cast me down. One task alone, ye captains, now that war is over, remains for a noble effort to perform; the task that Solomon, the peaceful heir of a warlike throne, the unarmed successor to an armed court, set on foot, since his father panted from the slaughter and his hand reeked of the warm blood of kings.^b For it is when ^b Cf. 1 Chronicles xxviii, 2-3; 1 Kings v, 2-5.

PRUDENTIUS

sanguine nam terso templum fundatur et ara ponitur auratis Christi domus ardua tectis. 810 tunc Hierusalem templo inlustrata quietum suscepit iam diva Deum, circumvaga postquam sedit marmoreis fundata altaribus arca.
 surgat et in nostris templum venerabile castris, omnipotens cuius sanctorum sancta revisat. 815 nam quid terrigenas ferro pepulisse phalangas Culparum prodest, hominis si Filius arce aetheris inlapsus purgati corporis urbem intret inornatam templi splendentis egenus?
 hactenus alternis sudatum est comminus armis: 820 munia nunc agitet tacitae toga candida pacis, atque sacris sedem properet discincta iuventus."
 haec ubi dicta dedit, gradibus regina superbis desiluit tantique operis Concordia consors metatura novum iacto fundamine templum. 825 aurea planitiem spatiis percurrit harundo dimensis, quadrent ut quattuor undique frontes, ne commissuris distantibus angulus inpar argutam mutilet per dissona semetra normam.
 Aurorae de parte tribus plaga lucida portis 830 inlustrata patet, triplex aperitur ad austrum portarum numerus, tris occidualibus offert ianua trina fores, totiens aquilonis ad axem panditur alta domus. nullum illic structile saxum,
 sed cava per solidum multoque forata dolatu 835
 gemma relucenti limen conplectitur arcu, vestibulumque lapis penetrabile concipit unus.
 portarum summis inscripta in postibus auro

^a Cf. Revelation xxi, 15. In what follows, Prudentius draws many details from the description of the New Jerusalem in that chapter.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

blood is cleansed that a temple is built and an altar set up in an house adorned with gold, to be the majestic home of Christ. Then it was that Jerusalem was made glorious with her temple and, herself now divine, received her God to rest there, now that the homeless Ark was established in its place on the marble altar. In our camp too let a sacred temple arise, that the Almighty may visit its holy of holies. For what does it profit to have driven back with the sword the earth-born regiments of the Sins, if the Son of Man coming down from high heaven and entering the city of the cleansed body finds it unadorned and lacks a shining temple? Hitherto have we laboured hard in close battle one after another; now let the white plain dress of quiet peace be active in its tasks, and our soldiers unharnessed hasten to build an abode for holy worship."

So speaking, with majestic step descended the queen and Concord, her partner in the great work, to lay out the new temple and set its foundation. Her golden reed ^a runs over the ground measuring out the distances, so that the four sides shall square every way and the junctures be true, leaving no unequal angle to mar the neatness of the plan by breaking its harmonious regularity. On the side of the dawn stretches clear a quarter lit up by three gates; three gates open towards the south; three entrances present three doors to the west; and as many openings does the lofty house show towards the pole of the north. No building-stone is there, but a single gem, a block through which much hewing has pierced a passage, frames the doorway with a shining arch, and a single stone forms the entrance-court. On the tops of the gateways gleam the nomina apostolici fulgent bis sena senatus.

PRUDENTIUS

 Spiritus his titulis arcana recondita Mentis 840 ambit et electos vocat in praecordia Sensus;
 quaque hominis natura viget, quam corpore toto quadrua vis animat, trinis ingressibus aram cordis adit castisque colit sacraria votis; seu pueros sol primus agat, seu fervor ephebos 845 incendat nimius, seu consummabilis aevi perficiat lux plena viros, sive algida Borrae aetas decrepitam vocet ad pia sacra senectam, occurrit trinum quadrina ad compita nomen, quod bene discipulis disponit rex duodenis. 850
 quin etiam totidem gemmarum insignia textis parietibus distincta micant, animasque colorum viventes liquido lux evomit alta profundo.
 ingens chrysolitus, nativo interlitus auro, hinc sibi sapphirum sociaverat, inde beryllum, 855 distantesque nitor medius variabat honores.
 hic chalcedon hebes perfunditur ex hyacinthi lumine vicino; nam forte cyanea propter stagna lapis cohibens ostro fulgebat aquoso.
 sardonice pingunt amethystina, pingit iaspis 860
 sardium iuxta adpositum pulcherque topazon.
 has inter species smaragdina gramine verno prata virent volvitque vagos lux herbida fluctus.
 te quoque conspicuum structura interserit, ardens

^a The four sides of the square temple represent here the four ages of man which are described in lines 845-48.

^b Compita here is the area covered by the temple (including the temple itself) into which ways lead from the four directions. Trebatius (a jurist and a younger contemporary of Cicero) as quoted by Servius "Danielis" in a note on Virgil (Georgics, II, 383) defines compita as a place into which, or from which, twelve names of the apostolic senate inscribed in gold. With these inscriptions the Spirit encircles the unseen privacy of Soul, calling elect Sentiments into the heart; and at whatever side is man's life,^a whose bodily temper is given by a four-fold force, it approaches the altar in the heart by three avenues and with pure desires honours its sanctuary; whether it be the brisk dawn of childhood, or the strong burning heat of youth, or the broad day of the man's full maturity, or the chill time of north wind calling feeble age to its devotions, three names present themselves at this meeting-place of ways on each of its four sides,^b where the King sets them out in honour of his twelve disciples. And more, the same number of gems, set singly in the fabric of the walls, sparkle conspicuously, and out of their clear depths the light from on high pours living, breathing colours. A great chrysolite, speckled with natural gold, had partnered with it on one side a sapphire, on the other a beryl, and the lustre between them gave varying tones to the beauties it parted. Here a dull chalcedony is flooded with colour from the light of its neighbour jacinth; for as it chanced that stone with the dark depths imprisoned within it was shining near by with its pellucid flash of crimson. The amethyst's hue tinges the sardonyx, jasper and fair topaz the sardius set beside them. Amid these beauties are emeralds like grassy meadows in the spring, whose green light rolls out ever-changing waves. Thou too, gleaming chrysoprase, hast a conspicuous place in the structure, ways lead from, or in, a number of directions, either with or without an altar, and either roofed over or in the open, and in which the people of a country district meet together.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

PRUDENTIUS

chrysopræse, et sidus saxi stellantibus addit. 865 stridebat gravidis funalis machina vinctis immensas rapiens alta ad fastigia gemmas.
 at domus interior septem subnixâ columnis crystalli argenti vitrea de rupe recisis construitur, quarum tegit edita calculus albens 870 in conum caesus capita et sinuamine subter subductus conchæ in speciem, quod mille talentis margaritum ingens, opibusque et censibus hastæ addictis, animosa Fides mercata pararat.
 hoc residet solio pollens Sapiëntia et omne 875 consilium regni celsa disponit ab aula, tutandique hominis leges sub corde retractat.
 in manibus dominae sceptrum non arte politum sed ligno vivum viridi est, quod stirpe recisum,¹ quamvis nullus alat terreni caespitis umor, 880 fronde tamen viret incolumi, tum sanguine tinctis intertextâ rosis candentia lilia miscet nescia marcenti florem submittere collo.
 huius forma fuit sceptri gestamen Aaron floriferum, sicco quod germina cortice trudens 885 explicuit tenerum spe pubescente decorem inque novos subito tumuit virga arida fetus.
 reddimus aeternas, indulgentissime doctor, grates, Christe, tibi, meritosque sacramus honores ore pio; nam cor vitiorum stercore sordet. 890 tu nos corporei latebrosa pericula operti luctantisque animæ voluisti agnoscere casus.
 novimus ancipites nebuloso in pectore sensus

¹ Bergman reads reciso with the 6th-century MS.

^a The identification of the precious stones is often dubious. The names used in the Authorised Version of Revelation xxi are here retained, but sapphirus is certainly lapis lazuli and hyacinthus is sapphire.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

thy star is added to the glittering stones. The crane was creaking with the weight on its chains as it whirled the vast gems up to the heights.^a An inner chamber, too, is constructed, which rests on seven pillars^b cut from a glassy rock of ice-like crystal and topped with a white stone cut cone-wise and curved on the lower part into the likeness of a shell, a great pearl to buy which Faith had boldly sold at auction all her substance and her property, and paid for it a thousand talents.^c Here mighty Wisdom sits enthroned and from her high court sets in order all the government of her realm, meditating in her heart laws to safeguard mankind. In the sovereign's hands is a sceptre, not finished with craftsman's skill but a living rod of green wood; severed from its stock, it draws no nurture from moist earthly soil, yet puts forth perfect foliage and with blooms of blood-red roses intermingles white lilies that never droop on withering stem. This is the sceptre that was prefigured by the flowering rod that Aaron carried, which, pushing buds out of its dry bark, unfolded a tender grace with burgeoning hope, and the parched twig suddenly swelled into new fruits.^d

We give to Thee, O Christ, Thou tenderest of teachers, unending thanks and offer to Thee the honour that is thy due with loyal lips—for our heart is foul with the filth of sin. Thou didst wish us to learn the dangers that lurk unseen within the body, and the vicissitudes of our soul's struggle. We know that in the darkness of our heart conflicting affections

^b Cf. Proverbs ix, 1.

^c Cf. Matthew xiii, 45-46.

^d Cf. Numbers xvii, 6-8.

PRUDENTIUS

sudare alternis conflictibus, et variato pugnarum eventu nunc indole crescere dextra, 895 nunc inclinatis virtutibus ¹ ad iuga vitae deteriora trahi seseque addicere noxis turpibus et propriae iacturam ferre salutis.
 o quotiens animam, vitiorum peste repulsa, sensimus incaluisse Deo! quotiens tepefactum 900 caeleste ingenium post gaudia candida taetro cessisse stomacho! fervent bella horrida, fervent ossibus inclusa, fremit et discordibus armis non simplex natura hominis; nam viscera limo effigiata premunt animam, contra ille sereno 905 editus adflatu nigrantis carcere cordis aestuat, et sordes arta inter vincla recusat.
 spiritibus pugnant variis lux atque tenebrae, distantesque animat duplex substantia vires, donec praesidio Christus Deus adsit et omnes 910 virtutum gemmas conponat sede piata, atque, ubi peccatum regnaverat, aurea templi atria constituens texat spectamine morum ornamenta animae, quibus oblectata decoro aeternum solio dives Sapientia regnet. 915

¹ Some MSS. have cervicibus.

THE FIGHT FOR MANSOUL

fight hard in successive combats and, as the fortune of battle varies, now grow strong in goodness of disposition and again, when the virtues are worsted, are dragged away to live in bondage to the worse, making themselves the slaves of shameful sins, and content to suffer the loss of their salvation. How often, when the plaguing sins have been driven away, have we felt our soul aglow with the presence of God, how often, after these pure joys, felt our heavenly nature grow cool and yield to foul desire! Savage war rages hotly, rages within our bones, and man's two-sided nature is in an uproar of rebellion; for the flesh that was formed of clay bears down upon the spirit, but again the spirit that issued from the pure breath of God is hot within the dark prison-house of the heart, and even in its close bondage rejects the body's filth. Light and darkness with their opposing spirits are at war, and our two-fold being inspires powers at variance with each other, until Christ our God comes to our aid, orders all the jewels of the virtues in a pure setting, and where sin formerly reigned builds the golden courts of his temple, creating for the soul, out of the trial of its conduct, ornaments for rich Wisdom to find delight in as she reigns for ever on her beauteous throne.

CONTRA ORATIONEM SYMMACHI

LIBER I

PRAEFATIO

PAULUS, praeco Dei, qui fera gentium primus corda sacro perdomuit stilo, Christum per populos ritibus asperis inmanes placido dogmate seminans, inmansueta suas ut cerimonias 5 gens pagana Deo sperneret agnito, actus turbinibus forte nigerrimis hibernum pelagus iam rate debili et vim navifragi pertulerat noti.
sed cum caerulei proelia gurgitis 10 iussisset Domini dextra quiescere, ad portum fluitans cumba relabitur exponitque solo litoris uvidi contractos pluvio frigore remiges.
tunc de litoreis saepibus algidi 15 arentum propere bracchia palmitum convectant rapidos unde focus struant :
fascem quisque suum congerit ignibus expectans calidi luxuriam rogi.
Paulus, dum fragiles cogere surculos 20 et densere foci congeriem studet, incautam cumulis inseruit manum, torpebat glacie pigra ubi vipera

A REPLY TO THE ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS^a

BOOK I

PREFACE

PAUL, the herald of God, who first with his holy pen subdued the wild hearts of the Gentiles and with his peaceable teaching propagated the knowledge of Christ over barbarous nations that followed savage ways, so that the untamed pagan race might come to know God and reject its own rituals, chanced once to be driven before a black tempest and with his ship disabled endured a stormy sea and a furious, wrecking wind. But when the Lord's hand made the dark, warring waters sink to rest, the vessel, still afloat, glided into a haven and on the wet shore disembarked her crew all pinched with cold and rain; and then, shivering the while, they hastily gathered dry, branching shoots from bushes by the shore to make a vehement blaze, each one, as he piled his bundle on the flames, looking to enjoy the warmth of the bonfire. Paul, busily gathering brittle twigs and pressing them on the burning heap, put an unwary hand into the pile, where a viper had been ^a See Introduction, pp. x-xii.

PRUDENTIUS

sarmentis laqueos corporis implicans.
 quae postquam intepuit fomite fumeo 25 laxavitque ferox colla rigentia, iam flecti facilis, rettulit ad manum vibrato capite spicula dentium.
 haerentem digiti vulnere mordicus pendentemque gerens Paulus inhorruit. 30 exclamant alii, quod cute livida virus mortiferum serpere crederent.
 at non intrepidum terret apostolum tristis tam subiti forma periculi.
 adtollens oculos sidera suspicit 35 Christum sub tacito pectore murmurans, excussumque procul discutit aspidem.
 abiectus coluber verberat aëra atque oris patuli solvit acumina.
 mox omnis sanies deserit et dolor 40 ceu nullo laceram vulnere dexteram, siccatusque perit vipereus liquor.
 hydrum praecipitem dum rotat inpetus, arsurum mediis intulit ignibus.
 sic nunc post hiemem vimque trucidis freti, 45 quo iactata ratis tunc Sapientiae est, cum sub sacricolis territa regibus vix panso poterat currere carbaso afflictosque suos turbine saeculi vectarat rabidis fluctibus innatans, 50 morsum vulnificum lex pia pertulit.
 occultabat enim se prius abditum virus nec gravidum protulerat caput, contentum involucris atque cubilibus subter conprimere clausa silentia. 55 sed, dum forte latens impietas riget, dextram Iustitiae pigra momorderat

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

lying torpid and benumbed with the frost, its body twined in coils about the sticks; and now that it was warmed up by the smoking fire and got its stiff neck loosened it grew fierce again, and with its suppleness restored it poised its head and struck at his hand with its sharp teeth. Paul shuddered as he lifted it while it clung to the wound in his finger, hanging on by its bite. Others cried out, for they supposed the deadly venom was spreading and discolouring the skin; but the apostle was undaunted; the sudden peril in this grim shape did not affright him. Raising his eyes, he looked up to heaven, silently uttering the name of Christ in his heart, and shook the reptile off and cast it from him, and the snake, as he threw it off, lashing the air opened its mouth and released its fangs. Then all the tainted blood and the pain vanished from the hand as though no wound had torn it, and the viper's venom dried up and disappeared. The forceful toss sent the serpent whirling into the midst of the fire to burn.

So in our day, after the storm and violence of the angry sea whereon Wisdom's barque was driven about, what time she was put in fear under idolatrous rulers and could scarce run with canvas spread, and the people she carried as she floated over the raging waves were in distress from the storm of the world, her holy law suffered a bite that wounded it. For the poison had been lurking hitherto in secret, nor put forth its virulent head, but had been content to lie wrapped up deep in its lair and keep close silence; but while Impiety was lying stiff and unperceived, numb as it was, it bit the hand of Righteousness, for its gall was inflamed and it was heated with succensi stomacho fellis inaestuans. heu, quam catholicam nil prope profuit puppem nasse sacri remigio stili quem Paulus variis gentibus edidit!	60

PRUDENTIUS

vix portu placido tuta quieverat victrix edomitis mille furoribus, vix adstricta suis iam retinaculis vectores stabili condiderat solo :	65
erumpit subito triste periculum. nam dum praecalidos igniculos sibi solvendis adolent et senio et gelu, dum virgas steriles atque superfluas flammis de fidei palmite concremant,	70
ut concreta vagis vinea crinibus silvosi inluviem poneret idoli, palpavit nimius perniciem tepor. seps insueta subit serpere flexibus et vibrare sagax eloquii caput :	75
sed dextra inpatiens vulneris inritos oris rhetorici depulit halitus ; effusum ingenii virus inaniter summa Christicolis in cute substitit.
Salvator generis Romulei, precor, qui cunctis veniam das pereuntibus, qui nullum statuis non operis tui mortalem, facili quem relevas manu, huius, si potis est, iam miserescito	80
praeruptam in foveam praecipitis viri. spirat sacrilegis flatibus inscius erroresque suos indocilis foveat. obtestor, iubeas ne citus inpetus arsurum mediis inferat ignibus.	85

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

rage. Alas, how all but bootless it has been that the Catholic barque has swum the seas under the oarage of the holy writings that Paul put forth to many nations! Scarce had she come to rest in safety in the calm haven after her victory over a thousand wild storms, scarce had she been made fast with her mooring-ropes and landed her passengers on firm ground, when suddenly the grim peril burst forth. For while they were making hot fires to relieve their weariness and cold, burning in the flames the barren and useless shoots from the vine of the faith,^a which had grown into a thick mass of gadding tresses, to rid it of its rank forest-growth of idolatry, the all too warm caress of the heat brought the plague to life. The snake began to creep and twine anew and poise a head that was skilled in speech. But a hand that no wound can hurt turned aside the vain breathings of that eloquent mouth;^b its poisonous talent was poured out without effect and stopped short on the surface of the Christians' skin.

O Saviour of the race of Romulus, who dost grant thy grace to all that are perishing and dost establish as a work of thine every mortal whom with ready hand Thou raisest up, I pray Thee, if it may be, have compassion now on this man who has fallen into a sheer pit. Unwittingly he breathes impiety, and in his ignorance clings to his errors. I beseech Thee, command that a swift toss shall not send him into the midst of the fire to burn.

^a This probably refers to the condemnation of heresies by the Council called by Theodosius I at Constantinople in 381.

^b Prudentius admits the oratorical pre-eminence of Symmachus.

PRUDENTIUS

CREDEBAM vitiis aegram gentilibus urbem iam satis antiqui pepulisse pericula morbi nec quidquam restare mali, postquam medicina principis inmodicos sedarat in arce dolores.
sed quoniam renovata lues turbare salutem 5 temptat Romulidum, patris inploranda ^{medella}
est,
ne sinat antiquo Romam squalere veterno
neve togas procerum fumoque et sanguine tingui.
inclitus ergo parens patriae, moderator et orbis, nil egit prohibendo vagas ne pristinus error 10 crederet esse deum nigrante sub aëre formas, aut elementorum naturam, quae Patris ars est omnigeni, summa pro maiestate sacraret, vir solus cui cura fuit ne publica morum plaga cicatricem summa leviter cute clausam 15 duceret, et latebram tabentis vulneris alte inpressam penitusque putri de pure peresam iuncta superficies medico fallente foveret, sed studuit quo pars hominis generosior intus viveret atque animam letali peste piatam 20 nosset ab interno tutam servare veneno?
illa tyrannorum fuerat medicina, videre quis status ante oculos praesentibus ac perituris competeret rebus, nec curam adhibere futuris.
heu, male de populo meriti, male patribus ipsis 25 blanditi, quos praecipites in Tartara mergi cum Iove siverunt multa et cum plebe deorum!

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

I USED to think that Rome, which was sick with her pagan errors, had by now quite rid herself of the dangers of her old disease and that no ill remained behind, now that the emperor's healing measures had assuaged in the seat of power her grievous pains.^a But since the plague has broken out anew and seeks to trouble the well-being of the race of Romulus, we must beg a remedy of our father, that he let not Rome sink again into her old filthy torpor nor suffer her great men's gowns to be stained with smoke and blood. Did the illustrious father of his country and ruler of the world achieve nothing, then, when he forbade old error to believe in shapes of gods that went about in the murky air, or to consecrate in place of the supreme majesty the elements which are the handiwork of the Father who created all? He was the one man whose care it was that, while the wound in the nation's character showed outwardly a scar lightly healed on the skin, the union of the surface should not, because of the surgeon's dishonesty, foster in secret a deep-seated wasting sore, all eaten away with putrefaction; but sought diligently to make man's nobler part within him live and know how to keep the soul that was cleansed of the deadly plague safe from internal poison. The treatment the usurpers applied before had been to see what order of affairs would meet the passing situation of the moment, and to take no trouble for the future. Alas, ill did they serve the nation, ill complaisance did they show to the senators themselves, when they let them plunge headlong into hell in company with Jupiter and the great mob

^a Pagan worship was forbidden under Theodosius I.

PRUDENTIUS

ast hic imperium protendit latius aevo posteriore suis cupiens sancire salutem.
 nimirum pulchre quidam doctissimus " esset 30 publica res," inquit, " tunc fortunata satis, si vel reges saperent vel regnarent sapientes." estne ille e numero paucorum qui diadema sortiti aetheriae coluerunt dogma sophiae?
 contigit ecce hominum generi gentique togatae 35 dux sapiens. felix nostrae res publica Romae iustitia regnante viget. parete magistro sceptris gubernanti. monet ut deterrimus error utque superstitio veterum procul absit avorum, nec putet esse deum, nisi qui super omnia summus 40
 emineat magnique immensa creaverit orbis.
 num melius Saturnus avos rexisse Latinos creditur, edictis qui talibus informavit agrestes animos et barbara corda virorum?
 "sum deus. advenio fugiens. praebete latebras, 45 occultate senem nati feritate tyranni deiectum solio. placet hic fugitivus et exul ut lateam, genti atque loco Latium dabo nomen.
 vitibus incurvum, si qua est ea cura, putandis procudam chalybem, necnon et moenia vestri 50

^a Under Christian emperors before Theodosius paganism had been at least tolerated; indeed the emperor, though himself a Christian, was, as Pontifex Maximus, the official head of the old state religion. Gratian (in 375) was the first emperor who refused to hold this office. The senate had been the stronghold of paganism. Cambridge Medieval History, I, 114.

^b Plato, Republic V, 473d.

^c According to the legend (as in Virgil, Aeneid VIII, 319 ff.) Saturn, on being expelled from heaven by his son Jupiter, took refuge in Latium, where he introduced the elements of civilisation. There was also a tradition of a

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

of their gods!^a But this emperor has extended the fame of his reign further in time to come by seeking to establish his people's well-being. To be sure a learned man finely says, "The Commonwealth would then be blest enough, if either kings were wise or wise men kings."^b Is not he of whom I speak among the few who, having received the diadem, devoted themselves to the teachings of heavenly wisdom? In him the race of men and the people who wear the toga have found a wise leader; Rome's commonwealth in our day thrives in blessedness because righteousness is on the throne. Obey ye a teacher who wields the sceptre; he gives warning that the wicked error and superstition of our forefathers of old be put away and not suppose there is a god except Him who stands out supreme over all things and created the infinitude of the great world.

Is Saturn thought to have ruled our Latin forebears better, he who shaped the rude minds and uncivilised hearts of men with proclamations such as these? ^c—"I am a god. I come to you an outcast; give me a hiding-place. Conceal an old god driven from his throne by a savage, usurping ^d son. It is my pleasure to hide me here, a fugitive and exile, and to race and country I shall give the name of Latin. To prune your vines, if you are interested in that, I shall beat out a curved tool of iron, and I shall town called Saturnia (Aeneid VIII, 355-8). At line 48 Prudentius alludes to the fanciful derivation of Latium from lateo. Later times looked back to the reign of Saturn in Latium as a golden age. Cf. lines 72-73; Aeneid VIII, 324-5; Tibullus I, 3, 35-48.

^d Cf. the frequent description of usurping emperors as "tyranni."

PRUDENTIUS

fluminis in ripa statuam Saturnia vobis.
 vos nemus adpositasque meo sub honore sacrantes (sum quianam Caelo genitus) celebrabitis aras." inde deos, quorum patria spectata sepulcra scimus, in aere hebetes informavere minores, 55 advena quos profugus gignens et equina libido intulit Italiae: Tuscis namque ille puellis primus adhinnivit simulato numine moechus.
 mox patre deterior silvosi habitator Olympi Iuppiter incesta spurcavit labe Lacaenas, 60 nunc bove subvectam rapiens ad crimen amatam, nunc tener ac pluma levior blandosque susurros in morem recinens suave immorien-^{tis} oloris, capta quibus volucrem virguncula ferret amorem, nunc foribus surdis, sera quas vel pessulus artis 65 firmarat cuneis, per tectum dives amator imbricibus ruptis undantis desuper auri infundens pluviam gremio excipientis amicae, armigero modo sordidulam curante rapinam compressu immundo miserum adficiens catamitum, 70 pellice iam puero magis indignante sorore.
 haec causa est et origo mali, quod saecula vetusto hospite regnante crudus stupor aurea finxit, quodque novo ingenio versutus Iuppiter astus multiplices variosque dolos texebat, ut illum, 75

^a The legend that Saturn on one occasion changed himself into a horse is referred to by Virgil, Georgics III, 92-4.

^b The Greek stories to which Prudentius refers are those of Europa, whom Zeus (Jupiter) in the form of a white bull carried on his back, swimming from Phoenicia to Crete; Leda, to whom he came as a swan; Danaë, who was kept by her father in a brazen tower but was visited by Zeus in the form of a shower of gold; Ganymede, who was carried off by an eagle to be Jupiter's cup-bearer. The eagle is spoken establish for you on the bank of your river a city called Saturnia. As for you, you will consecrate a grove and an altar thereby in my honour (for I am the son of Heaven) and will worship there." So dull-witted posterity shaped gods in bronze of men whose tombs we know were sights to be seen in their country. The homeless stranger with his horse-lust^a begot them and brought them upon Italy, for he was the first fornicator that pretended divinity when he whinnied after the maids of Tuscany.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

Next Jupiter, who was worse than his father and lived on wooded Olympus, defiled the Laconian women with the stain of lust, at one time carrying off his loved one on a bull's back^b to commit his crime; again, gentle and lighter than down and chanting soft wooing notes like a swan's sweet death-song, to charm the girl and make her willing to submit to his winged love; or again, when doors were deaf and tight-wedged bar or bolt held them fast, the rich lover would break the tiles and through the roof pour streaming down a shower of gold for his mistress to catch it in her lap; or his armour-bearer managed the vile ravishing and he held the wretched Ganymede in his foul embrace, and his sister was angrier than ever at having now a boy as her rival. The cause and fountain-head of the evil is that raw stupidity imagined a golden age in the reign of the old stranger, and that with his unheard-of cleverness the wily Jupiter devised many a dexterous trick and form of guile, so that, when he chose to change his skin of as Jupiter's armour-bearer (e.g. Aeneid V, 255); or as the carrier of his thunder-bolts (Horace, Odes IV, 4, 1; Ovid, Metamorphoses XII, 560).

PRUDENTIUS

vertere cum vellet pellem faciemque, putarent esse bovem, praedari aquilam, concumbere cycnum, et nummos fieri et gremium penetrare puellae.
 nam quid rusticitas non crederet indomitum stulta virum, pecudes inter ritusque ferinos 80 dedere sueta animum diae rationis egenum?
 in quamcumque fidem nebulonis callida traxit nequitia, infelix facilem gens praebuit aurem.
 successit Iovis imperio corruptior aetas, quae docuit rigidos vitiis servire colonos. 85 expertes furandi homines hac inbuit arte Mercurius, Maia genitus; nunc magnus habetur ille deus, cuius dedit experientia fures.
 necnon Thessalicae doctissimus ille magiae traditur extinctas sumptae moderamine virgae 90 in lucem revocasse animas, Cocytia leti iura resignasse sursum revolantibus umbris, ast alias damnasse neci penitusque latenti immersisse chao. facit hoc ad utrumque peritus ut fuerit geminoque armarit crimine vitam; 95 murmure nam magico tenues excire figuras atque sepulcrales scite incantare favillas, vita itidem spoliare alios ars noxia novit.
 artificem scelerum simplex mirata vetustas supra hominem coluit, simulans per nubila ferri 100 aligerisque leves pedibus transcurrere ventos.

^a Mercury (Hermes) was god of thieves. Among his other functions was that of conducting the souls of the dead into the lower world. The wand is his regular attribute; in Homer he uses it to produce or dispel sleep; but it also becomes his official emblem in his capacity as herald of the gods. Prudentius no doubt has in mind Virgil's lines (Aeneid IV, 242)

tum virgam rapit: hac animas ille evocat Orco pallentis, alias sub Tartara tristia mittit.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

and features, men thought he was a bull, or an eagle carrying off his prey, or a swan at his loves, and that he turned into money and so made his way to the maiden's bosom. For what would those foolish, rude, uncivilised folk not believe, who were wont to bestow all their attention on dealing with cattle and the ways of beasts, and whose minds were devoid of heavenly reason? No matter to what belief the wastrel's cunning profligacy drew them, the luckless race lent a ready ear.

After Jupiter's reign came an age more debased, which taught the hardy countrymen to be the slaves of sin. Men who knew naught of thieving were first instructed in this art by Mercury, son of Maia; and now he whose practised skill produced thieves is reckoned a great god! Expert too in Thessalian wizardry, as we are told, he used a wand that he took in his hands to call spirits of the dead back to the light, annulling the control of Cocytus over death by making the shades fly upwards, while others he condemned to death and plunged them deep in the nether darkness.^a This proves that he was skilled both ways and armed his life with two kinds of crime; for he had a guilty knowledge of how to raise unsubstantial spirits with muttered magic and cleverly bewitch the ashes in the tomb, and also how to rob other men of life; and the simple folk of old wondered at his contrivance of crime and honoured him as more than human, pretending that he came through the clouds and passed on winged feet through the light airs.

PRUDENTIUS

ecce deum in numero formatus et aeneus adstat Graius homo augustaque Numae praefulget in arce.
 strenuus exculti dominus quidam fuit agri hortorumque opibus memorabilis; hic tamen idem 105

scortator nimius multaque libidine suetus rusticolas vexare lupas interque salicta et densas saepes obscena cubilia inire; indomitum intendens animum semperque paratum ad facinus nunquam calidis dabat otia venis. 110 hic deus e patrio praenobilis Hellesponto venit ad usque Italos sacris cum turpibus hortos;
 sinum lactis et haec votorum liba quotannis accipit ac ruris servat vineta Sabini, turpiter adfixo pudeat quem visere ramo. 115

Herculeus mollis pueri famosus amore ardor et in transtris iactata efferbuit Argo, nec maris erubuit Nemea sub pelle fovere concubitus et Hylan pereuntem quaerere caelebs.
 nunc Saliis cantuque domus Pinaria templum 120
 collis Aventini convexa in sede frequentat.

Thebanus iuvenis superatis fit deus Indis, successu dum victor ovans lascivit et aurum captivae gentis revehit spoliisque superbus

^a Priapus, a spirit of fertility, figures as "guardian of gardens, part scarecrow, part warning to human thieves, part luck-bringer" (Rose, Handbook of Greek Mythology, p. 175).

^b An almost verbatim quotation from Virgil (Eclogues, 7, 33).

^c In the course of the voyage of the Argonauts Hylas went for water to a spring, and for his beauty was drawn under by the water nymphs. Hercules was left behind searching for him. The killing of the Nemean lion was one of the twelve labours of Hercules; he afterwards wore its skin. The

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

See there, standing amid the gods, a man of Greece, shaped in bronze too, and gleaming on Numa's majestic Capitol. There was an active owner of well-tilled land, a man who was notable for the wealth of his gardens; but he was an arrant whoremonger too, and with exceeding lust used to plague the poor country drabs and couch obscenely amid the willow-groves and thick-set bushes, inciting a passion untamed and ever ready for misdeeds, and giving his hot blood no rest. This man came as a famous god from his native Hellespont to the gardens of Italy ^a with his base rites, receiving "year by year a bowl of milk and these votive cakes," ^b and guarding the vineyards of the Sabine countryside, a shameful sight with the branch fastened to him.

The passion of Hercules, who was notorious for his love of a girlish boy, raged even on the thwarts while Argo tossed on the waters, and he blushed not to cover his wickedness under the wild beast's skin of Nemea and to search for Hylas, when he disappeared, as if he had lost a wife. And now the Pinarian house fills his temple with dancing, chanting priests, where it stands on the slope of the Aventine hill.^c

A young man of Thebes ^d becomes a god because he has conquered India and comes wantoning in triumph for his victory, bringing home the gold of the vanquished nation, and in the pride of his spoils story of the establishment of his worship at Rome is told by Virgil (Aeneid VIII, 184-275) and by Livy (I, 7). Tradition said that the families of the Potitii and Pinarii were placed in charge of it.

^d Bacchus (Dionysus, Bromius, Liber). See Rose, pp. 149 ff.

PRUDENTIUS

diffluit in luxum cum semiviro comitatu 125
 atque avidus vini multo se proluit haustu, gemmantis paterae spumis mustoque Falerno perfundens biugum rorantia terga ferarum.
 his nunc pro meritis Baccho caper omnibus aris caeditur et virides discindunt ore chelydros 130 qui Bromium placare volunt, quod et ebria iam tunc
 ante oculos regis satyrorum insania fecit, et fecisse reor stimulis furialibus ipsas maenadas inflammante mero in scelus omne rotatas.
 hoc circumsaltante choro temulentus adulter 135 invenit expositum secreti in litoris acta corporis egregii scortum, quod perfidus illic liquerat incesto iuvenis satiatus amore.
 hanc iubet adsumptam fervens post vina Neaeram secum in deliciis fluitantis stare triumpho, 140 regalemque decus capitis gestare coronam.
 mox Ariadnaeus stellis caelestibus ignis additur: hoc pretium noctis persolvit honore Liber, ut aetherium meretrix inluminet axem.
 tantum posse omnes illo sub tempore reges 145 indocilis fatui ducebat ineptia vulgi, ut transire suis cum sordibus induperator posset in aeternum caeli super ardua regnum.
 regia tunc omnis vim maiestatis et omnis, parva licet, caeli imperium retinere potestas 150 credita: tunc etiam ducibus parvoque sacello inperitus honos, quem dum metus aut amor aut spes
 adcumulant, longum miseris processit in aevum

^a Ariadne, deserted on the isle of Naxos by Theseus.

^b As the constellation Corona.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

abandoning himself to indulgence in company with his emasculate following, in his lust for wine soaking himself with many a draught and with the Falernian juice that foams from his jewelled cup besprinkling the dripping backs of the wild beasts that draw his chariot. In recognition of these merits a goat is now sacrificed to Bacchus on every altar, and they that would propitiate Bromius tear green snakes with their mouths, as even at that time the mad-drunk satyrs did before their king's eyes and, I dare say, the maenads did too in their frenzied excitement, when the wine set them afire and whirled them into every sort of sin. With this company dancing around him the tipsy adulterer finds abandoned on the sands of a lonely shore a mistress passing fair,^a whom a faithless young lover had deserted there when he tired of his unclean passion. Heated with drink, he takes up this lady-love and bids her stand with him amid his voluptuous, drunken procession and wear a royal crown to grace her head. And next Ariadne's fire is added to the stars in the sky; ^b the price that Liber pays for her favour is that his mistress shall have the honour of lighting up the heavens.

With such power in those days did the ignorant, silly, stupid rabble accredit any king, that a ruler could pass with all his uncleanness to an endless kingdom in the heights of heaven. At that time men believed that kingly power, however small, possessed the strength of all majesty and the government of all the heaven, and leaders had honour paid to them with incense and a little shrine. Fear or love or hope kept adding to it, and the inherited tradition went marching on among wretched men to distant

PRUDENTIUS

mos patrius : coepit falsae pietatis imago ire per ignaros nebuloso errore nepotes ; 155 tum quia, quae vivis veneratio regibus ante contigerat, functis eadem iam munere lucis cessit et ad nigras altaria transtulit urnas.
 inde puellarum ludibria, pignera, partus, et furtivus amor iuvenum et deprensa iugalis 160 corruptela tori, quoniam regalibus aula fervere tunc vitiis solita est, nec perdita luxu divorum suboles sancti meminisse pudoris.

atque ut, Roma, tuos caelesti ex sede parentes, quis te semideam iactant auctoribus ortam, 165 praestringam breviter, Gradivum vel Cytheream, ille sacerdotem violat, contra illa marito subcumbit Phrygio. coitus fuit inpar utrique :
 nec terrestre deam decuit mortalis obire coniugium, nec caelicolam descendere ephebum 170 virginis ad vitium furtivoque igne calere.
 sed Venus augusto de sanguine femina vili privatoque viro vetitum per dedecus haesit ; et, si Rhea sacram lascivi Martis amore lusa pudicitiam fluviali amisit in ulva, 175 crediderim generosae aliquem stirpis, sed eundem moribus infamem, compressa virgine per vim se dixisse deum, ne stuprum numinis ullus obicere auderet turpi miseraeque puellae.
 haec Italos induxit avos vel fama vel error, 180
 Martia Romuleo celebrarent ut sacra campo,

^a Rhea Silvia, the mother of Romulus.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

ages, the false semblance of piety spreading through succeeding generations whose ignorant minds were clouded in a mist of error. And then too, the same reverence that had first fallen to living kings was paid to them also after they had passed from the light, and carried their worship over to their dark tombs. From all this came dishonouring of young women, pledgings of love, births of children, stealthy passion for young men, adulterers caught defiling the marriage-bed, because then courts used to be all afire with the misdeeds of princes, and the progeny of the deified abandoned themselves to indulgence and took no thought of pure modesty.

And now, Rome, to touch briefly on thy progenitors from heaven, in virtue of whom men boast that thou art half divine, Gradivus and the Lady of Cythera,—the one violates a priestess,^a the other for her part yields to a Phrygian mate.^b It was an unequal match for both, for it became not a goddess to submit to earthly wedlock with a mortal, nor a swain from heaven to come down to ravish a girl or to burn with a stealthy passion. But the truth is that Venus was a woman of noble blood who cleaved to a low, common man in a forbidden deed of shame; and if Rhea became the plaything of wanton Mars' love and lost her sacred modesty amid the sedge on a river-bank, I should think it was some man of high birth but disreputable character that forced the maid and said he was a god, so that none might dare to reproach the poor, defiled girl with the lewd act of a divinity. This legend or error it was that led our Italian ancestors to keep rites of Mars on the Field

^b Anchises, the father of Aeneas.

PRUDENTIUS

utque Palatinis Capitolia condita saxis signarent titulo proavi Iovis atque Pelasgae Palladis et Libyca Iunonem ex arce vocarent, cognatos de Marte deos, Veneris quoque nudum 185
 accirent proceres Erycino e vertice signum, utque deum mater Phrygia veheretur ad Ida, Bacchica de viridi peterentur ut orgia Naxo.
 facta est terrigenae domus unica maiestatis, et tot templa deum Romae quot in orbe sepulcra 190 heroum numerare licet; quos fabula manes nobilitat, noster populus veneratus adorat.
 hos habuere deos Ancus, Numitor, Numa, Tullus, talia Pergameas fugerunt numina flammis, sic Vesta est, sic Palladium, sic umbra penatum, 195
 talis et antiquum servavit terror asylum.
 ut semel obsedit gentilia pectora patrum vana superstitio, non interrupta cucurrit aetatum per mille gradus. tener horruit heres et coluit quidquid sibimet venerabile cani 200

^a I.e. the temple of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva (Pallas) on the Capitoline hill. (Tradition ascribed its foundation to the Tarquins.) The expression "Palatinis saxis" is strange in this connection, but Prudentius is thinking of early Rome and his thought may be coloured by his memory of Aeneid VIII, 337 ff., where, although Evander's city is situated on the Palatine, the Capitol and other parts seem to be treated as lying within its territory. Livy (I, 10, 5) gives a tradition that Romulus "marked out the boundaries" of a temple of Jupiter (Feretrius) on the Capitol.

^b Romulus, the "father" of Rome, being through Mars the grandson of Jupiter.

^c I.e. Carthage, which according to Aeneid I, 15, was Juno's favourite seat.

^d In Sicily.

^e Livy (XXIX, 10-11) tells how the black stone which represented the Mother of the Gods (Cybele, Magna Mater) was brought to Rome from Pessinus in Phrygia in 204 B.C.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

at Rome, to inscribe on the Capitol^a which they built on the rocks of their Palatine city, the names of their great-grandsire^b Jupiter and the Grecian Pallas, and bring Juno from her stronghold in Africa,^c deities of Mars' kin; and it made their leaders fetch the nude figure of Venus from the peak of Eryx,^d carry the mother of the gods from Phrygian Ida^e and import the wild revels of Bacchus from green Naxos.^f There came to be one single home for all earth-born divinities, and you may count as many temples of gods at Rome as tombs of heroes in all the world; to dead men glorified by legendary fame our nation gives reverence and worship. Such are they whom Ancus, Numitor, Numa, and Tullus reckoned as gods, such the divinities that fled from the flames of Troy. So it is that we have Vesta and the Palladium^g and our imaginary household gods, and it was fear of such that kept safe the Refuge^h of long ago. Once the vain superstition beset the fathers' pagan hearts, it ran unchecked through a thousand generations one after another. The young heir bowed shuddering before anything which his hoary ancestors had ^f The orgiastic ritual of Bacchus (Dionysus) reached Rome from South Italy and (according to Livy) Etruria. It was put down by decree of the senate dated 186 B.C., but was permitted within narrow limits. Prudentius must have had in mind Virgil's line "bacchatamque iugis Naxon viridemque Donusam" (Aeneid III, 125).

^g The "image of Athena" which was the talisman of Troy. Rome claimed to possess it (at the temple of Vesta). Cicero, Pro Scauro, 48, describes it as "quasi pignus nostrae salutis atque imperi." Cf. Servius on Aeneid II, 166.

^h Legend says that Romulus, in order to attract inhabitants to his new city, established a place of sanctuary for outlaws from other communities (Livy I, 8, 5).

PRUDENTIUS

monstrarant atavi; puerorum infāntia primo errorem cum lacte bibit, gustaverat inter vagitus de farre molae, saxa inlita ceris viderat unguentoque lares umescere nigros.
 formatum Fortunae habitum cum divite cornu 205 sacratumque domi lapidem consistere parvus spectarat matremque illic pallere precantem.
 mox umeris positus nutricis trivit et ipse inpressis silicem labris, puerilia vota fudit opesque sibi caeca de rupe poposcit, 210 persuasumque habuit, quod quis velit, inde petendum.
 numquam oculos animumque levans rationis ad arcem
 rettulit, insulsum tenuit sed credulus usum, privatos celebrans agnorum sanguine divos.
 iamque domo egrediens, ut publica festa diesque 215 et ludos stupuit celsa et Capitolia vidit laurigerosque deum templis adstare ministros ac Sacram resonare Viam mugitibus ante delubrum Romae (colitur nam sanguine et ipsa more deae, nomenque loci ceu numen habetur, 220 atque urbis Venerisque pari se culmine tollunt templa, simul geminis adolentur tura deabus), vera ratus quaecumque fiant auctore senatu,¹ contulit ad simulacra fidem dominosque putavit

¹ The 7th-century MS. and some others have quaecumque senatu auctore probantur (or probentur).

^a See note on Apoth. 457.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

designated as worshipful in their eyes. Children in their infancy drank in the error with their first milk; while still at the crying stage, they had tasted of the sacrificial meal, and had seen mere stones coated with wax ^a and the grimy gods of the house dripping with unguent. The little one had looked at a figure in the shape of Fortune, with her wealthy horn, standing in the house, a hallowed stone, and watched his mother pale-faced in prayer before it. Then, raised on his nurse's shoulder, he too pressed his lips to the flint and rubbed it with them, pouring out his childish petitions, asking for riches from a sightless stone, and convinced that all one's wishes must be sought from thence. Never did he raise eyes and heart and turn them towards the throne of wisdom, but clung with credulous faith to his witless tradition, worshipping gods of his own house with the blood of lambs. And then when he went abroad, and lost in wonder viewed the public festivals on national holy days with their games, and saw the lofty Capitol, the laurelled priests standing at the temples of their gods, and the Sacred Way resounding with the lowing of cattle before the shrine of Rome (for she too is worshipped with blood after the fashion of a goddess, the name of the place is reckoned as a divinity, the temples of the City and Venus rise to the same high top and incense is burned to the pair of goddesses together,)^b he would think that what is done by the senate's authority must be genuine, and so gave his faith to the images and believed that the figures standing in a row,^c which he shuddered

^b The temple of Venus and Rome, built by Hadrian, stood on the north side of the Sacra Via.

^c Many statues of deities stood in the area Capitolina.

PRUDENTIUS

aetheris, horrifico qui stant ex ordine vultu. 225 illic Alcides, spoliatis Gadibus hospes Arcadiae, fulvo aere riget, gemini quoque fratres corrupta de matre nothi, Ledeia proles nocturnique equites, celsae duo numina Romae, inpendent retinente veru, magnique triumphi 230 nuntia suffuso figunt vestigia plumbo.
 adsistunt etiam priscorum insignia regum, Tros, Italus, Ianusque bifrons, genitorque Sabinus, Saturnusque senex, maculoso et corpore Picus, coniugis epotum sparsus per membra venenum. 235 omnibus ante pedes posita est sua cuique vetusta arula. Iano etiam celebri de mense litatur auspiciis epulisque sacris, quas inveterato, heu miseri, sub honore agitant, et gaudia ducunt festa Kalendarum. sic observatio crevit 240 ex atavis quondam male coepta, deinde secutis tradita temporibus serisque nepotibus aucta.
 traxerunt longam corda inconsulta catenam, mosque tenebrosus vitiosa in saecula fluxit.
 hunc morem veterum docili iam aetate secuta 245 posteritas mense atque adytis et flamine et aris Augustum coluit, vitulo placavit et agno, strata ad pulvinar iacuit, responsa poposcit.

^a Hercules, who was entertained by the Arcadian Evander at his town on the site of Rome (Aeneid VIII, 185 ff.).

^b Castor and Pollux, who were said to have helped the Romans at the battle of Lake Regillus and brought news of the victory. Cicero (De Natura Deorum II, 6) recounts a story that Publius Vatinius, on his way to Rome by night in 168 B.C., was told by "two young men on white horses" that king Perses of Macedonia had been taken that day.

^c Cf. Aeneid VII, 177-191. Tros figures in the great temple which Virgil imagines at the beginning of Georgics III.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

to look at, were, the lords of the heavens. There stands Alcides,^a all stiff in tawny bronze, he who was Arcadia's guest after spoiling Gades; the twin brethren too, bastard sons of a seduced mother, Leda's progeny, those night-riders, the two protecting deities of lofty Rome,^b bend forward, held up by a spit, and fix in a sea of lead the feet that brought the news of great victory. By these stand also figures of old-time kings, Tros, Italus, Janus Facing-Both-Ways, father Sabinus, old Saturn, and Picus of the dappled body, his frame spotted from drinking his spouse's potion.^c Each of them has his own little old altar set before his feet; and to Janus offering is made in a month when crowds assemble and auspices are taken and there is a sacred feast, which, alas, men still keep in its long-established honour, carrying on the festal rejoicing of the Kalends.^d In such wise has the observance grown; starting in an evil hour long ago from our forefathers it was then handed on to the generations that followed and carried further by their remote descendants. Their unthinking hearts dragged a lengthening chain, and the blind custom spread down to depraved ages.

Following this custom of olden days, posterity in an age when it had become easy to learn the lesson did reverence to Augustus with a month named in his honour, and with shrine and priest and altar, and propitiated him with calf and lamb; it prostrated itself before his sacred couch and asked for oracles.

Picus was changed into a woodpecker by the enchantress Circe.

^a I.e. New Year's Day still has a festal character among Christians.

PRUDENTIUS

testantur tituli, produnt consulta senatus Caesareum Iovis ad speciem statuientia templum. 250 adiecere sacrum fieret quo Livia Iuno, non minus infamis thalami sortita cubile quam cum fraterno caluit Saturnia lecto.
 nondum maternam partu vacuaverat alvum conceptamque viri subolem paritura gerebat. 255 pronuba iam gravidæ fulcrum et geniale parantur;
 iam sponsus saliente utero nubentis amicos advocat, haud sterilem certus fore iam sibi pactam.
 vitricus antevenit tardum præfervidus ortum privigni nondum geniti; mox editur inter 260 Fescennina novo proles aliena marito.
 idque deum sortes, id Apollinis antra dederunt consilium: nunquam melius nam cedere taedas responsum est, quam cum prægnans nova nupta iugatur.
 hanc tibi, Roma, deam titulis et honore sacratam 265
 perpetuo Floras inter Veneresque creasti!
 nec mirum: quis enim sapiens dubitaverat illas mortali de stirpe satas vixisse, et easdem laude venustatis claras in amoribus usque ad famæ excidium formæ nituisse decore? 270 quid loquar Antinoum caelesti in sede locatum, illum delicias nunc divi principis, illum

^a See Taylor, The Divinity of the Roman Emperor, pp. 229–232. Divine honours for Livia, the widow of Augustus, were refused by her son Tiberius at her death (Tacitus, Annals V, 2), but established by Claudius (Suetonius, Claudius, 11). Earlier attribution was unofficial.

^b Bergman and other editors place no stop after gerebat, taking pronuba as its subject; this involves taking geniale as a substantive parallel with fulcrum. In a Roman marriage

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

Inscriptions bear witness to it, decrees of senate setting up a temple of Caesar in the fashion of Jupiter reveal it. They added a rite to make Livia Juno; ^a and indeed the marriage that fell to her lot was of no better repute than when Saturn's daughter lay afire in her brother's bed. Her womb was pregnant with a child unborn, she was carrying a babe conceived of a husband and still to be brought forth. Brideswoman ^b and marriage-bed are provided for a bride already with child; and the bridegroom calls his friends when the child in his bride's womb is already leaping and he is sure now that his betrothed will not be barren. The stepfather in his eagerness will not wait for his unborn stepson's slow appearance, and then another man's child is born to the new husband amid rude jests. And this was the counsel that the oracles of the gods, the caverns of Apollo, gave; for the answer was that marriage never turns out better than when the bride is with child at the union. ^c Of such a woman, O Rome, hast thou made thee a goddess and consecrated her with titles and constant worship along with thy Floras and thy Venuses. Nor is it strange, for what man of sense but knew that they too were of mortal stock and lived on earth and were renowned for their charms, and that the beauty of their figures made them famous in amours till it ruined their good name?

There is Antinous too, set in a heavenly home, he who was the darling of an emperor now deified and the bride was attended to the lectus genialis by a woman already married once and called pronuba.

^c For the facts see Tacitus, Annals I, 10, 4, and Dio, Roman History XLVIII, 44, 2.

PRUDENTIUS

purpureo in gremio spoliatum sorte virili, Hadrianique dei Ganymedem, non cyathos dis porgere sed medio recubantem cum Iove fulcro 275 nectaris ambrosii sacrum potare Lyaeum, cumque suo in templis vota exaudire marito?

ergo his auspiciis Traianus, Nerva, Severus et Titus et fortes gesserunt bella Neronēs, quos terrena viros inlustres gloria fecit 280 et virtus fragilis provexit in ardua famae, adscita e¹ terris sub religione iacentes!

quam pudet hoc illis persuasum talibus, ut se Romanasque acies censerent Martis amore posse regi, dum se Paphiae male blandus adulter 285

venditat Aeneadasque suos successibus auget!
 felices, si cuncta Deo sua prospera Christo principe disposita scissent, qui currere regna certis ducta modis Romanorumque triumphos² crescere et inpletis voluit se infundere saeculis! 290

sed caligantes animas et luce carentes in Iovis Augustique adytis templisque duarum Iunonum Martisque etiam Venerisque sacellis mactatas taetro leti inmersere barathro, supremum regimen crassis in partibus orbis 295 esse rati mersoque poli consistere fundo.

quidquid humus, quidquid pelagus mirabile gignunt,
 id duxere deos. colles, freta, flumina, flammas,
 haec sibi per varias formata elementa figuras constituere patres, hominumque vocabula mutis 300

¹ adscitae . . . iacentis Bergman and others.

² triumphis Bergman with a number of MSS. including that of the 7th century.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

in the imperial embrace was robbed of his manhood, the god Hadrian's Ganymede, not handing cups to the gods, but reclining with Jupiter on the middle couch and quaffing the sacred liquor of ambrosial nectar, and listening to prayers in the temples with his husband!

Such then were they under whose favour Trajan, Nerva, Severus, Titus, and the brave Neros waged their wars! Earthly glory made these men famous and mortal valour raised them to the heights of renown while they lay under the power of a superstition adopted from the earth. How shameful that such men as they should have been persuaded to believe that they themselves and the armies of Rome could be directed by the passion of Mars; that adulterer, for no good end, making himself agreeable to the Lady of Paphos and courting her favour by heaping victories on the seed of Aeneas, his descendants! Happy had they been had they known that all their successes were ordered by the governance of the God Christ, whose will it was that kingdoms should run their appointed courses and the triumphs of Rome grow from more to more, and that He should enter the world in the fulness of time. But they made sacrifice of their darkened, blinded souls in the sanctuaries of Jupiter and Augustus, the temples of the two Junos, the shrines of Mars and Venus, and plunged them into the foul abyss of death, supposing supreme power to reside in the gross parts of the world and to be established in the sunken depths of the universe.

Every marvel that earth or ocean produces they held a god. Hills, seas, rivers, fire, all these elements, shaped into diverse figures, our sires set up for themselves, and inscribed names of persons on dumb

PRUDENTIUS

scripserunt statuis, vel Neptunum vócitantes oceanum, vel Cyaneas cava flumina Nymphas, vel silvas Dryadas, vel devia rura Napaeas.
ipse ignis, nostrum factus qui servit ad usum, Vulcanus perhibetur et in virtute superna 305
fingitur ac delubra, deus et nomine et ore adsimilatus, habet, necnon regnare caminis fertur et Aeoliae summus faber esse vel Aëtnae.
est qui conspicuis superos quaesivit in astris, ausus habere deum solem; cui tramite certo 310 condicio inposita est vigilem tolerare laborem visibus obiectum mortalibus, orbe rotundo praecipitem teretique globo per inane volantem et, quod nemo negat, mundo caeloque minorem.
area maior enim quam qui percurrit in illa, 315 et longe campi spatium diffusius in quo emicat ac volucris fervens rota volvitur axe.
quamvis nonnullis placeat terram brevior dicere circuitu quam sit pulcherrimus ille circulus, et flammam inmensi sideris ultra 320 telluris normam porrecto extendere gyro, numne etiam caeli minor et contractior orbis, cuius planitiem longo transmittere tractu circinus excurrens meta interiore laborat?
ille Deus verus, quo non est grandior ulla 325 materies, qui fine caret, qui praesidet omni naturae, qui cuncta simul concludit et inplet.
solem certa tenet regio, plaga certa coërcet, temporibus variis distinguitur: aut subit ortu

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

statues, calling, for instance, the ocean Neptune, rivers in their beds Cyanean Nymphs, woodlands Dryads, sequestered spots Napaeas. The very fire, a created thing in the service of our needs, is called Vulcan and fashioned with the attributes of divine power. Represented as a god in name and features, it has shrines and is said to rule over furnaces and to be High Chief Smith of Aeolia or Etna.^a Some have sought to find divinities in the shining stars and dared to count the sun a god; ^b yet he has laid on him the necessity of keeping up his sleepless toil before the eyes of men in a fixed path, hurrying on his circular orbit and flying through space in the form of a round ball and, as none gainsays, smaller in size than the universe and the heavens; for the running-ground is larger than the runner, and far wider than the chariot is the race-course on which the glowing wheel flashes as it turns on its flying axle. Though some hold that the earth is shorter in circumference than is that noble circle, and that the vast star's fires spread over a ring that is wider than the measure of the world, yet is the circle of the heavens also smaller and more confined, whose surface a compass, stretching out from its inner mark, for all its long reach is taxed to cross? He is the true God, than whom no material thing is greater, who is without limit, who governs all nature and at once bounds and fills all things. The sun is held in a fixed region, confined to a fixed quarter, and its course is marked off by differences of time: it rises

^a Cf. Aeneid VIII, 416-422.

^b The worship of Sol Invictus held a dominating position from the third century to the fall of paganism. See Bailey, Phases in the Religion of Ancient Rome, pp. 259-261.

PRUDENTIUS

- aut ruit occasu, latet aut sub nocte recurrens; 330 nec torquere facem potis est ad signa trionum orbe nec obliquo portas aquilonis adire nec solitum conversus iter revocare retrorsum. hic erit ergo deus, praescriptis lege sub una deditus officiis? libertas laxior ipsi 335 concessa est homini, formam cui flectere vitae atque voluntatis licitum est, seu tramite dextro scandere seu laevo malit decurrere campo, sumere seu requiem seu continuare laborem, seu parere Deo sive in contraria verti. 340 ista ministranti regimen solemne dierum haudquaquam soli datur a factore ptestas, sed famulus subiectus agit quodcumque necesse
 est.
 hoc sidus currum rapidasque agitare quadrigas commenti et radios capitis et verbera dextrae, 345 et frenos phalerasque et equorum pectora anhela aeris inaurati vel marmoris aut orichalci iusserunt nitido fulgere polita metallo.
 post trabeas et eburnam aquilam sellamque curulem
 cernuat ora senex barbatus et oscula figit 350 cruribus aenipedum, si fas est credere, equorum, inmotasque rotas et flecti nescia lora aut ornat redimita rosis aut ture vaporat.
 hoc tamen utcumque est tolerabile. quid, quod et ipsae
 dant tibi, Roma, deos inferni gurgitis umbrae? 355 Eumenidum domina Stygio caput exerit antro rapta ad tartarei thalamum Proserpina regis, et, si quando suos dignatur adire Quirites, placatur vaccae sterilis cervice resecta,

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

at morning, sinks at eventide, is hidden in the night on its returning path. It cannot divert its torch towards the constellation of the Wain, nor with its orbit sideways approach the gates of the north wind, nor turn about and reverse its wonted course. Shall this be a god, then, this sun which by unvarying law is assigned to appointed functions? A wider freedom has been granted even to man, for he may change the shape of his life and will, whether he choose to ascend by the path on the right or go down over the champaign on the left, to take rest or carry on his task, to obey God or turn the other way. This power is not given by its creator to the sun in its conduct of the routine of the days; it is as servant and subordinate that it does what it cannot choose but do. Such is the star which men have imagined driving his car and swift team, and have made the rays about his head, the whip in his hand, the bridles and trappings and panting breasts of his horses flash bright in shining figures of gilded bronze or marble or orichalc. After he has worn robes of state, held the ivory eagle, and sat on the curule chair, a bearded old man bends his face to earth and plants kisses (it is all but incredible!) on the legs of bronze-footed horses, and decks with wreaths of roses, or smokes with incense, wheels that cannot turn and reins that cannot bend.

This, however, we might contrive to bear. But even the shades in the gulf below give thee gods, O Rome. The mistress of the Furies, Proserpina, she who was carried off to be the bride of the king of hell, lifts her head from the Stygian cavern, and when she deigns to visit her Romans is propitiated by cutting the throat of a barren heifer. She is

PRUDENTIUS

et regnare simul caeloque Ereboque putatur, 360 nunc bigas frenare boves, nunc saeva sororum agmina vipereo superis inmittere flagro, nunc etiam volucres caprearum in terga sagittas spargere, terque suas eadem variare figuras.
 denique cum Luna est, sublustri splendet amictu; 365 cum succincta iacit calamos, Latonia virgo est; cum subnixa sedet solio, Plutonia coniunx imperitat Furiis et dictat iura Megaerae.
 si verum quaeris, Triviae sub nomine daemon tartareus colitur, qui te modo raptat ad aethram 370 sidereoque deum venerandum suadet in astro, per silvas modo mortiferi discurrere mundi erroresque sequi subigit nemorumque putare esse deam, quae corda hominum pavitantia figat quaeque feras perimat letali vulnere mentes, 375 depressos modo subter humum formidine sensus obruit, implorent ut numina lucis egena seque potestati committant noctis opertae.
 respice terrifici scelerata sacraria Ditis, cui cadit infausta fusus gladiator harena, 380
 heu, male lustratae Phlegethontia victima Romae!
 nam quid vesani sibi vult ars inopia ludi?
 quid mortes iuvenum? quid sanguine pasta voluptas?
 quid pulvis caveae semper funebris, et illa amphitheatralis spectacula tristia pompae? 385 nempe Charon iugulis miserorum se duce dignas

^a Cf. Aeneid VI, 243-251.

^b Proserpina was confused with Hecate (Trivia), who was also identified with Luna and Diana (Latonia virgo).

^c Herself one of the Furies.

^d The exhibition began with a procession of the gladiators through the arena.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

supposed to reign both in heaven and in hell,^a now to drive a pair of oxen, again with a whip of snakes to let loose the cruel columns of her sisters on the world above, and again to shower flying arrows on the backs of wild goats, thrice changing her form yet still the same.^b And when she is the moon-goddess she shines in a shimmering mantle; when she girds herself up to shoot her arrows she is Latona's maiden daughter; when she sits supported on her throne she is Pluto's spouse, ruling over the Furies and issuing commands to Megaera.^c If you seek the truth, it is a devil from hell that is worshipped under the name of Trivia, one that now carries you off to the skies and tells you there is a god to be worshipped in the form of a star in the heavens, again compels you to run about and about on the mazy forest-paths of the deadly world and to think there is a goddess of the woodlands who pierces men's trembling hearts and with a mortal wound slays their wild spirits, and again plunges your mind beneath the ground and overwhelms it with fear, to make it pray to spirits of darkness and commit itself to the power of black night.

Look at the crime-stained offerings to frightful Dis, to whom is sacrificed the gladiator laid low on the ill-starred arena, a victim offered to Phlegethon in misconceived expiation for Rome. For what means that senseless show with its exhibition of sinful skill, the killing of young men, the pleasure fed on blood, the deathly dust that ever enshrouds the spectators, the grim sight of the parade in the amphitheatre? ^d Why, Charon by the murder of these poor wretches receives offerings that pay for accipit inferias placatus crimine sacro.

PRUDENTIUS

 hae sunt deliciae Iovis infernalis, in istis arbiter obscuri placidus requiescit Avernī.
 nonne pudet regem populum sceptrisque poten-tem 390

talia pro patriae censere litanda salute, religionis opem subternis poscere ab antris?
 evocat, heu, poenis tenebrosa ex sede ministrum interitus, speciosa hominum cui funera donet.
 incassum arguere iam Taurica sacra solemus: 395 funditur humanus Latiari in munere sanguis, consessusque ille spectantum solvit ad aram Plutonis fera vota sui. quid sanctius ara quae bibit egestum per mystica telâ cruorem?
 anne fides dubia est tibi sub caligine caeca 400
 esse deum, quem tu tacitis rimeris in umbris?
 ecce, deos manes cur infitiaris haberi?
 ipsa patrum monumenta probant: DIS MANIBUS illic marmora secta lego, quacumque Latina vetustos custodit cineres densisque Salaria bustis. 405 dic, quibus hunc scribis titulum, nisi quod trucid Orci

imperium verae ceu maiestatis adoras?
 en quibus implicita squalebat regia summi imperii tractis maiorum ab origine sacris, cum princeps gemini bis victor caede tyranni 410
 pulchra triumphali respexit moenia vultu.

^a I.e. for taking the souls of the dead across the Styx.

^b Pluto (Dis).

^c Greek mythology tells of human sacrifice to Artemis in the land of the Tauri (in the Crimea).

^d On this matter see Bailey, op. cit., pp. 101-102.

^e Theodosius had defeated first Maximus and then Eugenius with his Frankish general Arbogast (Gibbon, chapter XXVII).

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

his services as guide,^a and is propitiated by a crime in the name of religion. Such are the delights of the Jupiter of the dead,^b such the acts in which the ruler of dark Avernus finds content and refreshment. Is it not shameful that a strong imperial nation thinks it needful to offer such sacrifices for its country's welfare, and seeks the help of religion from the vaults of hell? With blood, alas, it calls up the minister of death from his dark abode to present him with a splendid offering of dead men. Vain is now our wonted condemnation of the Tauric rites^c: human blood is shed at the Latin god's festival and the assembled onlookers there pay savage offerings at the altar of their own Pluto. What more holy than an altar which drinks blood drawn by ritual weapons? Do you waver in your belief that there exists, in the blind darkness below, the god for whom you grope amid the silent shades? See there! Why do you deny that the spirits of the dead are counted divine, when your fathers' very monuments prove it? I read there marble slabs inscribed "To the divine spirit of the dead," wherever the Latin or the Salarian road guards the old ashes in their thickly planted tombs.^d Tell me, to whom do you carve this inscription, but that you revere the throne of grim Orcus as though it were the seat of real majesty?

Such are the rites, drawn from the early days of our ancestors, which entangled and defiled the imperial abode of supreme power, when an emperor who had twice been victorious and slain two usurpers,^e turned his eyes in triumph on her noble battlements.

His suppression of pagan worships is referred to in lines 496 ff.

PRUDENTIUS

nubibus obsessam nigrantibus aspiciit urbem noctis obumbratae caligine; turbidus aër arcebat liquidum septena ex arce serenum, ingemuit miserans et sic ait: “ exue tristes, 415 fida parens, habitus! equidem praedivite cultu inlustrata cluis spoliisque insigne superbiş attollis caput et multo circumfluis auro;
sed nebulis propter volitantibus obsitus akti verticis horret apex, ipsas quoque livida gemmas 420 lux hebetat spissusque dies, et fumus ob ora subfusus rutilum frontis diadema retundit.
obscuras video tibi circumferrier umbras caeruleasque animas atque idola nigra volare.
censeo sublimem tollas super aëra vultum 425
sub pedibusque tuis nimbose elementa relinquo.
omne quod ex mundo est tibi subiacet; hoc Deus ipse
constituit, cuius nutu dominaris et orbi imperitas et cuncta potens mortalia calcas.
non decet ut submissa oculos regina caducum 430 contemplere solum maiestatemque requiras circa humiles rerum partes, quibus ipsa superstas.
non patiar veteres teneas ut me duce nugas, ut cariosorum venereris monstra deorum.
si lapis est, senio dissolvitur aut crepat ictu 435 percussus tenui; mollis si brattea gypsum texerat, infido rarescit glutine sensim;
si formam statuæ lamnis commisit aënis lima terens, aut in partem cava membra gravato pondere curvantur, scabra aut aerugo peresam 440 conficit effigiem crebroque foramine rumpit.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

He looked at a city beset with black clouds in the dark shadow of night, and the thick air shut out the clear, bright sky from the seven hills. In sorrow and pity he addressed her thus: "Put off thy gloomy habit, faithful mother. Renowned indeed art thou for the exceeding richness of thy garb; thou raisest a head ennobled by thy proud spoils and dost abound in wealth of gold. But thy majestic crest is covered and befouled with vapours that flit about it, the leaden light and dense air dull thy very jewels, and smoke pouring over thy visage deadens the gleam of the diadem on thy brows. I see murky shades moving around thee, dark spirits and black idols flitting about thee. I counsel thee, lift thy face on high above the air of earth and leave the stormy elements beneath thy feet. The whole world is subject to thee. This is the ordinance of God himself, by whose will it is that thou hast lordship and dost rule the world and in thy might dost plant thy foot on all things mortal. It becomes thee not as a queen to lower thine eyes and gaze on the perishable earth, looking about for majesty in the low parts of the creation, over which thou thyself dost stand superior. I shall not suffer thee, while I am thy leader, to hold to old idle notions, nor to worship decayed monstrosities of gods. If it is stone, it perishes with age or cracks under the stroke of a light blow; if it is plaster covered with sheets of pliant metal, the cement proves treacherous and gaps gradually appear; if the smoothing file has given the shape of a statue to plates of bronze, then either the hollow frame droops to one side with the pressure of the weight, or a scurfy rust eats into the image and wastes it, piercing it with many nec tibi terra deus, caeli nec sit deus astrum, nec deus oceanus, nec vis quae subter operta est, infernis triste ob meritum damnata tenebris.

PRUDENTIUS

sed nec virtutes hominum deus aut animarum 445 spirituumve vagae tenui sub imagine formae.
absit ut umbra deus tibi sit geniusve locusve, aut deus aërias volitans phantasma per auras.
sint haec barbaricis gentilia numina pagis, quos penes omne sacrum est, quidquid formido tremendum
suaserit; horridos quos prodigialia cogunt 451 credere monstra deos, quos sanguinolentus edendi mos iuvat, ut pinguis luco lanietur in alto victima visceribus multa inter vīna vorandis.
at te, quae domitis leges ac iura dedisti 455 gentibus, instituens, magnus qua tenditur orbis, armorum morumque feros mansuescere ritus, indignum ac miserum est in religione tenenda hoc sapere, inmanes populi de more ferino quod sapiunt nullaque rudes ratione sequuntur. 460 seu nos procinctus maneat, seu pace quietas dictemus leges, seu debellata duorum colla tyrannorum media calcemus in urbe, agnoscas, regina, libens mea signa necesse est,
in quibus effigies crucis aut gemmata refulget 465 aut longis solido ex auro praefertur in hastis.
hoc signo invictus transmissis Alpibus ultor servitium solvit miserabile Constantinus, cum te pestifera premeret Maxentius aula.

^a Such as Fides, Pietas, Concordia.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

a hole. Let not earth be thy god, nor a star in the sky, nor ocean, nor a power that is buried below, being condemned to infernal darkness for its ill deserts; but neither make gods of human virtues,^a nor unsubstantial phantoms that wander at large in the shape of souls or spirits. Far be it from thee to have a ghost for thy god, or a genius^b or a place, or an apparition that flits through the breezes in the air. Leave these heathen divinities to pagan barbarians; with them everything that fear has taught them to dread is held sacred; signs and marvels compel them to believe in frightful gods, and they find satisfaction in the bloody eating that is their custom, which makes them slaughter a fattened victim in a lofty grove to devour its flesh with floods of wine. But for thee, who hast appointed law and justice to the conquered nations, teaching savage ways of war and life, the wide world o'er, to become civilised, it is a sorry shame that in thy clinging to superstition thy thoughts should be those of barbarous, brutish peoples who adopt them in unreasoning ignorance. Whether we must still be ready for battle, or are to lay down laws in peace and quietness, or to trample under foot in the midst of Rome the heads of the two usurpers we have vanquished, thou must needs, O queen, be ready to acknowledge my standards, on which the figure of the cross leads the van, either gleaming in jewels or fashioned of solid gold on the long shafts. It was this standard that made Constantine invincible when he crossed the Alps as a liberator and undid a cruel bondage, when Maxentius was oppressing thee with his baleful

^b For the "genius" and its worship see Bailey, op. cit. (index).

PRUDENTIUS

lugebas longo damnatos carcere centum, 470 ut scis ipsa, patres. aut sponsus foedera pactae intercepta gemens diroque satellite rapta immersus tenebris dura inter vincla luebat;
 aut si nupta torum regis conscendere iussa coeperat impurum domini oblectare furorem, 475 morte maritalis dabat indignatio poenasplena puellarum patribus ergastula saevi principis; abducta genitor si virgine mussans tristius ingemuit, non ille inpune dolorem prodidit aut confessa nimis suspiria traxit.¹ 480 testis Christicolae ducis adventantis ad urbem Mulvius exceptum Tiberina in stagna tyrannum praecipitans, quamam victricia viderit arma maiestate regi, quod signum dextera vindex praetulerit, quali radiarint stemmate pila. 485 Christus purpureum gemmanti textus in auro signabat labarum, clipeorum insignia Christus scripserat, ardebat summis crux addita cristis.
 ipse senatorum meminit clarissimus ordo, qui tunc concreto processit crine catenis 490 squalens carcereis aut nexus conpede vasta, complexusque pedes victoris ad inclyta flendo procubuit vexilla iacens. tunc ille senatus militiae ultricis titulum Christique verendum

¹ After 480 some MSS. have the line vim libertatis nimiam (or nimiae) patriumque dolorem.

^a Constantine invaded Italy from Gaul and defeated Maxentius in 312 (Gibbon, chapter XIV). His biographer Eusebius was told by him that one afternoon (probably on his march from Gaul) he saw the cross in the sky and under it the words "By this conquer."

^b Maxentius was drowned while trying to escape back into Rome by way of this bridge after his defeat.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

court.^a Thou wert mourning for a hundred of thy senators, as thou thyself knowest, condemned to long imprisonment. If a man who was betrothed bemoaned the filching of his promised bride at the hands of some cursed minion, he would be plunged in darkness and make atonement in cruel bonds. Or if a bride had begun to please the tyrant's impure passion and had been commanded to go up into the royal bed, her husband's resentment would pay the penalty with death. The cruel emperor's prisons were full of the fathers of girls. If a sire murmured and complained too bitterly when his daughter was taken away, he was not suffered to betray his anger or heave too frank a sigh with impunity. The Mulvian bridge, by hurling the usurper into the waters of the Tiber when he set foot on it,^b bore witness to the divine power which it saw directing the victorious arms of the Christian general who was approaching Rome, the standard which the avenging hand bore at the head of his array, the emblem with which the javelins gleamed. The mark of Christ, wrought in jewelled gold, was on the purple labarum;^c Christ had drawn the bearings on the shields, and the cross blazed on the crests atop. The noble order of senators remembers. That day it came forth with matted hair, limbs loaded with prison chains, or bound with a rough fetter, and clasping the victor's feet lay prostrate in tears before the famous banners. That day those senators did reverence to the superscription which the avenging army bore, the wor-

^a The standard adopted by Constantine, bearing a monogram of the Greek letters XP (= CHR) representing the name of Christ.

PRUDENTIUS

nomen adoravit, quod conlucebat in armis. 495 ergo cave, egregium caput orbis, inania post haec prodigia et larvas stolido ¹ tibi fingere cultu, atque experta Dei virtutem spernere veri.
 deponas iam festa velim puerilia, ritus ridiculos tantoque indigna sacraria regno. 500 marmora tabenti respergine tincta lavate;
 o proceres: liceat statuas consistere puras, artificum magnorum opera: haec pulcherrima
 nostrae
 ornamenta fuant ² patriae, nec decolor usus in vitium versae monumenta coinquinet artis." 505 talibus edictis urbs informata refugit errores veteres et turbida ab ore vieto nubila discussit, iam nobilitate parata aeternas temptare vias Christumque vocante magnanimo ductore sequi et spem mittere in aevum. 510
 tunc primum senio docilis sua saecula Roma erubuit; pudet exacti iam temporis, odit praeteritos foedis cum religionibus annos.
 mox ubi, contiguos fossis muralibus agros sanguine iustorum innocuo maduisse recordans, 515 invidiosa videt tumulorum millia circum, tristis iudicii mage paenitet ac dicionis effrenis nimiaeque sacris pro turpibus irae.
 compensare cupit taeterrima vulnera laesae iustitiae sero obsequio veniaque petenda; 520 ne tanto imperio maneat pietate repulsa crimen saevitiae, monstrata piacula quaerit,

¹ prodigia esse deos solito Bergman with MSS. of both classes.
The 6th- and 7th-century MSS. are not here available.

² fiant Bergman with a number of MSS.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

shipful name of Christ which shone on its arms. Beware then after this, thou noble capital of the world, of fashioning thee unreal monstrosities and ghosts in senseless worship, and of scorning the power of the true God, now that thou hast proved it. I would have thee now lay aside thy childish festivals, thy absurd ceremonies, thy offerings which are unworthy of a realm so great. Wash ye the marbles that are bespattered and stained with putrid blood, ye nobles. Let your statues, the works of great artists, be allowed to rest clean; be these our country's fairest ornaments, and let no debased usage pollute the monuments of art and turn it into sin."

Taught by such proclamations, Rome withdrew from her long-standing errors and shook the murky clouds from her aged face, her nobles ready now to essay the everlasting ways, to follow Christ at the call of their great-hearted leader, and cast their hopes into eternity. Then for the first time, in her old age, did Rome become teachable and blush for her long history, ashamed of her past and hating the years gone by with their foul superstitions. Then, when she recalled how the lands that bordered on the ditches under her walls had been wet with the innocent blood of the righteous, and saw around her thousands of accusing tombs, she repented still more of her harsh judgment, her unbridled acts of power, her too great anger in the cause of a base religion. She sought to make up for the shocking wounds of injured righteousness by showing a late obedience and asking for pardon. Lest her great power lie under the charge of cruelty because she rejected goodness, she sought the prescribed atonements and inque fidem Christi pleno transfertur amore.

PRUDENTIUS

 laurea victoris Marii minus utilis urbi, cum traheret Numidam populo plaudente Ingurtham, 525
 nec tantum Arpinas consul tibi, Roma, medellae contulit extincto iusta inter vincla Cethego, quantum praecipuus nostro sub tempore princeps prospexit tribuitque boni. multos Catilinas ille domo pepulit, non saeva incendia tectis 530 aut sicas patribus, sed Tartara nigra animabus internoque hominum statui tormenta parantes.
 errabant hostes per templa, per atria passim, Romanumque forum et Capitolia celsa tenebant, qui coniuratas ipsa ad vitalia plebis 535 moliti insidias intus serpente veneno consuerant tacitis pestem miscere medullis.
 ergo triumphator latitante ex hoste togatus clara tropaea refert sine sanguine, remque Quirini
 adsuescit supero pollere in saecula regno. 540 denique nec metas statuit nec tempora ponit:
 imperium sine fine docet, ne Romula virtus
 iam sit anus, norit ne gloria parta senectam.
 exultare patres videas, pulcherrima mundi lumina conciliumque senum gestire Catonum 545 candidiore toga niveum pietatis amictum sumere et exuvias deponere pontificales.
 iamque ruit, paucis Tarpeia in rupe relictis, ad sincera virum penetralia Nazareorum

^a In his triumphal procession, 104 B.C.

^b Cicero, who was born at Arpinum, suppressed the conspiracy of Catiline, in which Cethegus was involved, in 63 B.C.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

with entire love passed over to faith in Christ. Less profitable to the city was the conquering Marius' laurel, when he led the Numidian Jugurtha as a captive amid the people's applause;^a nor healing so great did thy consul from Arpinum^b bring to thee, O Rome, when he put Cethegus to death in a well-deserved prison, as the blessing which a great emperor in our time planned and conferred on thee. Many a Catiline did he banish, that was not plotting fierce fires for thy houses nor daggers for thy senators, but black hell for men's souls and torments for the life within them. Foes were roving everywhere through temples and courts, holding possession of the Roman Forum and the lofty Capitol; they had conspired to contrive a treacherous attack on the very vitals of thy people, with whose marrows they were wont secretly to mingle bane, so that the poison spread stealthily within them. Therefore in peaceful triumph over his lurking foe he won famous, bloodless victories, and taught Quirinus' realm how to have power for everlasting in a supremacy that is from heaven. No bounds indeed did he set, no limits of time did he lay down. Unending sway he taught, so that the valour of Rome should never grow old nor the glory she had won know age.

The fathers were to be seen leaping for joy, the world's noblest ornaments, that assemblage of old Catos^c eager to put on, with whiter toga, the snowy robe of holiness, and cast off their priestly vestments. And now, leaving but a few on the Tarpeian rock, to the pure sanctuaries of the men of Nazareth and ^c M. Porcius Cato, the republican stalwart of Julius Caesar's time and great-grandson of the famous censor of 184 B.C., became a type of high principle and strict conduct.

PRUDENTIUS

atque ad apostolicos Evandria curiâ fontes, 550 Anniadum suboles et pignera clara Proborum. fertur enim ante alios generosus Anicius urbis inlustrasse caput: sic se Roma inclyta iactat.
 quin et Olybriaci generisque et nominis heres, adiectus fastis, palmata insignis abolla, 555 martyris ante fores Bruti submittere fascès ambit et Ausoniam Christo inclinare securem.
 non Paulinorum, non Bassorum dubitavit prompta fides dare se Christo stirpemque superbam gentis patriciae venturo attollere saeclo. 560
 iam quid plebicolas percurram carmine Gracchos, iure potestatis fultos et in arce senatus praecipuos, simulacra deum iussisse revelli cumque suis pariter lictoribus omnipotenti suppliciter Christo se consecrasse regendos? 565 sescentas numerare domos de sanguine prisco nobilium licet ad Christi signacula versas turpis ab idolii vasto emersisse profundo.
 si persona aliqua est aut si status urbis, in his est;
 si formam patriae facit excellentior ordo, 570 hi faciunt iuncta est quotiens sententia plebis atque unum sapiunt plures simul et potiores.
 respice ad inlustrem, lux est ubi publica, cellam:

^a I.e. an institution dating from the very earliest stage of Roman history. Cf. note on 226.

^b The names mentioned in these lines represent prominent noble families of the time. The Gracchi (561) are called plebicolae in allusion to the tribunes Tiberius and Gaius Gracchus of the 2nd century B.C.

^c The privilege of wearing the toga picta and tunica palmata had belonged in republican times to generals celebrating triumphs. The later phrase toga palmata (Martial VII, 2, 8, etc.), if it is not used to designate the costume as a whole, the baptismal waters of the apostles hastens Evander's ^a senate, the descendants of the family of Annius ^b and the illustrious children of the Probi. For it is said that a noble Anicius before all others shed lustre on the city's head (so famed Rome boasts herself), and the inheritor of the blood and name of Otybrius, though he was entered on the Register of Consuls and enjoyed the glory of the palm-figured robe, ^c was eager to lower Brutus' rods ^d before a martyr's doors and humble the Ausonian axe to Christ. The quick faith of a Paulinus and a Bassus did not hesitate to surrender to Christ and to lift up the proud stock of a patrician clan to meet the age that was to come. It were needless in my song to tell the tale of how the house of the Gracchi, those friends of the people, supported by the authority of office and holding distinguished rank in the high place of the senate, commanded the images of gods to be pulled down, and along with their lictors dedicated themselves humbly to the all-powerful Christ to be ruled henceforth by Him. We may count hundreds of families of old noble blood who turned to the sign of Christ and raised themselves out of the vast abyss of base idolatry. If there is any embodiment of the city and its being, it is in these. If it is the higher order of men that give their country its character, these do so, when the people's will unites with theirs and the majority and the better are of one mind. Look at the illustrious chamber where sit the nation's luminaries: would imply that the palm-embroidery appeared on the toga also. This was now the official dress of consuls.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

^a The fascēs of the consuls are here attributed to Brutus because he was the traditional founder of the republic, in which the two yearly consuls took the place of the king.

PRUDENTIUS

vix pauca invenies gentilibus obsita nugis ingenia, obtritotos aegre retinentia cultus, 575 et quibus exactas placeat servare tenebras splendentemque die medio non cernere solem.
 posthinc ad populum converte oculos. quota pars est
 quae Iovis infectam sanie non despuat aſam?
 omnis qui celsa scandit cenacula vulgus 580 quique terit silicem variis discursibus atram et quem panis alit gradibus dispensus ab altis, aut Vaticano tumulum sub monte frequentat, quo cinis ille latet genitoris amabilis obses, coetibus aut magnis Lateranas currit ad aedes, 585
 unde sacrum referat regali chrismate signum.
 et dubitamus adhuc Romam tibi, Christe, dicatam in leges transisse tuas omnique volentem cum populo et summis cum civibus ardua magni iam super astra poli terrenum extendere regnum? 590 nec moveor quod pars hominum rarissima clausos non aperit sub luce oculos et gressibus errat.
 quamlibet inlustres meritis et sanguine clari praemia virtutum titulis et honoribus aucti ardua rettulerint fastorumque arce potiti 595 annales proprio signarint nomine chartas, atque inter veteres cera numerentur et aere,

^a Centres at which the distribution was made were called "gradus." From the time of the emperor Aurelian (270-275) it was in the form of bread, not grain.

^b St. Peter.

^c This house, over the site of which stands the church of St. John Lateran, almost certainly belonged to the Plautius Lateranus who was condemned in 65 for conspiring against Nero. Constantine gave it to the Church in 313 and it was for some time the official residence of the popes (Platner-

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

hardly will you find a few minds still beset with pagan vanities and clinging feebly to their suppressed worship, who would keep the darkness that has been banished and refuse to see the noon-day brightness of the sun.

Now turn your eyes to the people. How small the fraction^a that does not loathe Jupiter's blood-stained altar! All the multitude that climb aloft to their garrets, that wear the black pavement with their various comings and goings, and are fed with the bread that is dispensed from the high steps,^a either crowd to the tomb at the foot of the Vatican hill, where lie in pledge the famed ashes of their father,^b so worthy of their love, or hasten in great companies to the house of Lateranus^c to get the holy sign of the King's anointing. And do we still hesitate to believe that Rome, O Christ, has devoted herself to Thee and placed herself under thy governance, and that with all her people and her greatest citizens she is now eagerly extending her earthly realm beyond the lofty stars of the great firmament? I am not disturbed because some men but here and there keep their eyes closed and will not open them in the light of day, so that they wander in their steps. Famed as they are for their services and noble in descent, though they have won high reward for their merits in promotion to dignity and office, though they have attained the supreme height of the Register and marked with their names the record of the years,^a and in wax or bronze figure among Ashby, Topographical Dictionary of Ancient Rome, p. 183). Evidently there was a church connected with it.

^a I.e. have been "consules ordinarii," so that the years are dated by their consulships.

PRUDENTIUS

attamen in paucis, iam deficiente caterva, nec persona sita est patriae nec curia constat;
 et quodcumque foveat studii privata voluntas 600 ac iam rara tenet, sed publica vota reclamant dissensu celebri trepidum damnantia murmur.
 si consulta patrum subsistere conscriptorum non aliter licitum prisco sub tempore, quam si ter centum sensisse senes legerentur in unum, 605 servemus leges patrias: infirma minoris vox cedat numeri parvaeque in parte silescat.

aspice quam pleno subsellia nostra senatu decernant infame Iovis pulvinar et omne idolium longe purgata ex urbe fugandum. 610 qua vocat egregii sententia principis, illuc libera cum pedibus tum corde frequentia transit.
 nec locus invidiae est, nullum vis aspera terret;
 ante oculos sic velle patet cunctique probatum, non iussum, sola capti ratione sequuntur. 615 denique pro meritis terrestribus aequa rependens munera sacricolis summos inpartit honores dux bonus et certare sinit cum laude suorum, nec pago implicitos per debita culmina mundi ire viros prohibet, quoniam caelestia numquam 620 terrenis solitum per iter gradientibus obstant.
 ipse magistratum tibi consulis, ipse tribunal contulit auratumque togae donavit amictum, cuius religio tibi displicet, o pereuntum

^a The argument is put in a curious way, but seems to be that a majority was required, and the Christians now have it. Augustus (prisco sub tempore) fixed the number of senators at 600. On the strength of the Christian and pagan parties in the senate at the time of Symmachus' petition, see Boissier, La Fin du Paganisme II, pp. 271-2; Dill, pp. 4, 29, 36-7.

^b The words refer to the procedure in taking a division in the senate ("discessio").

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

the men of old, yet it is not a small number, who have lost their following, who represent their country and constitute the senate. The attachment they cherish is maintained only by the will of individuals, and those now few and far between; the nation's wishes oppose them and with multitudinous dissent condemn their restless murmuring. If in olden days the decrees of the conscript fathers could only stand if it was on record that three hundred senators were agreed,^a let us keep to our fathers' laws: let the minority's feeble voice give way and fall silent in their little section.

See in how full a house our benches decide that Jupiter's infamous couch and all the worship of idols must be banished far from our purified city! To the side to which our noble emperor's motion calls, great numbers cross,^b as free in mind as in foot. No room is there for odium; none is intimidated by rude force; it is clear to see that such is their will; all are convinced by reason alone and follow their own judgment, not a command. And our good leader, requiting earthly services with equal rewards, gives to the worshippers of idols a share of the highest dignities, allows them to vie with the repute of their families, and forbids not to men who are still in the coils of paganism a career in the topmost worldly ranks when they have deserved them, since the things of heaven never prevent men of earth from passing along the accustomed ways. It is he that conferred on thee^c the office of consul and the judgment-seat, and gave thee the gold-wrought toga to wear, he whose religion does not win thy favour,

^c Symmachus.

PRUDENTIUS

adsertor divum, solus qui restituendos	625
Vulcani Martisque dolos Venerisque peroras Saturnique senis lapides Phoebique furores, Iliacae matris Megalesia, Bacchica Nysi, ^a Isidis amissum semper plangentis Osiridin mimica ridendaque suis sollemnia calvis,	630 et quascumque solent Capitolia clauderē larvas.
O linguam miro verborum fonte fluentem,
Romani decus eloquii, cui cedat et ipse - Tullius! has fundit dives facundia gemmas!
os dignum aeterno tinctum quod fulgeat auro	635
si mallet laudare Deum! cui sordida monstra praetulit et liquidam temeravit crimine vocem, haud aliter quam, si rastris quis tēpn̄t eburnis caenosum versare solum, limoque madentes excolere aureolis si forte ligonibus ulvas,	640 splendorem dentis nitidi scrobis inquinat atra, et pretiosa acies squalenti sordet in arvo.
non vereor ne me nimium confidere quisquam arguat ingenii que putet luctamen inire.
sum memor ipse mei, satis et mea frivola novi;	645
non ausim conferre pedem nec spicula tantae indocilis fandi coniecta lacessere linguae.
inlaesus maneat liber excellensque volumen obtineat partam dicendi fulmine famam.
sed liceat tectum servare a vulnere pectus	650

^a Primitive legend said that Kronos (Saturn), having been warned that one of his children would overthrow him, swallowed them as they were born, but in place of the youngest, Zeus (Jupiter), Rhea substituted a stone.

^b The Iudi Megalenses held in honour of the Magna Mater. Iliacae = Phrygian. Cf. 187.

^c Bacchus (Dionysus) is associated with a legendary mountain called Nysa.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

thou upholder of gods outworn, who alone dost plead for the restoration of those tricks of Vulcan and Mars and Venus, old Saturn's stones^a and Phoebus' prophetic frenzies, the Ilian Mother's Megalesian festival,^b the Bacchic rites of the Nysian god,^c the farcical ceremonies of Isis ever mourning for her lost Osiris,^d which even her own bald-heads must laugh at, and all the goblins which the Capitol by custom keeps within it.

How marvellous the stream of speech that flows from that tongue, the glory of Roman eloquence, surpassing even Tullius himself! Yet these are the jewels its rich fluency pours forth! Lips worthy to be bathed in the unfading sheen of gold, if only they would rather have praised God! But to Him they have preferred unclean monstrosities and polluted their clear voice with sin,—just as, if a man should set himself to work the miry soil with a rake of ivory, or till sodden, muddy ground with a golden fork, the black soil befouls the brightness of the shining prongs, the sharp tool that cost so much is defiled by the dirty earth.

I have no fear that any man may charge me with over-confidence and imagine that I am entering upon a contest of mental powers. I do not forget who I am, I know my paltry gifts well enough and would not venture to join battle, nor with my little skill in speech to challenge the darts which that great tongue shoots. Let his book rest unattacked, his surpassing work keep the fame it has earned by its flashing eloquence. But let me be allowed to cover my breast and save it from hurt, and with my

^a See Bailey, op. cit., pp. 186 ff. The priests and the inner circle of devotees of Isis had their heads shaven.

PRUDENTIUS

oppositaque volans iaculum depellere parma.
nam si nostra fides, saeclo iam tuta quieto, viribus infestis hostilique arte petita est, cur mihi fas non sit lateris sinuamine flexi ludere ventosas iactu pereunte sagittas?

655

sed iam tempus iter longi cohibere libelli, ne tractum sine fine ferat fastidia carmen.

A REPLY TO ADDRESS OF SYMMACHUS

shield to meet and turn aside the flying javelin. For if our faith, after reaching safety in an age of peace, is attacked with hostile forces and all an enemy's skill, why should it not be right for me to bend and turn and parry the shafts so that the shots are vain and ineffectual?

But my book is growing long; it is time now to halt its march, lest my song be drawn out endlessly and bring disgust.

PRINTED IN GREAT BRITAIN BY RICHARD CLAY AND COMPANY, LTD., BUNGAY, SUFFOLK.

THE LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY

VOLUMES ALREADY PUBLISHED

Latin Authors

- AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS. Translated by J. C. Rolfe. 3 Vols.
(Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- APULEIUS: THE GOLDEN ASS (METAMORPHOSES). W. Adlington (1566). Revised by S. Gaselee. (7th Imp.)
- ST. AUGUSTINE, CONFESSIONS OF. W. Watts (1631). 2 Vols.
(Vol. I. 6th Imp., Vol. II. 5th Imp.)
- ST. AUGUSTINE, SELECT LETTERS. J. H. Baxter.
- AUSONIUS. H. G. Evelyn White. 2 Vols. (Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
- BEDE. J. E. King. 2 Vols.
- BOETHIUS: TRACTS and DE CONSOLATIONE PHILOSOPHIAE.
Rev. H. F. Stewart and E. K. Rand. (4th Imp.)
- CAESAR: CIVIL WARS. A. G. Peskett. (4th Imp.)
- CAESAR: GALLIC WAR. H. J. Edwards. (9th Imp.)
- CATO AND VARRO: DE RE RUSTICA. H. B. Ash and W. D. Hooper. (2nd Imp.)
- CATULLUS. F. W. Cornish; TIBULLUS. J. B. Postgate; and PERVIGILUM VENERIS. J. W. Mackail. (11th Imp.)
- CELSUS: DE MEDICINA. W. G. Spencer. 3 Vols. (Vol. I.
3rd Imp. revised.)
- CICERO: BRUTUS, and ORATOR. G. L. Hendrickson and H. M. Hubbell. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO: DE FINIBUS. H. Rackham. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- CICERO: DE INVENTIONE, etc. H. M. Hubbell.
- CICERO: DE NATURA DEORUM and ACADEMICA. H. Rackham.
- CICERO: DE OFFICIIS. Walter Miller. (4th Imp.)
- CICERO: DE ORATORE. 2 Vols. E. W. Sutton and H. Rackham. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO: DE REPUBLICA and DE LEGIBUS. Clinton W. Keyes.
(3rd Imp.)
- CICERO: DE SENECTUTE, DE AMICITIA, DE DIVINATIONE.
W. A. Falconer. (5th Imp.)
- CICERO: IN CATILINAM, PRO FLACCO, PRO MURENA, PRO SULLA.
Louis E. Lord. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- CICERO: LETTERS TO ATTICUS. E. O. Winstedt. 3 Vols.
(Vol. I. 6th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp. and Vol. III. 3rd Imp.)
- CICERO: LETTERS TO HIS FRIENDS. W. Glynn Williams. 3
Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- CICERO: PHILIPPICS. W. C. A. Ker. (2nd Imp. revised.)

- CICERO : PRO ARCHIA, POST REDITUM, DE DOMO, DE HARUSPICUM RESPONSIS, PRO PLANCIO. N. H. Watts. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO : PRO CAECINA, PRO LEGE MANILIA, PRO CLUENTIO, PRO RABIRIO. H. Grose Hodge. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO : PRO MILONE, IN PISONEM, PRO SCAURO, PRO FONTEIO, PRO RABIRIO POSTUMO, PRO MARCELLO, PRO LIGARIO, PRO REGE DEIOTARO. N. H. Watts.
- CICERO : PRO QUINCTIO, PRO ROSCIO AMERINO, PRO ROSCIO COMOEDO, CONTRA RULLUM. J. H. Freese. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO : TUSCULAN DISPUTATIONS. J. E. King. (2nd Imp.)
- CICERO : VERRINE ORATIONS. L. H. G. Greenwood. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- CLAUDIAN. M. Platnauer. 2 Vols.
- COLUMELLA : DE RE RUSTICA. H. B. Ash. 3 Vols. Vol. I. (2nd Imp.)
- CURTIVS, Q. : HISTORY OF ALEXANDER. J. C. Rolfe. 2 Vols.
- FLORUS. E. S. Forster, and CORNELIUS NEPOS. J. C. Rolfe. (2nd Imp.)
- FRONTINUS : STRATAGEMS and AQUEDUCTS. C. E. Bennett and M. B. McElwain. (2nd Imp.)
- FRONTO : CORRESPONDENCE. C. R. Haines. 2 Vols.
- GELLIUS. J. C. Rolfe. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. and II. 2nd Imp.)
- HORACE : ODES and EPODES. C. E. Bennett. (13th Imp. revised.)
- HORACE : SATIRES, EPISTLES, ARS POETICA. H. R. Fairclough. (6th Imp. revised.)
- JEROME : SELECTED LETTERS. F. A. Wright.
- JUVENAL and PERSIUS. G. G. Ramsay. (6th Imp.)
- LIVY. B. O. Foster, F. G. Moore, Evan T. Sage, and A. C. Schlesinger. 14 Vols. I.-XII. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II.-V., VII., IX.-XII., 2nd Imp. revised.)
- LUCAN. J. D. Duff. (2nd Imp.)
- LUCRETIUS. W. H. D. Rouse. (6th Imp. revised.)
- MARTIAL. W. G. A. Ker. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp. revised.)
- MINOR LATIN POETS : from PUBLILIUS SYRUS to RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, including GRATIUS, CALPURNIUS SICULUS, NEMESIUS, AVIANUS, and others with "Aetna" and the "Phoenix." J. Wight Duff and Arnold M. Duff. (2nd Imp.)
- OVID : THE ART OF LOVE and OTHER POEMS. J. H. Mozley. (3rd Imp.)
- OVID : FASTI. Sir James G. Frazer.
- OVID : HEROIDES and AMORES. Grant Showerman. (4th Imp.)
- OVID : METAMORPHOSES. F. J. Miller. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 9th Imp., Vol. II. 7th Imp.)
- OVID : TRISTIA and EX PONTO. A. L. Wheeler. (2nd Imp.)
- PERSIUS. Cf. JUVENAL.
- PETRONIUS. M. Heseltine; SENECA : APOCOLOCYNTOSIS. W. H. D. Rouse. (7th Imp. revised.)
- PLAUTUS. Paul Nixon. 5 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 4th Imp., Vol. III. 3rd Imp.)

- PLINY : LETTERS. Melmoth's Translation revised by W. M. L. Hutchinson. 2 Vols. (5th Imp.)
- PLINY : NATURAL HISTORY. H. Rackham and W. H. S. Jones. 10 Vols. Vols. I.-V. H. Rackham. (Vols. I.-III. 2nd Imp.)
- PROPERTIUS. H. E. Butler. (5th Imp.)
- PRUDENTIUS. H. J. Thomson. 2 Vols. Vol. I.
- QUINTILIAN. H. E. Butler. 4 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- REMAINS OF OLD LATIN. E. H. Warmington. 4 Vols. Vol. I. (ENNIUS AND CAECILIUS.) Vol. II. (LIVIVS, NÆVIUS, PACUVIUS, ACCIUS.) Vol. III. (LUCILIUS and LAWS OF XII TABLES.) Vol. IV. (2nd Imp.) (ARCHAIC INSCRIPTIONS.)
- SALLUST. J. C. Rolfe. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- SCRIPTORES HISTORIAE AUGUSTAE. D. Magie. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SENECA : APOCOLOCYNTOSIS. Cf. PETRONIUS.
- SENECA : EPISTULÆ MORALES. R. M. Gummere. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II. and III. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SENECA : MORAL ESSAYS. J. W. Basore. 3 Vols. (Vol. II. 3rd Imp., Vol. III. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SENECA : TRAGEDIES. F. J. Miller. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- SIDONIUS : POEMS and LETTERS. W. B. Anderson. 2 Vols. Vol. I.
- SILIUS ITALICUS. J. D. Duff. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- STATIUS. J. H. Mozley. 2 Vols.
- SUETONIUS. J. C. Rolfe. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 6th Imp., Vol. II. 5th Imp. revised.)
- TACITUS : DIALOGUS. Sir Wm. Peterson. AGRICOLA and GERMANIA. Maurice Hutton. (6th Imp.)
- TACITUS : HISTORIES and ANNALS. C. H. Moore and J. Jackson. 4 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp.)
- TERENCE. John Sargeaunt. 2 Vols. (6th Imp.)
- TERTULLIAN : APOLOGIA and DE SPECTACULIS. T. R. Glover.
- MINUCIUS FELIX. G. H. Rendall.
- VALERIUS FLACCUS. J. H. Mozley. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- VARRO : DE LINGUA LATINA. R. G. Kent. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- VELLEIUS PATERCULUS and RES GESTÆ DIVI AUGUSTI. F. W. Shipley.
- VIRGIL. H. R. Fairclough. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 16th Imp., Vol. II. 12th Imp. revised.)
- VITRUVIUS : DE ARCHITECTURA. F. Granger. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)

Greek Authors

- ACHILLES TATIUS. S. Gaselee. (2nd Imp.)
- AENEAS TACTICUS, ASCLEPIODOTUS and ONASANDER. The Illinois Greek Club. (2nd Imp.)
- AESCHINES. C. D. Adams. (2nd Imp.)
- AESCHYLUS. H. Weir Smyth. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 5th Imp., Vol. II. 4th Imp.)
- ANDOCIDES, ANTIPHON. Cf. MINOR ATTIC ORATORS.
- ALCIPHRON, AELIAN, Philostratus: Letters. A. R. Benner and F. H. Fobes.
- APOLLODORUS. Sir James G. Frazer. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- APOLLONIUS RHODIUS. R. C. Seaton. (4th Imp.)
- THE APOSTOLIC FATHERS. Kirsopp Lake. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 6th Imp., Vol. II. 5th Imp.)
- APPIAN'S ROMAN HISTORY. Horace White. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II., III. and IV. 2nd Imp.)
- ARATUS. Cf. CALLIMACHUS.
- ARISTOPHANES. Benjamin Bickley Rogers. 3 Vols. Verse trans. (4th Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: ART OF RHETORIC. J. H. Freese. (3rd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: ATHENIAN CONSTITUTION, EUDEMIAN ETHICS, VICES AND VIRTUES. H. Rackham. (2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: GENERATION OF ANIMALS. A. L. Peck. (2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: METAPHYSICS. H. Tredennick. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: MINOR WORKS. W. S. Hett. On Colours, On Things Heard, On Physiognomies, On Plants, On Marvellous Things Heard, Mechanical Problems, On Indivisible Lines, On Position and Names of Winds.
- ARISTOTLE: NICOMACHEAN ETHICS. H. Rackham. (5th Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: OECONOMICA and MAGNA MORALIA. G. C. Armstrong; (with Metaphysics, Vol. II.). (2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: ON THE HEAVENS. W. K. C. Guthrie. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: ON THE SOUL, PARVA NATURALIA, ON BREATH. W. S. Hett. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: ORGANON. H. P. Cooke and H. Tredennick. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: PARTS OF ANIMALS. A. L. Peck; MOTION AND PROGRESSION OF ANIMALS. E. S. Forster. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: PHYSICS. Rev. P. Wicksteed and F. M. Cornford. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- ARISTOTLE: POETICS and LONGINUS. W. Hamilton Fyfe; DEMETRIUS ON STYLE. W. Rhys Roberts. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: POLITICS. H. Rackham. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- ARISTOTLE: PROBLEMS. W. S. Hett. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp. revised.)

- ARISTOTLE: RHETORICA AD ALEXANDRUM (with PROBLEMS, Vol. II.). H. Rackham.
- ARRIAN: HISTORY OF ALEXANDER and INDICA. Rev. E. Iliffe Robson. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- ATHENÆUS: DEIPNOSOPHISTAE. C. B. Gulick. 7 Vols. (Vols. I., V., and VI. 2nd Imp.)
- ST. BASIL: LETTERS. R. J. Deferrari. 4 Vols. (Vols. I., II. and IV. 2nd Imp.)
- CALLIMACHUS and LYCOPHRON. A. W. Mair; ARATUS. G. R. Mair. (2nd Imp.)
- CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA. Rev. G. W. Butterworth. (2nd Imp.)
- COLLUTHUS. Cf. OPIAN.
- DAPHNIS AND CHLOE. Thornley's Translation revised by J. M. Edmonds; and PARTHENIUS. S. Gaselee. (3rd Imp.)
- DEMOSTHENES I: OLYNTHIACS, PHILIPPICS and MINOR ORATIONS: I.-XVII. and XX. J. H. Vince.
- DEMOSTHENES II: DE CORONA and DE FALSA LEGATIONE. C. A. Vince and J. H. Vince. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- DEMOSTHENES III: MEIDIAS, ANDROTION, ARISTOCRATES, TIMOCRATES and ARISTOGEITON, I. and II. J. H. Vince.
- DEMOSTHENES IV-VI: PRIVATE ORATIONS and IN NEAERAM. A. T. Murray. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- DEMOSTHENES VII: FUNERAL SPEECH, EROTIC ESSAY, EXORDIA and LETTERS. N. W. and N. J. DeWitt.
- DIO CASSIUS: ROMAN HISTORY. E. Cary. 9 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp.)
- DIO CHRYSOSTOM. J. W. Cohoon and H. Lamar Crosby. 5 Vols. Vols. I.-IV. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp.)
- DIODORUS SICULUS. 12 Vols. Vols. I.-IV. C. H. Oldfather. Vol. IX. R. M. Geer. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- DIAGENES LAERTIUS. R. D. Hicks. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Imp.)
- DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS: ROMAN ANTIQUITIES. Spelman's translation revised by E. Cary. 7 Vols. Vols. I.-VI. (Vol. IV. 2nd Imp.)
- EPICTETUS. W. A. Oldfather. 2 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 2nd Imp.)
- EURIPIDES. A. S. Way. 4 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 6th Imp., Vols. III. and IV. 5th Imp.) Verse trans.
- EUSEBIUS: ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY. Kirsopp Lake and J. E. L. Oulton. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- GALEN: ON THE NATURAL FACULTIES. A. J. Brock. (3rd Imp.)
- THE GREEK ANTHOLOGY. W. R. Paton. 5 Vols. (Vols. I. and II. 4th Imp., Vols. III. and IV. 3rd Imp.)
- GREEK ELEGY AND IAMBUS with the ANACREONTEA. J. M. Edmonds. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- THE GREEK BUCOLIC POETS (THEOCRITUS, BION, MOSCHUS). J. M. Edmonds. (6th Imp. revised.)

- GREEK MATHEMATICAL WORKS. Ivor Thomas. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- HERODES. Cf. THEOPHRASTUS: CHARACTERS.
- HERODOTUS. A. D. Godley. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vols. II.-IV. 3rd Imp.)
- HESIOD and THE HOMERIC HYMNS. H. G. Evelyn White. (6th Imp. revised and enlarged.)
- HIPPOCRATES and the FRAGMENTS OF HERACLEUS. W. H. S. Jones and E. T. Withington. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II.-IV. 2nd Imp.)
- HOMER: ILIAD. A. T. Murray. 2 Vols. (6th Imp.)
- HOMER: ODYSSEY. A. T. Murray. 2 Vols. (7th Imp.)
- ISAEUS. E. W. Forster. (2nd Imp.)
- ISOCRATES. George Norlin. 3 Vols.
- ST. JOHN DAMASCENE: BARLAAM AND IOASAPH. Rev. G. R. Woodward and Harold Mattingly. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- JOSEPHUS. H. St. J. Thackeray and Ralph Marcus. 9 Vols. Vols. I.-VI. (Vol. V. 3rd Imp., Vol. VI. 2nd Imp.)
- JULIAN. Wilmer Cave Wright. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- LUCIAN. A. M. Harmon. 8 Vols. Vols. I.-V. (Vols. I-III. 3rd Imp.)
- LYCOPHRON. Cf. CALLIMACHUS.
- LYRA GRAECA. J. M. Edmonds. 3 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vol. II. 2nd Ed. revised and enlarged, Vol. III. 3rd Imp. revised.)
- LYSIAS. W. R. M. Lamb. (2nd Imp.)
- MANETHO. W. G. Waddell: PTOLEMY: TETRABIBLOS. F. E. Robbins. (2nd Imp.)
- MARCUS AURELIUS. C. R. Haines. (3rd Imp. revised.)
- MENANDER. F. G. Allinson. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- MINOR ATTIC ORATORS (ANTIPHON, ANDOCIDES, DEMADES, DEINARCHUS, HYPEREIDES). K. J. Maidment and J. O. Burtt. 2 Vols. Vol. I. K. J. Maidment.
- NONNOS. W. H. D. Rouse. 3 Vols. (Vol. III. 2nd Imp.)
- OPPIAN, COLLUTHUS, TRYPHIODORUS. A. W. Mair.
- PAPYRI. NON-LITERARY SELECTIONS. A. S. Hunt and C. C. Edgar. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.) LITERARY SELECTIONS. Vol. I. (Poetry). D. L. Page.
- PARTHENIUS. Cf. DAPHNIS AND CHLOE.
- PAUSANIAS: DESCRIPTION OF GREECE. W. H. S. Jones. 5 Vols. and Companion Vol. (Vols. I. and III. 2nd Imp.)
- PHILO. 10 Vols. Vols. I.-V.; F. H. Colson and Rev. G. H. Whitaker. Vols. VI.-IX.; F. H. Colson. (Vols. I., II., V., VI. and VII. 2nd Imp., Vol. IV. 3rd Imp.)
- PHILOSTRATUS: THE LIFE OF APOLLONIUS OF TYANA. F. C. Conybeare. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- PHILOSTRATUS: IMAGINES; CALLISTRATUS: DESCRIPTIONS. A. Fairbanks.
- PHILOSTRATUS and EUNAPIUS: LIVES OF THE SOPHISTS. Wilmer Cave Wright. (2nd Imp.)

- PINDAR. Sir J. E. Sandys. (7th Imp. revised.)
- PLATO : CHARMIDES, ALCIBIADES, HIPPARCHUS, THE LOVERS, THEAGES, MINOS and EPINOMIS. W. R. M. Lamb.
- PLATO : CRATYLUS, PARMENIDES, GREATER HIPPIAS, LESSER HIPPIAS. H. N. Fowler. (2nd Imp.)
- PLATO : EUTHYPHRO, APOLOGY, CRITO, PHAEDO, PHAEDRUS. H. N. Fowler. (9th Imp.)
- PLATO : LACHES, PROTAGORAS, MENO, EUTHYDEMUS. W. R. M. Lamb. (2nd Imp. revised.)
- PLATO : LAWS. Rev. R. G. Bury. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- PLATO : LYSIS, SYMPOSIUM, GORGIAS. W. R. M. Lamb. (4th Imp. revised.)
- PLATO : REPUBLIC. Paul Shorey. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 4th Imp., Vol. II. 3rd Imp.)
- PLATO : STATESMAN, PHILEBUS. H. N. Fowler; ION. W. R. M. Lamb. (3rd Imp.)
- PLATO : THEAETETUS and SOPHIST. H. N. Fowler. (3rd Imp.)
- PLATO : TIMAEUS, CRITIAS, CLITOPHO, MENEXENUS, EPISTULAE. Rev. R. G. Bury. (2nd Imp.)
- PLUTARCH : MORALIA. 14 Vols. Vols. I.-V. F. C. Babbitt; Vol. VI. W. C. Helmbold; Vol. X. H. N. Fowler. (Vols. I., III., and X. 2nd Imp.)
- PLUTARCH : THE PARALLEL LIVES. B. Perrin. 11 Vols. (Vols. I., II., and VII. 3rd Imp., Vols. III., IV., VI., and VIII.-XI. 2nd Imp.)
- POLYBIUS. W. R. Paton. 6 Vols.
- PROCOPIUS : HISTORY OF THE WARS. H. B. Dewing. 7 Vols. (Vol. I. 2nd Imp.)
- PTOLEMY : TETRABIBLOS. Cf. MANETHO.
- QUINTUS SMYRNAEUS. A. S. Way. Verse trans. (2nd Imp.)
- SEXTUS EMPIRICUS. Rev. R. G. Bury. 4 Vols. (Vol. III. 2nd Imp.)
- SOPHOCLES. F. Storr. 2 Vols. (Vol. I. 7th Imp., Vol. II. 5th Imp.) Verse trans.
- STRABO : GEOGRAPHY. Horace L. Jones. 8 Vols. (Vols. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II., V., VI., and VIII. 2nd Imp.)
- THEOPHRASTUS : CHARACTERS. J. M. Edmonds; HERODES, etc. A. D. Knox. (2nd Imp.)
- THEOPHRASTUS : ENQUIRY INTO PLANTS. Sir Arthur Hort., Bart. 2 Vols. (2nd Imp.)
- THUCYDIDES. C. F. Smith. 4 Vols. (Vol. I. 3rd Imp., Vols. II., III. and IV. 2nd Imp. revised.)
- TRYPHIODORUS. Cf. OPPIAN.
- XENOPHON : CYROPAEDIA. Walter Miller. 2 Vols. (3rd Imp.)
- XENOPHON : HELLENICA, ANABASIS, APOLOGY, and SYMPOSIUM. C. L. Brownson and O. J. Todd. 3 Vols. (3rd Imp.)
- XENOPHON : MEMORABILIA and OECONOMICUS. E. C. Marchant. (2nd Imp.)
- XENOPHON : SCRIPTA MINORA. E. C. Marchant. (2nd Imp.)

IN PREPARATION

Greek Authors

ARISTOTLE : DE MUNDO. W. K. C. Guthrie.
ARISTOTLE : HISTORY OF ANIMALS. A. L. Peck.
ARISTOTLE : METEOROLOGICA. H. P. Lee.

Latin Authors

ST. AUGUSTINE : CITY OF GOD. W. H. Semple.
[CICERO] : AD HERENNIIUM. H. Caplan.
CICERO : PRO SESTIO, IN VATINIUM, PRO CAELIO, DE PROVINCIS CONSULARIBUS, PRO BALBO. J. H. Freese and R. Gardner.

DESCRIPTIVE PROSPECTUS ON APPLICATION

London - - - - WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
Cambridge, Mass HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS